Washington, May 16.—The appeal of the state of Minnesota from the decision of Judge Sanborn of the United States circuit court, on the cases involving the validity of the Minnesota commodity and passenger rates, was filed in the supreme court of the United States by Attorney General Edward E. Young for the state. With the appeal Mr. Young filed a petition to have these cases advanced for argument soon after the beginning of the new term in October. Hale Halden, representing the railroads concerned, concurred in the petition for a hearing at the earliest possible date.

CLUB ASKS FOR THE REWARD

Claims to Have Found Saloons Doing Business on Sunday.

New York, May 16.—Mayor Gaynor a few days ago wrote to the pastor of a Brooklyn church: "I will give $10 for evidence of traffic in liquor on Sunday in any bar room."

Sunday, the Men's club of Grace Presbyterian church in Brooklyn set out to earn that $10. As a result of their detective work they reported that in two out of eighty-four saloons visited, liquor was being sold over the bar. Of the eighty-four saloons sixty-seven were doing business less openly.

For Violation of Lottery Law.

New York, May 16.—Four men are under arrest here charged by the department of justice with being agents of the Italian government lottery. They come under federal jurisdiction because they are alleged to have carried lottery tickets and lists between states. It is said many thousand Italians in this country are constant contributors to the Italian government lotteries.

For Breakfast Try "Sunkist" Oranges

SUNKIST ORANGES

Luscious Tree-Ripened Fruit

It is not sufficient to know that oranges are the most healthful of all fruits. It is quite as important to know the kind of oranges that are most healthful and most palatable. The very finest California oranges are now packed under the label "Sunkist." Please serve "Sunkist" oranges at breakfast tomorrow and learn the superiority of tree-ripened, seedless, fiberless oranges over the commonplace kind. Don't fail to save the wrappers.

There is so much "meat" and nourishment in "Sunkist" oranges and so little waste that, in addition to their extra fine flavor and goodness, they are really the most economical oranges to buy.

"Sunkist" Lemons Juiciest

Lemons differ as much as oranges. Pithy, thick-skinned lemons contain very little juice. You waste money when you buy them. Please ask for "Sunkist" Lemons and note how uniformly sound each one is, and what a small percentage is skin and fiber.

SUNKIST LEMONS

Get This Valuable Orange Spoon

Save 12 "Sunkist" orange (or lemon) wrappers and send them to us, with 12 cents to pay charges, packing, etc., and we will present you with a genuine Rogers Orange Spoon, of beautiful design and highest quality. Begin saving wrappers today. If you desire more than one, send 12 "Sunkist" wrappers and 12 cents for each additional spoon. In remitting, please send one-cent stamps when the amount is less than 24 cents; on amounts above 24 cents, we prefer money order, express order or bank draft. Don't send cash. We will be glad to send you complete list of valuable premiums. We honor both "Sunkist" and "Red Ball" wrappers for premiums. (38)

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, MAY 19 1911.

To seats in the United States senate some are appointed, some are elected and others come from Illinois.

Of course it is more excellent to be right than president, but friends of Woodrow Wilson can see no reason why a man shouldn't be both.

"It matters not how strait
the gate,
How charged with punishments
the scroll,
I am the captain of my fate
I am the master of my soul."

Many papers are criticising various legislatures that have been passing laws regulating the length of hatpins and scoffing at "mere man" for attempting to legislate regarding feminine customs. And who else will legislate if not mere man?

A Chicago daily informs us that "Senator Lorimer will today endeavor to solve the clearing-house difficulties of his bank, the La Salle Street National, by making formal application for membership in the Chicago Clearing House Association." Let us hope that the Senator will have less trouble securing membership with the Chicago Clearing House Association than he had securing membership in the United States Senate.

In the Senate of the state of Connecticut the other day the chaplain offered prayer for the press. It was such an unusual occurrence that the fact has been heralded widely. The chaplain prayed:

"Almighty and gracious God, who hast favored our land by causing knowledge to run to and fro, we beseech thee to strengthen our public press in all things that tend to the enlightenment and betterment of the people.

"Save our public journals from low standards touching morals and government. Deliver them from sensationalism, untruthfulness, malice dishonest political measures, personal attacks, and the parade of the details of crime and vice. Make them the instruments of good and the defenders of justice, mercy and truth. May they respect morality and honor religion, so that wisdom and knowledge may become the stability of our times. Amen."

And we can heartily say "Amen" to that petition but at the same time why not extend the prayer to individuals specially the last sentence.

If the farmers in the vicinity of every market town or shipping center in Minnesota would unite in an association like the "Producers' Market Association" of Dassel, the size of that portion of the proceeds of their crops, which now sticks to the middleman they would know would be reduced to a minimum. For the only middleman they would know would be their own salaried manager. whose interest it would be as much as their own, to secure for his employers the largest possible returns. The Manager of the Duluth organization, by the way, Mr. H. A. Hopkins, opens the season of 1911 by printing in the newspapers a full page of expert advice and directions about the cultivation, packing and shipping of the eighteen kinds of vegetables most profitably grown in the country of which Duluth is the most natural market.

The Supreme Court this week handed down a decision, containing 20,057 words, dissolving the Standard Oil Company. We presume that every country editor will now very wisely predict an advance in oils of various kinds. In our opinion this will have very little affect in as much asthey are given six months in which to make the dissolution and in this time they can surely figure out some way in which they could run as a large number of companies and yet have one head and pay tribute to the same crown. To us common mortals the difference will be so unperceptible that we would never know it if we did not read about it somewhere.

Here is something worth thinking of from last week's Bottineau Courant: "The point is that a village, town or city is classed as a live one or a dead one on a basis of the volume and nature of the advertising carried in the columns of its local paper or papers. A place that is populated by live wires will always be found to have good newspapers (and they can successful only if they are well patronized) and the merchants are busy telling the people what good things they have for them instead of sitting down and waiting for the people to explore the concerns and crannies of their places of business to find out for themselves. There are people who spend much money with catalogue houses who hold the opinion that some of the goods cannot be purchasedin their own town and this simply because the local merchant has neglected his advertising while the catalogue house did not. Something to sell plus advertising equals success."

BEING PRESENTED AT COURT.

The sorrows of the American Smart Set can be read between the lines in the dispatches telling of the many American women presented at the English court the past week.

While impecunious school teachers are having the time of their lives wrestling with repacious London cabmen over half crowns, the "worried" leaders of fashion are fluttering with heart throbs and vexations attendant on this supreme carnival of red tape.

A plain simple little gown needful to get by the court professors of flummery who regulate these doings, costs from $500 to $750. Then a girl really feels poverty stricken unless she has a $100 bouquet of costly orchids. You have to buy shoes of tradesmen who charge $25 because they shoe the queen and princesses, and the 24 button gloves cost $10.

The matter of expense of course does not worry our social higher ups a particle. The acrobatic steps with which they must prance across the hall, is what bothers those who have never taken a training in circus stunts.

You are required to make a dozen to 15 low and sweeping courtesies, pointed well over to the lee side of the drawing room, so as not to turn your back down on the floor without actually doing it.

One girl got so tangled up in her train a while ago that she rolled the length of the stairs like a bale of hay. Fear of a repetition of this incident no doubt caused the recent edict of the court against the hobble skirt at these ceremonies.

HUNNEWELL'S SPUNKY WOMAN MAYOR.

The City of Hunnewell, Kan., has a woman Mayor, Mrs. Wilson, and a break between the executive and legislative departments has resulted, likely to be fought out in the state courts.

Mrs. Wilson has called a meeting for next Monday night. The five men who compose the City council say they will ignore the call.

The male councilmen seem entirely too worried about the supremacy of the male sex. They need not feel that they occupy a position on the firing line, with the fate of the masculine world resting in the balance, contingent on their good defense.

If Mrs. Wilson can sweep the streets cleaner, can nail the lid closer on vice, can run the business of the city on a business rather than a political basis, the city council of Hunnewell will be of as little effect as was King Canute when he told the tides of the ocean to go way back and sit down.

The foxy thing would be to give Mrs. Wilson unlimited rope. If she fails because of the limitations placed upon her, she will lay the blame on the council.

We should advise that body to hold their meetings on Mrs. Wilson's front piazza if thereby they can demonstrate that a clear field has been left for her operations.

That they would in the end win out by thus bending for the moment to the feminine blast, will be forecasted from the action of the new chief of police, Mrs. Rose Osborn. She went to the store of a councilman, and there tore from his window a newspaper cartoon entitled "A British View of Woman Suffrage."

If these women could not bear the display of a cartoon on such a matter of public discussion as woman suffrage, they have no place in the rough and tumble of politics.

They might better run for office in the Daughters of the American Revolution, where a preliminary mauling might be received that would teach them to smile even if their plumage was ruffled.

FODDER CORN

An acre of ground properly planted to fodder corn may be made to yield from four to six tons of cured fodder. This fodder is nearly equal to tame hay in feeding value for cattle.

Hay seldom yields more than four tons per acre (two cuttings) and hay land that has been in hay for over two years commonly yields less than two tons per acre.

High land that has been in hay for over two years should be broken up and planted to corn for fodder this spring. If the season is dry (unfavorable for hay) the yield of fodder will probably be four or five times as much as the hay crop would be if the land were left in hay.

In 1910 twenty acres of fodder corn was grown on the Experiment farm and the yield, field cured, was five tons per acre. It is recommended as one of the most valuable crops that can be grown where there is apt to be a shortage of rough feed. During the past winter farmers have bought hay paying from twelve to eighteen dollars per ton. The cost of growing an acre of fodder corn including the rent of land is only $10.52 per acre. With a yield of four tons per acre the cost of fodder corn would be only $2.63 per ton, a very great difference between that and the price of hay when bought on the barket.

How To Grow Fodder Corn

The old hay field if not too low will provide the best field for fodder corn. An application of manure will increase the yield. The soil cannot be too rich for corn.

Plow medium to deep and disk and harrow till the soil is thoroughly pulverized.

Plant in rows 30 inches apart and about six inches apart in the row. The corn should be planted thickly in the row so that the stalks will be fine. When planted far apart in the row the stalks will be coarser and will not be eaten.

One half bushel of seed per acre in rows 30 inches apart gives the fodder corn a fine stalk and is about the right quantity to plant.

Plant from May 20th, to June 1st. The planting may be delayed till June 20th and sometimes it may pay to put in a crop even tho it cannot be done before the first of July, but the earlier planting is best.

The fodder corn crop is fast gaining favor in Northern Minnesota. Every farmer who gives it a fair trial becomes a grower of fodder corn and invariably a more prosperous farmer.

This spring the price of fodder corn seed is from $2.50 to 3.00 per bushel. When it is not handled on the local market it can be bought from any of the numerous seed houses advertising in the agricultural papers

It can best be ordered on short notice thru the local merchant and if not already provided should be ordered at once.

The variety used on the Experiment farm is Minnesota No. 13. Nearly any of the northern grown varities, either in dent or flint will give good results for fodder corn.

If you have not grown fodder corn give it a trial this season. It will give best results on land that has been cultivated.

State Experiment Farm,
Grand Rapids, Minn.

TORGERSON

Well we all know that the rain and snow we got last week was a fine thing for the grain and other crops.

Last Sunday occurred the death of Mrs. Nels Haugen who had a claim here. She had spent the winter with her son, Knute Haugen in Crookston and they came out here but three weeks ago. She had seemed in perfect health and her very sudden death comes as a great surprise. Funeral services were held Tuesday. She leaves a son and sister in Dakota to mourn her loss.

Well seeding is about all in and the farmers are looking for a big crop.

Land is now going fast since it opened for filing the fifteenth.

Mr. Jordan from south of Fergus Falls came out here and squatted on a claim. If he gets it, he will have one of the finest pieces of land on the Eleven Towns.

News comes here that Anton Aasen of Star had a narrow escape Friday while discing. He fell in front of the disc and had not the horses stopped instantly at his command would have been cut to pieces.

A party of farmers drove to Thief River Falls Sunday of this week.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS OF INQUIRY.

What Provision Has The State Made To Assist The Poor Victim Suffering With Tuberculosis, That has No Means.

For instance, I know a woman that is unmarried aged about thirty-seven years. She might be helped if she could go to a Sanantorium. But her parents have been dead quite a number of years. She has no home. As long as she was able she worked for her living. For several years she has not been able to do much, and people are shy of employing such that have lung trouble, the little that she was able to save went mostly into the pockets of the doctors. She has made application to the county for assistance, but changing places so often, no county seems to feel responsible to help her. Her relatives have ben aiding her, and would no doubt be willing to assist further, but their means don't allow them to send her to a sanatorium. What advice can one give to such an unfortunate person? To get a dose of chloroform and end the mise[illegible]

ANSWER

Dear Sir: The [illegible]stions in your letter of rece[illegible] [illegible] worth considering. As you say, at the present time there is no dependable source of money for the treatment of poor consumptives. The State Sanatorium takes in only early cases which constitute but a fraction of the total number; it charges the cost of board, and it is left to the discretion of county commissioners whether they shall pay this sum for their charges or leave to die and infect others in their homes or at the poor farm.

There is scarcely any treatment so far for advanced cases of tuberculosis. The City of Minneapolis has made a beginning in this direction and the Poor Board of St. Louis County, in adding a special annex to its almshouse. This Association had drafted and had put through the legislature at its last session a law (Chapter 347, Laws of 1909), authorizing Boards of County Commissioners to spend not more than twenty thousand dollars for establishment, and four-tenths of a mill for maintenance for special county tuberculosis hospitals, to take in all stages of the disease and all classes of persons, whether able to pay or no. It is to this law that we are looking mainly for results along the line you indicate. So far, however no such institution has been erected, but one county has appropriated the money necessary.

Very truly,
(Signed) C. EASTON,
Old Capitol, St. Paul, Minn.

Minnesota Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis.

NOTE: The new bill, supersedes the county hospital law. Support it.

Mr. C. Easton, Executive Secretary,
St. Paul, Minn.

January, 11th, 1911.

Dear Mr. Easton: A most distressing case of a young man who is in the last stages of consumption and has absolutely no place where to stay and no means whatever, has been brought to my notice today, and is there anywhere he could go or be sent until death relieves him?

Dr. G. says that he is too far advanced for Walker Sanatorium as he cannot last longer than spring and may die any time.

He was brought to one of the hotels yesterday (by neighbors who found him) from a farm where he has been sick and had been without fuel or food for two days with the mercury at forty below zero one night.

The worst part is that his own mother lives here and had left him out there and refuses to aid him in any way. They finally sent him to her house tonight, but a nurse tells me that his people wont care for him and say they can't bother with him.

I have never heard of a worse instance and wonder if there is any where he could go. He is a resident of the Township of N. and not of this city, so fear we cannot get aid from city, and the county is in a rather unsettled state now owing to recent division, and beside there seems no where to send a tuberculosis patient.

THE CARDS SHUFFLED AGAIN IN NICARAGUA.

Tempestuous Nicaragua will have had four presidents during a period of 18 months. For the dispatches this week say that President Estrada has escaped from the country, resigning his office in favor of Vice President Diaz.

It seems singular that a little people right in our back yard should be overwhelmed by such a riot of wasteful war and pillage, with social conditions about as hopeless as under the deepestshadow of dark Africa.

But war and gun play is like meat and drink to thsese fever blooded hot heads. And one of their revolutions is no tin sword comic opera sort of a scrimmage, as the killed and wounded in a army alone in one of the battles of 1909 comprihed 800out of a force of 2500 men.

The country is now in a feverish reaction from the 15 years of tyranny of President Zelaya, who was driven out of office a year ago last December. Zelaya suppressed any newspaper that criticised him, and such an editor was lucky if he got over the boundary with a whole skin. People who had information or money that Zelaya wanted were persuaded to give it up by being dosed with chili peppers and alcohol. The government got a 150 per cent profit on a tobacco and liquor monopoly, and no doubt Zelaya got a big rake off on it, which he promptly salted down in European securities.

An illustration of Central American methods was given durng the brief rule of President Madriz, who refused to let the newspapers print Secretary Knox's reply to Madriz's protest against the American attitude When our consul posted Mr. Knox's reply on the door of his office, Madriz sent soldiers to keep the people from reading it.

The new President Estrada, who has been in office since January of last year, was the idol of the people as their savior from Zelaya. But aparently Estrada has become involved in controversies with the nest of parasite hangers-on that hover like vultures over the treasury of every Central American state.

He is a lawyer, is married and has two children. Finally and most important of all he was elected to the Sixty-second Congress receiving 18,315 votes to 14,816 for H. L. Buck, Democrat. And one more thing: He was born in 1880, which makes him but thirty-one years old, one of the youngest men in Congress.

The Department of Agriculture is preparing to issue at an early date its most popular publication, the Year Book for 1910. From information at hand it is safe to say that it will be a hummer and if anything more interesting than any of its predecessors. Every member of Congress receives for distribution some 900 copies of this book. He has no trouble in diposing of them. The demand is so great that the average representative usually has a long list waiting. The popularity of this book is not confined to the country districts alone. City folks are beginning to ask for it. Every phase of farming is treated and discussed by Uncle Sam's most talented experts.

Representative Lindbergh has recently recommended W. B. Joubert for appointment as postmaster at Litchfield, Meeker county, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Chas. H. Strobeck. Joubert runs the News-Ledger in Litchfield and at one time was postmaster. When Buckman first ran for Congress Joubert came out for Foster. Buckman was elected and came to Washington. Joubert lost his job shortly thereafter. He has been a consistent supporter of Lindbergh and the latter tried to get him appointed some time ago, but failed. Now that a vacancy exists Lindbergh does not anticipate that there will be any trouble in landing his man.

The College of France, founded in Paris by Francis I., offers at the present day not only strictly academic instruction, but opportunities for the higher education in general. The following anecdote from the Colour of Paris shows how far the college carries its scrupulousness. Every scientific subject, even the most abstruse, will continue to be taught there as long as one solitary individual in all Europe desires to pursue it. Certain courses are followed by two or three persons only. They tell the story of a professor of mathematics. This professor, who was extremely absentminded, had lectured for a whole year to only one pupil. He was perfectly satisfied that it should be so, but it occurred to him one day that he ought to congratulate his rare disciple, and he accordingly did so.

"Monsieur does not recognize me," replied the pupil. "I am monsieur's coachman, and I always wait here until monsieur has finished his lecture."

As They Used to View the Plague.

An old work, a little book published in Cologne in 1665 under the title of "Geistliche und Leibliche Arzteney Wider die Pest," gives a crude explanation of the plague and its ravages. We learn that it is due to the eccentric movement of the planets, eclipses of the moon or sun, inundations, earthquakes, famines and wars. Often also it follows the bad effluvium set up by pigs, ducks and geese. It is frequently attributable to the anger of God for man's sins, such as injustice in the law courts, the oppression of subjects by their rulers, the dearness of goods, the dance and gaming.

The Bath In History.

Hygiene, even cleanliness, is a modern notion. "It is not necessary," says Miss Margaret Macmillan in "The State and the Child," "to go back to Queen Elizabeth, who bathed twice a year and always in fear and within call of two physicians, or to Queen Anne, who lost eighteen children, in order to find people who set a bad example. The children of the worst areas today are, after all, no dirtier, than were the court ladies of yesterday."

HENRY L. STIMSON.

New Yorker Named by President for Secretary of War.

STIMSON BECOMES SECRETARY OF WAR

Jacob M. Dickinson of Tennessee Tenders Resignation.

Washington, May 13.—Secretary of War Jacob McGavock Dickinson of Tennessee, the Democratic member of President Taft's cabinet, has resigned. Henry L Stimson of New York, recently defeated Republican candidate for governor of that state, has been given the war portfolio. This announcement was made from the White House and occasioned great surprise.

In the letters exchanged between the president and Mr. Dickinson no reason other than that of pressing private affairs is given for the secretary's retirement.

Mr. Dickinson will go to his Tennessee home immediately upon the qualification of his successor. He expects to devote his attention to business and will not return to the practice of law, in which he was engaged when President Taft appointed him secretary of war in March, 1909.

Unofficially Washington discussed with relish the resignation of the secretary of war. Unofficially also there were those who found other reason than that given in his letter.

PACKERS MUST STAND TRIAL

Judge Overrules Demurrer of Chicago Meat Magnates.

Chicago, May 13.—The ten indicted millionaire packers of Chicago, charged with criminal conspiracy under the terms of the anti-trust laws, must stand trial, unless some new legal technicality can be found to save them. Judge Carpenter, in the federal court, has overruled the demurrer of the packers.

Revenge.

"I had such a good time the other day watching my wife's discomfiture."

"Nice thing to say. How was it?"

"She is hard and fast in her rules about the house—won't even allow me a cigarette. Well, the chimney began in the morning and smoked all day in spite of her."—Baltimore American.

The Answer.

"Yes," said Nagget, "a woman usually treats her husband as the average servant treats bric-a-brac."

"Go ahead," said the wise Mrs. Nagget. "What's the answer?"

"Why, the more he's worth the more she tries to break him."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Avoid Substitution.

Younghubby (as he gulped down his first bite of pancake)—Wow! What awful sirup! What in the mischief is it? Youngwifey (tearfully)—Oh, dear, I was hoping you wouldn't notice it, but the grocer was all out of table sirup, and I got a bottle of cough sirup instead.—Judge.

Speed of the Teal.

Give a bluewing teal a forty mile breeze behind him, have the little rascal dropping down with it, and he comes on so fast as to be simply unhittable. Some writers have claimed a speed for him of 150 miles an hour, or 220 feet a second. The canvasback, redhead and bluebill have a way of driving before a gale, too, that will be found fast enough in all conscience. Much of the fascination of wing shooting comes from the fact that shots will always be afforded quite beyond the skill of mortal man.—Outing Magazine.

A Clever Reply.

Mme. de Maintenon once asked Lord Stair why it was that the affairs of government were so badly managed in France under a king and so well managed in England under a queen. "For that very reason," replied the English ambassador, "for when a man reigns the women rule him, and when a woman reigns she is ruled by men."

Wigg—Your young lawyer friend seems to carry the love of his profession to a ridiculous extreme. Wagg—Yes; I believe he is even going to marry a girl named Sue.—Philadelphia Record.

Too Rough.

"How did the girls' sparring match turn out?"

"It was very brief. Mabel feinted and Gertrude fainted."—Exchange.

Harsh.

Gerald—Coffee keeps me awake. Geraldine—Me too. I always drink an extra cup when I know you are coming to call.—New York Press.

The plea of ignorance will never take away our responsibilities.—Ruskin.

Macabee Rally.

The local lodge of Lady Macabees are planning a most inspiring rally to be given here the twenty-fifth of this month. The lodges from the surrounding towns, including Warren, Argyle, East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls, have been invited to be present. State Commander, May F. Jones will be here and District Deputy Georgia Fiske, who is working here now, will remain for the meeting. The local members are making elaborate plans for the most enjoyable meeting, and there is no doubt that the meeting will be a most successful one. —Crookston Times.

Mrs. J. P. Swanson and daughter, Sarah, visited at R. L. Muzzy's Sunday afternoon.

Charley Swanson visited at P. B. Malberg's Sunday afternoon.

A bunch of young people went over to the dredge Sunday evening but when nearly over there they found more water than what they expected to find.

Miss Alvina Aasland is assisting at R. L. Muzzy's during Mrs. Muzzy's illness.

Lost:—Srayed or Stolen, A nice looking young couple between the hours of nine thirty and twelve on Sunday evening. Last seen off was on Section 28 township 155. Range 43 but we hope they found their destination before daylight.

Most likely they got stuck in a mud-hole.

John Meyer is certainly a hustler as he is working three farms and batching besides.

The farmers are all feeling good now on account of the rain we had last week and the frogs are also giving their note of cheer.

There is no sign whatever that the market is lessening for the kind of industrial equipment furnished by such institutions as the Minnesota School and College of Agriculture. On the contrary, so great has been the impulse, given by these institutions, toward a higher and better development of our agricultural resources, that the demand for trained ex-Extension workers; who, wherever perts, in every line of rural endeavor, is greater than ever—farther than ever beyond the ability of the institution to meet it. Trained farm managers, orchardists, gardeners, dairymen, cheese-makers and 'Knights of animal husbandry' are especially in demand. The "call of the land," for brain and hand competent to meet its various problems, has been stimulated, no doubt, by the visits of they have gone, have left behind new ideas as to the things which may be wrought on the soil through an alliance of Intelligence with Nature.

The regular retail price of these tires is $3.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

DO GHOSTS HAUNT SWAMPS?

No, Never. Its foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against in swamps and marshes, bayous, and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroys and casts out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "and I've had fine health ever since." Use this safe, sure remedy only, 50c at all Druggists.

SAVED CHILD FROM DEATH.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., "we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctors medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, croup and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all Druggists.

Psychology of Store Planning.

The basement of a store was formerly regarded merely as a cellar, fit for storage, packing boxes, etc. Then came a merchant of the present day, gifted with an imagination to an unusual degree, who recognized—though, perhaps, not in these terms—that the customer was guided by subconscious control and argued that the lack of effort in going downstairs would appeal to the subconsciousness and that the glimpse of displays seen at the foot of the stairs would lead customers to the basement, notwithstanding the low ceiling, the imperfect ventilation and the absence of daylight. This merchant has lived to see not only a daily attendance on a basement floor ten or a dozen times greater than that on the average floor above the first, but also to see his discovery copied by practically every store in the land. The real gist of his discovery was that subconscious control leads us to do the easy thing first—namely, go downstairs—without reckoning with the next problem, which was, of course, getting out of the basement.—Cassier's Magazine.

The Kangaroo's Defense.

In the kangaroo hunts of Australia capture is sufficiently easy, but sometimes the kangaroo makes an original defense.

If possible the kangaroo directs his flight toward a river. If he reaches it he enters, and, thanks to his great height, he is able to go on foot to a depth where the dogs are obliged to swim. There he plants himself on his two hind legs and his tail and, up to his shoulders in the water, awaits the arrival of the pack. With his forepaws he seizes by the head the first dog that approaches, and as he is more solidly balanced than his assailant he holds the dog's nose beneath the water as long as he can. Unless a second dog speedily comes to the rescue the first one is inevitably drowned. If a companion arrives and sets him free he is glad to regain the bank as quickly as possible. A strong and courageous old kangaroo will hold his own against twenty or thirty dogs, drowning some and frightening others, and the hunter is obliged to intervene with a bullet.—New York Press.

Straining the Keg.

Rufe Blevins, a giant woodchopper, whose good nature and ready wit made him a welcome addition to the store circle, entered the village grocery. The loafers moved a little closer together to make room for Rufe on a soap box, but he marched past the friendly circle, plumped an empty molasses keg down on the counter and drew a stained bill from his pocket, which he held out to the proprietor of the store. An expectant grin went round the circle, for Storekeeper Jones had the reputation of never wronging himself by overweighing or undercharging. The merchant adjusted his glasses and looked expectantly from the bill to the woodchopper.

"Notice you charged me for five gallons o' molasses last time I had this four gallon keg filled," drawled Rufe. "I don't mind payin' for the extra gallon, Mr. Jones, but I do kinder hate to have a good keg strained to pieces."—Youth's Companion.

DOCTORS FAILED.
RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs
Threatened Her Life.

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me.

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it.

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me.

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment.

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

JUDGMENT SALE

IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satis fy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said da to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

THE HORSE THIEVES

By THEODORE L. BREWER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"There ain't the same chance for a lively life out yere," said the old plainsman, "there use to was. These yere railroads ruin a country."

I was to spend the night in Josh Miller's cabin. We were smoking our pipes after supper, and his wife was washing the dishes. I encouraged him to talk about the country as it was formerly.

"Them was times when the men was wild as the beasts. Every man was armed with a rifle hooked to his saddle, two revolvers in his belt and likely a couple more in his saddlebags. Anyway that's the way I used to go about. And I tell you we had some pretty likely women about yere in them days. They could all shoot, and shoot straight enough too. And, better than that, they wasn't all day doin' it. One on 'em I courted, too, for I wasn't married then, but so far as I could see she hadn't no use for me.

"The hoss thieves was about as bad stuff to deal with as anything we had out yere in them days. There was one gang of 'em that I and some of the rest of us got after and broke up. We killed some, hung some, and some of 'em got away. I hearn that them as got away said they'd get even with me. They'd git me alive and when they got me they'd make me suffer a death for every man of their gang I'd killed.

"And they got me sure enough. One afternoon I'd strayed away from the settlement, crossed the river—one of the forks of the Missouri—by a ford and looked about for some game for supper. I had only my rifle with me, but I considered that enough to deal with any Indians roamin' about. I didn't come on to no game, and, feelin' kind of lazy, I laid down on the ground.

"The breeze rustled the leaves of a tree under which I was layin', and the birds was a-singin', and everything was peaceful. That was what made the difference when the shootin' and the scalpin' begun in them times. We jumped from one to t'other in a jiffy. One minute it was listenin' to the gurgin' o' water and the sighin' of the breeze; the next we hearn a bullet singin' or a warwhoop.

"Well, I fell asleep. I was woke up up by a shake, and there, looking down into my face, was Bill Aiken, one o' the hoss thieves that had said he'd do me. He'd got my rifle, and I saw it was all up with me. Bill's hoss was nippin' the grass. So was mine. Three other fellers come ridin' up. They was the jolliest lot at gittin' me you ever see, and they begun at onct to lay plans for torturin' me to death.

"They concluded to take me to their camp. They tied a lariat around my neck, and one of 'em held an end before me, and another held one end behind me, so that I shore couldn't git away. Then they put me on my hoss. To git to their camp they was obliged to go over the ford I'd come by. Two of 'em rode ahead and two behind me. When we reached the ford the first man went in up to his hoss' belly. I was wonderin' if I couldn't find some way to drown. But I didn't have much time to think about it, for I'd scarce got into the water when the man who'd gone in first pitched forward into the drink. At the same time I heard a crack and saw a bit o' smoke floatin' away from the high bank on t'other side of the river. But I could see nothin' but the smoke.

"The second man, seein' the one ahead killed and not seein' what killed him, didn't know what to do. All of us was in the river, and crossin' a stream is the wo'st possible place for to be attacked. The third hoss thief called on the second to go on, but before he could do it there was another crack, and he dropped too. I was wonderin' if I was to be killed—ruther hopin' I was—when the man behind me give a yell, and he went the same way as the others.

"One idee by this time must 'a' got into the fourth man's head. I reckon he thought some one was doin' all this for me and, not likin' to give me a chance to escape, concluded to shoot me. I turned jist in time to see him puttin' his hand back to git his revolver when a red spot came in his forehead and he didn't git no pistol.

"Yere was four men either dead or so near dead they couldn't do nothin'. Two of 'em was goin' downstream under the water. Of course I didn't waste no time. I spurred my hoss and started across the ford. When I'd climbed the bank I looked for them as had done the shootin'. I didn't see no one. It was as peaceful there as an April mornin'. I listened, but I couldn't hear nothin' except a breeze shakin' the leaves of the trees. The grass was long, and I hunted about in it.

"Purty soon I came to a gal lyin' as if dead. She was the one I was tellin' you about a spell ago. A rifle and a 42 caliber revolver laid by her. I got off my hoss and knelt down to do somepin to help her when she opened her eyes. Seein' me, she put her arms around my neck.

"She was the party as had killed four hoss thieves and had saved me. Bein' out thar, she had seen 'em and, knowin' I was nigh, had gone back to git the weepons. After killin' all four of 'em, like a gal, she fainted."

"That's the kind of girl I'm looking for," I remarked enthusiastically.

"You can't have that one," said the plainsman. "She's in thar washin' dishes. Besides, she's an old woman now."

How He Did It

By LOUISE IDA ROSS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There were two things Frank Trowbridge excelled in, but before stating them it is better to give the information that Frank's whole front name was Frances and she was a girl. The two accomplishments were flirting and athletics. She lived in summer on a lake ten miles long by three to six miles broad and could beat any other girl near it rowing, sailing, swimming, diving, fishing and any other sporting accomplishment fitted for women. The boys were all in love with her.

Frank wasn't overscrupulous as to making believe that she returned their affection, at least to a slight degree, but nothing definite could be got out of her by any of them. Charlie Wiggins, who was a year or two older than the rest of them and consequently harder for her to manage, was a cool sort of a chap, and it bothered her because she couldn't tease him as she teased the others. Near the end of a summer she had half promised to be engaged to half a dozen fellows and feared she would be obliged to be serious with some one of them. Charlie came up from the city for a two weeks' vacation. It struck Frank that by giving him the most of her time the others would drop out of the race, thinking that he was the lucky man. Then when they found they were mistaken she could accuse them of having deserted her.

Charlie fell into the trap very easily; but, though he didn't let Frank know it, he had no mind to fall out. With her permission, to say nothing of encouragement, he devoted himself to her till just before the time when he must leave. Then he laid his own trap.

"Frank," he said, "that little single sticker your father gave you in the spring is a dandy, isn't she?"

"She can beat anything on the lake."

"Except my Gertrude."

"H'm! Your Gertrude's a tub. By the bye, who's she named for?"

"That's a secret."

"You think she can beat my Polly, eh?"

"I'm sure of it."

"I'll bet you a pound of candy against"—

"Nonsense! Do you suppose I race for trifles?"

"What stakes would you race for?"

Charlie didn't reply for some time. Then he said: "I'll race my Gertrude in a wind fair for both two miles up and two miles back. If you lose you marry me; if you win I marry"—

"Whom?"

[illegible]

There's no knowing by what feminine process Frank made up her mind to accept the challenge. She certainly hadn't the slightest doubt that the Polly could sail around the Gertrude in circles, the latter being notoriously the most sluggish boat on the lake But she was a trifle jealous of this unknown Gertrude, and Charlie was to marry her if he were beaten. Be this as it may, the race was made up to take place on the first day there was a sufficient breeze. Frank was to sail the Polly and Charlie the Gertrude.

On the day of the race there was a breeze varying from 4 to 10 knots. Charlie gave Frank permission to inspect his boat, which she did, but Charlie declined to inspect the Polly. Most of Frank's semifiances as well as many others were on hand to see the race, but no one knew the stakes. All expected that it would be a walkover for Frank.

A designated starter fired a pistol, and when the boats sailed over the line another was fired, indicating that the race was on. As was expected, the Gertrude dropped astern of her rival from the first. But when the former had got over half and the latter three-eighths of a mile the Gertrude ceased to lose. The Polly turned the stake boat a quarter of a mile ahead, when the Gertrude began to make a slight gain. This was astonishing, for she didn't careen any more under a fresher breeze, indicating she didn't get one. She was not long in catching the Polly and not much longer in pulling ahead of her, though this at first was hard to tell, for Wiggins passed a hundred yards to her lee. This was considered very good of him, since his boat did not blanket his rival.

Meanwhile the breeze had lost nearly half its force. But while this made a great deal of difference in the speed of the Polly it did not affect that of the Gertrude. The latter sailed on, slowly gaining on her rival, coming in an eighth of a mile ahead. The winner was received with no especial demonstrations, for sympathy was all with the lady. But what was lost in rooting was made up in surprise. Wiggins remained in his boat till Frank came in beside him, blushing like a peony, at which every one wondered. Charlie stepped into her boat and handed her ashore, saying as he did so:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I take both pride and pleasure in introducing my fiancee."

The half dozen semifiances who were present were crushed, and Frank wished she were at the bottom of the lake.

"How did you do it, Charlie?" she asked that evening when they were consulting about an engagement ring.

"I bored a hole in the bow and one in the stern, with a pipe between them. With my feet I pumped water from the bow and drove it out at the stern. See?"

"I think I do."

Humane Icelanders.

A woman from Iceland, the wife of a well known Icelandic scholar, was spending a season in New York. Local pride gave her no rest. She held that day lost in which she had not pointed out to some one something that was better done in Iceland than in the States. One evening while she was dining with a friend the conversation turned upon the work of the S. P. C. A.

"In Iceland," said the victim of local pride, "we have no need of humanitarian societies. Cruelty is unknown among us. We are naturally a race of humanitarians."

"You are also great fishermen, are you not?" inquired a second guest.

"Oh, certainly," she cried, "great fishermen! You have no such expert fishermen in the States."

"But what a cruel sport for an island full of humanitarians!" cried the second guest.

"No, indeed!" explained the devoted creature without winking. "No, indeed! In Iceland our fishermen all bait their hooks with anaesthetics!"—New York Sun.

Wonderful Earrings.

Few present day earrings surpass in taste and delicate finish the earrings of Biote, the daughter of Aristotle, which were found in Chalcis, where the young woman was buried. These ornaments represented doves swinging in golden hoops. The miniature birds were marvelously wrought, the feathers of granulated gold, the wings and breasts enriched with bands of color supplied by inserted gems. Precious stones gleamed like tiny sparks for the eyes. Daintiest device of all, the tail feathers were so finely made and curiously adjusted as to move at the slightest motion of the pendent hoop, so that whenever the proud wearer should toss or shake her head her two attendant doves would seem to balance themselves upon their perches, as live birds do in swinging on a bough. They were found by exploring archaeologists. The daughter's trinkets have survived as long as the fame of the father's philosophy.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Cat of the Falcon.

One of the traditions of the British Royal Yacht club is of Lord Yarborough's Falcon, the crew of which, according to Mr. Ralph Nevill in London Clubs, were paid extra wages on condition that they submitted to the usual rules in force on British vessels of war. These included flogging under certain circumstances, and it is said that, in consideration of the additional sum paid by Lord Yarborough, some of the crew cheerfully submitted to the occasional application of the cat-o'-nine-tails. "Indeed, before the Falcon left Plymouth sound for a cruise all hands cordially signed a paper setting forth the usefulness of a sound flogging in cases of extremity and their perfect willingness to undergo the experiment whenever it was deemed necessary for the preservation of good order."

It Was Tough.

A man was at breakfast at a hotel and encountered a piece of tough beefsteak. Having failed to make an impression on it he [illegible] laid down his knife and fork and remarked to [illegible] gentlemen [illegible] steak is an [illegible] patent [illegible]

STANDARD OIL DECISION

As Viewed by Progressive Congressmen. Legislation by Judiciary is Usurpation.

Washington, D. C., May 23, 1911. At the first announcement of the decision in the Standard Oil case there was the feeling that the Government had won a sweeping victory. True the decision of the Supreme Court orders the dissolution of the gigantic oil trust. Now that the full meaning of the court's verdict has been carefully weighed there is some doubt as to whether the Government's victory was as decisive as hoped for. Associate Justice Harlan's dissenting opinion voices the views of many of the Republican Progressives. If Justice Harlan's views are correct the government's was a theatrical but probably fruitless victory. The whole controversy as to whether the decision is satisfactory, so far as the people are concerned, hinges on the word "unreasonable." In the opinion of the majority of the court there are good and bad trusts; that a trust doing interstate business under a reasonable restraint is not amenable to the law. By some it is held that the courts have read into the law by judicial construction something which Congress has refused to do for many years. In other words, the Supreme Court in its decision legislated by placing a certain construction on the Sherman anti-trust law.

At any rate the business interests hailed with joy the decision. Stocks soared upward and in every quarter there was the feeling that so far as the big business interests were concerned the decision was lenient. It was approved in all of the financial circulars. In the opinion of many the trust question will be more acute than ever. There is already talk of an effort to so amend the anti-trust law, so that the Supreme Court will be obliged to render a decision against any combination or monopoly in restraint of trade, regardless of whether that restraint is "reasonable" or "unreasonable."

In order to ascertain the sentiment of members of Congress on the trust decision a number of middle west congressmen were asked to prepare statements for publication in this letter. So far as these statements have been received they have been inserted. They will be interesting, as expressing the view in general of a number of the progressive Republicans of the House and Senate. The statements follow:

Senator La Follette, Wisconsin: Assuming that Justice Harlan's dissenting opinion correctly interprets the decision of the court then I say that the Supreme Court has written into the law a construction which that court has heretofore decided unwarranted and unsafe. It is this very construction which the trusts and combinations have sought to engraft upon the law for many years. Failing in the courts, they have for more than a decade made every effort to so amend the law as to make it read precisely as Justice Harlan says the Supreme Court has now decided that it shall read. Congress has refused to so amend the law as to leave it to the courts to say that some combinations in restraint of trade are reasonable, and some are unreasonable; that some combinations are "good" and some are "bad". If it shall be found this decision in effect amends the anti-trust law as Judge Harlan asserts, then it will prove the most conspicuous and most unfortunate example of legislation by judicial construction which our history affords."

Representative Lenroot, Wisconsin: From extracts from the opinion I agree fully with the dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan wherein he holds that the Supreme Court has no right to distinguish between good and bad trusts and reasonable and unreasonable restraints of trade. If the anti-trust law needs any amendment it should be done by Congress and not by the Supreme Court.

Representative Davis of Minnesota: Since the passage of the anti-trust law in 1890 the courts have uniformly constructed this act in accordance with the letter and the spirit thereof. Section 1 provides that "every contract, combination, or conspiracy in restraint of trade, among the several States and with foreign nations is hereby declared to be illegal." This language is direct and unequivocal, and while I am very loth to question a decision of the Supreme Court, yet I am unable to follow the reason given for the distinction concerning reasonable and unreasonable restraint of trade. The language "every contract in restraint of trade" is very plain, and to my mind the word "every" admits of no qualification. As to the result of the decision I am inclined to believe that in the near future great legislative activity will follow in order to, if possible, more definitely describe illegal restraint of trade.

Representative Anderson of Minnesota: The effect of the decision is to write into the Sherman Anti-trust law the word "unreasonable" in relation to restraint of trade, which establishes as far as the Supreme Court is concerned that the restraint of trade by monopolies may be either reasonable or unreasonable, or, in other words, that there may be good or bad trusts. It extends the power of the courts by leaving it to the court to determine whether the restraint of trade is reasonable or unreasonable, or whether the trust is a good or bad trust. It will probably necessiate legislation by Congress restoring the rule laid down by former decisions of the Supreme Court, or laying down rules by which the courts must be guided in determining what is an unlawful restraint of trade.

Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota: With the word "unreasonable" read into the law, which gives the Supreme Court more power the decision is otherwise technically the same as the 1904 Northern Security Company case, dissolving that as the holding company for the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railways. They still do business at Hill's office with a community of interest. Nothwithstanding the Standard Oil case the allied companies will continue business at Rockefeller's office with a community of interest, or as one company. Both of the decisions went to the form rather than to the substance, and while we should be glad the decision was not formally against the government, the problem is not settled. There is no remedy in the decision, but the public will have to act in its own community of interest. That principle guides the modern corporation and the same principle will have to guide the public if it would solve the social and industrial problems. The decision is not significantly favorable to the government. The people have paid the costs to furnish a guide to which the big corporations may adjust themselves.

Representative Steenerson, Minnesota: The effect of the decision will be to strengthen monopolistic combinations and probably force Congress to further amend the Anti-trust Law so as to make it conform to what the Supreme Court first said it meant.

• • •

Representative Norris, Nebraska: My sentiment is expressed by Justice Harlan in his dissenting opinion.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

Memorial Exercises Tuesday, May 30, Under Auspices of the Band.

The people of Thief River Falls will observe Tuesday, May 30th our National Memorial Day with fitting and appropriate exercises, to which all citizens are invited and which, it is hoped, will be largely attended. The Post office, banks and other places of business will be closed for at least a part if not all of the day.

The exercises, under the auspices of the city band, will take place at 10 o'clock a. m., in the park at west side of the bridge where they have been held regularly for many years.

The Memorial address will be given by Atty. H. O. Kjomme while Rev. Boyden of the Presbyterian church will lead the devotional exercises.

After the exercises Company "L", the school children of the city, the members of the city band and the fire department will escort the veterans, for whom carriages will be in readiness, to Greenwood Cemetery where the final part of the program will take place.

Rev. I. A. Johnneson, secretary of the Norrlandslaget, was in our city Wednesday and Thursday making preliminary arrangements for the coming convention of the Norrlandslaget at his place June 15-17th. He estimates that there will be about 300 outside people coming to our city on that occasion. He left via Crookston for his home at Spicer, Minn., on Thursday. Saetendallaget is to meet here June 14-15.

Hon. O'Neill Banqueted

At 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening Banquet tables spread at the Ogahmah in honor of Rep. D. P. O'Neill and in appreciation of his services in the legislature from this district last winter, were full; the music was on; and the sumptuous feast of 'steen courses started. Good will and good fellowship perched high in the hearts of men, and all minds were intent upon the production of most rare and beautiful beauquets to launch in toasts at the honored guest of the hour.

After a brief statement by Dr. Grundy of the purpose that had inspired the banquet, the fusilade was begun by Prof. Hay. Hon. D. P. O'Neill made a lengthy reply, going into his legislative experiences of last winter quite fully and interestingly. Then followed in swift succession more bouquets by County Attorney Stanton, H. E. Ives, G. Halvorson, Dan Shaw and C. L. Hanson and they didn't "go home until morning"—that is, till twelve o'clock. Everybody present felt that they had enjoyed a very instructive and pleasing social function which must result in knitting closer the ties between all present, and in so doing must redound to the good and glory of our beautiful city.

The repast itself was of the very best—well prepared and well served, and Mr. Harrington and his hostelry deserves great credit for the same.

MINSTRELS A SUCCESS

The "Cullud Gem'men" Played To a Very well Pleased Audience.

A very well pleased audience greeted the home talent minstrel show given in the Auditorium last Friday evening for the benefit of the city band. A great deal of credit is due Mr. Will Follett and Mr. Will Swaddling of Pine City who at the request of Prof. Hay took charge of the production. The "cullud genmen" were not all as readily recognized as W. W. Pritchard who looked "perfectly nautral" as somebody was heard to remark, and another wondered where Mr. DeVelling could be as she couldn't see nary nigger with the right shade of hair.

In addition to the usual minstrel repertoire the audience was favored with several specialties not usually included in a minstrel production. The Banjo solo by Will Follett could hardly be called the work of an amateur and the whistling solo by W. C. Addy of Strandquist was particularly pleasing.

SOCIALISM!!!

The lecture by Mr. Alexander Irvine of New York Thursday the 18th was indeed the best ever held in this city.

Mr. Irvine proved beyond all doubt that a revolutionary change is needed to put the worker on his own feet by owning the job where the fear of losing his job will not be staring him in the face, which with its demoralizing effects is making life for him and his family a horrible night-mare.

Whoever has seen life from as many sides as Mr. Irvine, who has worked among them as a Philanthropist, preacher and a pal on the bowery will plainly see that charity will not better them but only relieves the pangs of hunger for the time being. This fearless champion for the poor has sacrificed the favors of the rich, the place in gilded pulpits, positions insuring comfortable independence and family happiness all because he could not tolerate the abuses perpetrated on the worker of the world. His love for humanity show thru his every word.

Friends you who heard Mr. Irvine, reflect and ponder over this question and see if there may perchance be something more blessed then profits, if this earth is not big enough, rich enough and good enough to give life, art and happiness more than enough for us all.

LOCALS WIN FAST GAME

Red Lake Falls Taken Into Camp To Tune Of Six to Two.

Last Sunday, in the first regular game at home, a large and enthusiastic crowd saw the home boys defeat the fast Red Lake Falls team by the decisive score of 6 to 2.

The game was clean and fast throughout, and was not interrupted at any time by wrangling among the players or altercations with the umpire. The score book shows that Thief River somewhat excelled the visitors in all departments of the game. However, is was only the the slight difference needed to insure a victory. It should be said in justice to Garceau that with proper support in pinches the score would have been closer.

Hess pitched fine ball and always delivered the goods when things looked dangerous. His support was air tight with the exception of the second and third innings, when a grounder thru Johnstone and a passed ball by Dolan allowed two runs. Cyr was the only man of the opponents who could connect with any regularity.

Christensen and Hess had their batting eyes with them, Christensen's two-bagger being the feature hit of the game. Lambert made the feature catch of the game when he pulled in a high fly back of second that sure looked like a safe one. The new local men, Jaranson and Dolan, showed up well. Christensen's work at first was gilt edged.

The locals looked real classy in their new white suits trimmed with red. They don't believe much in that talk about new suits losing the first game.

SANGERFEST APPROACHING

Reports coming in from the various choirs comprising the famous Red River Valley Scandinavian Singers' Association indicate that the "stevne" in Thief River Falls June 23, 24 and 25 is to set a new mark for the number of singers present and also a new standard for the quality of songs rendered. With a splendid, well trained chour of 200 voices and and orchestra of 30 pieces, a world famous tenor soloist like Rolf Hammer, this 'stevne' is certainly a thing that will be remembered in the annals of Thief River Falls. As an additional vocal soloist, the executive committee have been fortunate enough to secure Ingolf Grindeland, who is already known locally as a singer, who has during the past year made a great hit in Minneapolis, where he sings in one of the large churches. Another attraction will be J. Shefstad, of Crookston, who has been engaged as violin soloist. Mr. Shefstad is a Leipsic graduate, is well known locally and needs no further introduction. Besides these, Mrs. G. Halvorson and Mrs. O. F. Mellby, well known locally, will render vocal selections and will ably represent Thief River Falls at the "stevne."

Ben Bjorge, who came here from Beaudette some months ago died at the early age of 30 years last Monday night at 12 o'clock from tuberculosis, leaving behind him in great poverty a wife and two small children to mourn his untimely demise. The funeral was held from the Synod church, Rev. I. T. Aastad officiating. The remains were enterred at the Greenwood Cemetery last Wednesday.

Girl May Lose Her Arm

The young girl of Herman Ortloff who has been suffering with blood poisoning at the home of Mr. Bessler will very likely suffer the loss of her left arm. All has been done that could be done to save it, but the bones have been so injured by the infection that in all probability the arm will have to be taken off above the elbow.

Obituary

Peder O. Stene, who died May 11th at the home of his son, Tobias tene, in the town of Smiley had been a resident in that place for the last 22 years. He was born in Norway in 1837 and was thus at the time of his death 74 years of age. The cause of his sudden death was heart failure. He was buried at the Greenwood Cemetery beside his wife who preceeded him but a few months, having died at an advanced age on the 20th, day of last February. This couple leaves to mourn them two sons and three daughters, namely: Mrs. A. A. Odegaard, O. P. Stene of Funkley, Mrs. Frank McPhee of Grand Forks, Mrs. O. T. Anfinson and Tobias Stene of this vicinity. The departed were highly respected pioneers in their community.

A small child of A. Adolphson, who lives on the Dangerfield farm in town of Silverton, died Tuesday of the disease, diphtheria.

OUR COUNTRY PROGRESSING

Marvellous Strides In Betterment of Rural Roads and Conditions.

Jno. Tostenson of Grand Forks, N. Dak., traveling sales agent for the Advance Thresher Co., was in our city Wednesday. It was evening when the Press reporter saw him and he had just completed a trip out over the reservation. He proceeded to tell how four years ago on the 17th day of May he set out over the same indentical territory with, team; how they drove for just one solid week to cover it; and how they got stuck in the mud and had to get out into it up to their waist-line while the driver only consoled him with "oh, that's nothing." "Now today," he said, 'I have covered all this territory with automobile in a single day and have not been troubled with mud.' "You people", he went on to say, "that live here do not realize what a great change this is, because it goes on gradually under your very eyes and you become accustomed to the improved conditions while they come. With me it seems almost a miracle."

True it is, conditions have undergone a wonderful change these last few years, and right to-day things are looking more promising than ever. The grain acreage put in this year will be found to be fifty per cent greater than last year for this vicinity. The manner in which it has been put in is a credit to our farmers. It shows that they are imbibing the spirit of the times and are of the kind that are learning every day how to do things better than they ever did those things before. Another reason why fields have been better worked up for the crops this year is that it has been possible. The vast network of ditches has made it possible. The dry fall last year also had much to do with it, because it made it possible for the farmer to get his work done with dispatch and gave him time to do most of his plowing last fall. This was never true before of the reservation country. During the winter alternate freezing and thawing has crumbled every clod and this spring the harrow left it as finely pulverized as an ash pile, or, as the agriculturist would say, "put it in fine tilth."

After moderate moisture in the spring we had a month of nice, dry weather during which all the wheat, and oats was put in; then we had some good soaking rains—not too much, but just enough—and to-day the outlook for a bumper crop from a record-breaking acerage in this vicinity is good beyond conception.

Carl Stang came up from Fargo to-day. He will be the expert machinist at the Thief River Falls Manufacturing Co's. factory. He comes here now to put the machinery into good running order.

WHITE EARTH INDIAN BILL

For the Relief of Innocent Purchasers of White Earth Indian Lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases where suit has been or shall be brought by the United States on behalf of any Indian allottee of lands on White Earth Reservation in the State of Minnesota to set aside any conveyance of such land upon the ground that the grantor is a full-blood Indian and not embraced within the class of Indians authorized to convey land under the Act of June twenty-first, nineteen hundred and six, the defendant or defendants in such suit may plead by way of supplemental pleading that such grantor conveyed his land under the representation that he was a mixed-blood Indian and received valuable consideration therefore which he still retains, the fair value of such land at the time of such attempted conveyance, and that he is ready and willing to pay into court for the benefit of such grantor the difference, if any, between such fair value and the amount already paid, and thereupon the court shall, upon evidence submitted or on the stipulation of counsel, find the fair value of the land at the time of such attempted sale, and also the amount actually paid therefor, and upon payment of the difference, if any there be into court for the benefit of such Indian grantor, judgment confirming such sale shall be entered and adjudging the title accordingly.

In determining the fair value of such land, the court shall take into consideration the price at which similar land was actually sold for by persons competent to sell at or about the time and in said locality.

All moneys paid into court as above prescribed shall be paid over to the Secretary of the Interior for the use of the Indians entitled thereto.

In all cases where any Indian allottee of land on White Earth Reservation in Minnesota, who appears upon the roll prepared by the Department of Justice and known as the Hinton roll as fullblood Indian, has heretofore or shall hereafter attempt to sell or convey his land to innocent purchasers under the pretext that he or she is a mixed-blood and authorized to convey under the Act of June twenty-first, nineteen hundred and six, and such vendee shall have gone into actual possession of such land and made valuable improvements thereon, the Cecretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to speedily ascertain the fair value of said land at the time of such attempted conveyance thereof, and in acertaining such fair value he shall take into consideration the price at which like parcels of land were sold in that locality at that time by persons competent to dispose of them; and when such value is ascertained, the purchaser may pay to the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the Indian allottee, the difference between such amount and th amount actually paid to such incompetent allottee, and thereupon the Secretary of the Interior shall approve such sale and shall issue fee-simple papers thereon without delay.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEM

Mr. Steenerson In Explanation Of This Bill To-day Said:

The Clapp amendment for the first time made the competency of an Indian to convey land depend upon the question of blood, so that a mixed-blood could convey his land whether competent or incompetent and a full-blood could not.

Naturally every Indian on White Earth who wanted to dispose of his landand they nearly always do, claimhe was a mixed blood, and was ready to make affidavit to the fact if there was any ready cash in sight. Out of some forty-five hundred Indians, ninety per cent sold their allotments on the pretext that they were mixed-bloods.

Now, many of them no doubt sold for less than their property was worth and in some few cases fraud was practiced. Something near one thousand suits have been begun to set aside an equal number of conveyances, and the only ground alleged in these cases is that the Indian was a full-blood. No fraud or imposition is alleged in any case. The result of this litigation, if successful, will be a judgment in each case that the land still belongs to the Indian granter, notwithstanding he may have received full value for it, and that he claimed he was a mixed blood, and that the purchaser believed he was competent to convey the land.

Such a result is abhorent to justice and instead of advancing the Indian in civilization will teach him rascality and prepare him for a career as a swindler.

This bill is designed to grant relief to innocent purchasers who dealt with the Indians honestly believing that he was what he claimed to be, a mixed-blood, and creates a new defense in this class of suits, to be set up by way of a supplemental pleading, that the Indian sold his land under pretense that he was a mixed-blood, and received a valuable consideration therefor which he retains, and authorizes the court to find the fair value of the land at the time of sale and if it is more than the Indian was paid, the defendant may pay the difference into court, and thereupon judgment confirming the sale shall be entered.

It also applies the same principle to Indians who are on the rolll as full bloods, who have sold their land to innocent purchasers who are in actual possession, whereno suit has been brought, and authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to confirm land sales in such cases where the Indian has received a fair value for his property, or if not, confirm it when the difference between such value ad the amount already paid, is paid over for the use of the Indian.

LEAVITT UPHOLDS WHITTIER

We Publish Full Letter of Former Board of Control Member.

The Red Wing Republican has pinted what is claims is the full text of a letter written by S. W. Leavitt, late a member of the board of control, concerning Supt. Whittier and the Red Wing training chool.

Says the Republican:

On May 9 the St. Paul Dispatch printed in its "Mail Bag" column a communication from Hon. S. W. Leavitt, wro or eight years was a member of the Board of Control, in defense of Supt. Whittier's attitude as well as his conduct of the institution. It was to be supposed that an article from a man of Leavitt's high reputation as a citizen and ex-official would have escaped censorship. But as will be seen by its reading all criticism of the Dispatch was left out. Mr. Leavitt has furnished The Republican with an exact copy of the letter which he sent to the Dispatch. It appears below complete.

The letter was written by Mr. Leavitt who for eight years was a member Whittier. The fact that it was written voluntarily by such a man as Mr. Leavitt, whose long experience on the Board of Control, brought him into such close acquaintance with training school conditions and with Mr. Whittier as a man and officer, makes it the weightiest and ablest presentation of existing facts and the keenest criticism of the Twin city press in its biased and unjust attacks on the superintendeent of the boys' training school, which has yet appeared.

Mr. Leavitt's letter to the St. Paul Dispatch, as he wrote it is as follows:

"I trust I may be pardoned for taking issue with a recent editorial in your papr entitled 'Whittier Should Resign.' I am somewhat averse to entering into the controversy, but in view, of my experience as a member of the Board of Control and knowledge of conditions at institutions, I believe it a duty I owe the public to express my views on the subject for what they may be worth.

"It does not seem possible that the Dispatch has in mind the law and facts relating to the case in question, for if it had I feel certain it would not take the position it does in the editorial referred to or in its general treatment of the subject. It would also seem that the Dispatch does not give proper weight to the motive behind the initiation of the investigation or which actuated the party championing the same, or the attention given by the legislative committee to the character of testimony admitted.

"The majority of both Houses of the legislature had full knowledge of the facts and law, as well, the motives referred to and the character of testimony admitted. This knowledge undoubtedly had its influence with the members in determing their action on the report of the committees and in refusing to be 'carried off their feet' by the clamors of a few self-constituted guardians of public morals and the urgent solicitations of back-number politicians, and so perpetrate a great wrong upon a conscientious and faithful official.

"You say:

"The boys' training school at Red Wing is left in a most embarrassing position by the course of Superintendent Whittier in persisting in clinging to his office.

Backward, turn backward, oh Time, in your flight, and give us a maiden dressed proper and right. We are so weary of switches and rats. Billy Burke clusters and peach basket hats. Wads of jute hair in a horible pile, Stacked on their heads to the heighth of a mile. Something is wrong with the maidens, we fear, Give us the girls as they used to appear. Give us the girlies we once knew of yore, Whose curls didn't come from a hair-dressing store. Maidens who dressed with a sensible view, And just as Dame Nature intended them to. Give us a girl with a figure her own, and fashioned divinely by nature alone. Feminine styles getting fiercer each year—Oh, give us the girls as they used to appear. Oh, for a girl with a sensible mind, One of the twenty-five years ago kind; One whose fair tresses were ample enough—Without additions of make-believe stuff. Give us the days when the hats women wore were not the reason that Christian men swore; Over our way such a fair maiden steer—Yes give us a girl as she used to appear.—Ex.

NEW ANTI-TRUST SUIT IS BEGUN

Government Opens Fight on Retail Lumber Dealers.

EASTERN STATES AFFECTED

Accusations Allege Conspiracy to Maintain High Prices and the Use of the Blacklist.

New York, May 20.—Sweeping charges of a gigantic conspiracy to maintain high prices, to blacklist concerns not regarded as "proper" trade, and to violate generally the Sherman anti-trust law, are made in a government suit filed by Attorney General Wickersham in the United States court here against the so called lumber trust.

Ten trade organizations and more than 150 individuals are named as defendants in this suit, which may be the first of several planned by the department of justice against combinations and retailers in staple commodities and the necessaries of life to prevent the ultimate consumer from buying anywhere, except from local retailers.

The government's suit is replete with sensational allegations and it is asserted that builders and consumers of lumber the country over are at the mercy of the retailers' organizations in different sections of the United States.

The suit filed is against the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' association, which is the central body of nine local organizations covering five states, the District of Columbia and the cities of Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Blackmailing System Alleged.

The government charges, in brief, that by an elaborate system of blacklisting not only individual consumers but some of the largest industrial corporations have been prevented from dealing directly with wholesalers. By alleged unlawful agreements and acts, it is charged, that all competition for the trade of the contractor, the builders, the manufacturer of finished lumber products and the individual consumers has been thrown entirely into the hands of the retailers in the Eastern States' Retail Lumber Dealers' association and its constituent organizations.

The government's bill alleges that in some localities the wholesaler selling to a consumer has either been heavily fined or expelled from the organization.

Officials of the department of justice regard the suit as the most important in principal of any yet undertaken by the government against alleged conspiracies said to affect the cost of living.

It is believed that should the courts uphold the government's contention that it is a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law to prevent the ultimate consumer from buying direct from the producer, other suits will be started against combinations of retailers alleged to be in control of the marketing of many of the commodities of life.

RESOLUTION

At a regular meeting of the City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, held in the office of the City Clerk of said city on the 16th, day of May A. D., 1911. Alderman J. P. Jensen a member of said Council offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

WHEREAS, The City of Thief River Falls is without premises for a Public Market and whereas it is deemed necessary that a public market place be provided and purchased by the City therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That the bid of J. M. Bishop be accepted and that the City of Thief River Falls purchase the lots numbered seven(7) to twelve (12) inclusive in block thirty eight (38) of the Original townsite of the City of Thief River Falls, for the sum of twelve hundred ninety-six and no-100 dollars and taxes for 1910, and that the Mayor and City Clerk are hereby authorized to enter into contract for the purchase of said premises, said purchase to be completed and money paid as soon as the owners shall furnish title to said premises, to be approved by the City Attorney; and which resolution being duly seconded by Alderman J. C. Berg was put to a vote of said council with the following result.

Aldermen voting yes: E. Sedlacek, M. Forder, J. P. Jensen and J. C. Berg.

Aldermen voting no: none.

And it appearing from said vote that said resolution received more than three-fourths vote of the entire council, the same was duly declared carried.

Milton Forder,
President of the City council.

Approved May 20, 1911.

T. P. Hamre,
Mayor.

Attest
N. J. Anderson,
City Clerk.

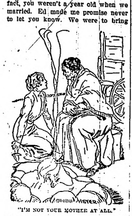
"I mean your real mother died when you was a tiny little babe. You see, I was your father's second wife—in fact, you weren't a year old when we married. Ed made me promise never to let you know. We were to bring you up just the same as if you was a child to both of us. Nobody knows but Reddy. I told him the day we started up here."



"I'M NOT YOUR MOTHER AT ALL."

The girl's mind ran swiftly over the past as she listened. The truth of the revelation reached her instantly, explaining a hundred strange things which had puzzled her all her life. The absence of deep affection between herself and Lize was explained. Their difference in habit, temperament, thought—all became plain. "But my mother," she said at last—"who was my mother?"

"I never saw her. You see, Ed came into the country, bringing you, a little, motherless babe. He always said your mother was a fine woman, but I never so much as saw a picture of her. She was an educated woman, he said—a southern woman—and her name was Virginia, but that's about all I can tell you of her. Now I am going to let Ross know all of this as soon as I can. It will make a whole lot of difference in what he thinks of you."

She uttered all this much as a man would have done, with steady voice and with bright eyes, but Lee Virginia could feel beneath her harsh inflections the deep emotion which vibrated there, and her heart went out toward the lonely woman in a new rush of tenderness. Now that she was released from the necessity of excusing her mother's faults—faults she could now ignore—now that she could look upon her as a loyal friend, she was moved to pity and to love, and, rising, she went to her and put her arms about her neck and said: "This won't make any difference. I am going to stay with you and help you just the same."

The tears came to the old woman's eyes, and her voice broke as she replied: "I knew you would say that, Lee Virginia, but all the same I don't intend to have you do any such thing. You've got to cut loose from me altogether, because some fine chap is going to come along one of these days, and he won't want me even as a stepmother-in-law. No; I have decided that you and me had better live apart. I'll get you a place to live up in Sulphur, where I can visit you now and again, but I guess I am elected to stay right here in the Fork. They don't like me, and I don't like them, but I have kind of got used to their ways of looking at me sidewise. They don't matter as much as it would up there in the city."

Lee turned back wistfully toward the story of her mother. "Where did my mother meet my father? Do you know that?"

"No, I don't. It was a runaway match, Ed said. I never did know who her folks were, only I know they thought she was marrying the wrong man."

The girl sighed as her mind took in the significance of her mother's coming to this wild country, leaving all that she knew and loved behind. "Poor little mother! It must have been very hard for her."

"I am afraid she did have a hard time, for Ed admitted to me that he hadn't so much as a saddle when he landed in the state. He hadn't much when I met him first, but everybody liked him. He was one of the handsomest men that ever jumped a saddle. But he was close mouthed. You never could get anything out of him that he didn't want to tell, and I was never able to discover what he had been doing in the southern part of the state."

As she pondered on her changed relationship to Lize, Lee's heart lightened. It would make a difference to Ross. It would make a difference to the Redfields. Traitorous as it seemed, it was a great relief, a joy, to know that her own mother—her real mother—had been "nice." "She must have been nice or Lize would not have said so," she reasoned, recalling that her stepmother had admitted her feeling of jealousy.

At last Lize rose. "Well, now, dearie, I reckon we had better turn in. It is getting chilly and late."

As they were about to part at the door of the tent Virginia took Lize's face between her hands. "Good night, mother," she said and kissed her to show her that what she had said would not make any difference.

But Lize was not deceived. This unwonted caress made perfectly plain to her the relief which filled the girl's heart.

Lee Virginia was awakened some hours later by a roaring, crackling sound and by the flare of a yellow light upon her tent. Peering out, she saw flames shooting up through the roof of the ranger's cabin, while beside it, wrapped in a blanket, calmly contemplating it, stood Cavanagh with folded arms. A little nearer to the bridge Redfield was sitting upon an upturned box.

With a cry of alarm she aroused her mother, and Lize, heavy eyed, laggard with sleep, rose slowly and peered out at the scene with eyes of dull amazement. "Why don't they try to put it out?" she demanded as she took in the import of the passive figures.

Dressing with tremulous haste, Lee stepped from the tent just in time to see Swenson come from behind the burning building and join the others in silent contemplation of the scene. There was something uncanny in the calm inaction of the three strong men.

Slowly, wonderingly, the girl drew near and called to Cavanagh, who turned quickly, crying out: "Don't come too close and don't be frightened. I set the place on fire myself. The poor old herder died last night and is decently buried in the earth, and now we are burning the cabin and every thread it contains to prevent the spread of the plague. Hugh and Swenson have divided their garments with me, and this blanket which I wear is my only coat. All that I have is in that cabin now going up in smoke—my guns, pictures, everything."

"How could you do it?" she cried out, understanding what his sacrifice had been.

"I couldn't," he replied. "The supervisor did it. They had to go. The cabin was saturated with poison. It had become to me a plague spot, and there was no other way to stamp it out. I should never have felt safe if I had carried out even so much as a letter."

Dumb and shivering with the chill of the morning, Lee Virginia drew nearer, ever nearer. "I am so sorry," she said and yearned toward him, eager to comfort him, but he warningly motioned her away.

"Please don't come any nearer, for I dare not touch you."

"But you are not ill?" she cried out, with a note of apprehension in her voice.

He smiled in response to her question. "No; I feel nothing but weariness and a little depression. I can't help feeling somehow as if I were burning up a part of myself in that fire—the saddle I have ridden for years, my guns, ropes, spurs. Everything relating to the forest is gone, and with it my youth. I have been something of a careless freebooter myself, I fear, but that is all over with now." He looked her in the face with a sad and resolute glance. "The forest service made a man of me, taught me to regard the future. I never accepted responsibility till I became a ranger, and in thinking it all over I have decided to stay with it, as the boys say, 'till the spring rains.'"

"I am very glad of that," she said.

"Yes; Dalton thinks I can qualify for the position of supervisor, and Redfield may offer me the supervision of this forest. If he does I will accept it—if you will go with me and share the small home which the supervisor's pay provides. Will you go?"

In the light of his burning cabin and in the shadow of the great peaks Lee Virginia could not fail of a certain largeness and dignity of mood. She neither blushed nor stammered as she responded, "I will go anywhere in the world with you."

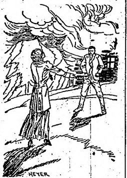
He could not touch so much as the hem of her garment, but his eyes embraced her as he said, "God bless you for the faith you seem to have in me!"

Redfield's voice interrupted with hearty clamor. "And now, Miss Virginia, you go back and rustle some breakfast for us all. Swenson, bring the horses in and harness my team. I'm going to take these women down the canyon. And, Ross, you'd better saddle up as soon as you feel rested and ride across the divide and go into camp in that little old cabin by the dam. [illegible] you'll have to be [illegible] a few days, I reckon, [illegible] you're coming out. [illegible] to the Fork and [illegible] made ready for you, [illegible] the doctor go up there [illegible] put you straight. If [illegible] be sick we'll want you where we can look after you. Isn't that [illegible] Virginia?"

"Indeed it is," replied the girl earnestly.

"But I'm not going to be sick," retorted Cavanagh. "I refuse to be sick."

"Quite right," replied Redfield, "but all the same we want you where we can get at you and where medical aid of the right sort is accessible. I'm going to fetch my bed over here and put you into it. You need rest."



"I WILL GO ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD WITH YOU."

Lee still lingered after Redfield left them. "Please do as Mr. Redfield tells you," she pleaded, "for I shall be very anxious till you get safely down the mountains. If that poor old man has any relatives they ought to be told how kind you have been. You could not have been kinder to one of your own people."

These words from her had a poignancy of meaning which made his reply difficult. His tone was designedly light as he retorted: "I would be a fraud if I stood here listening to your praise without saying, without confessing, how deadly weary I got of the whole business. It was simply that there was nothing else to do. I had to go on."

Her mind still dwelt on the tragic event. "I wish he could have had some kind of service. It seems sort of barbarous to bury him without any one to say a prayer over him. But I suppose that was impossible. Surely some one ought to mark his grave, for some of his people may come and want to know where he lies."

He led her thoughts to pleasanter paths. "I am glad you are going with the supervisor. You are going, are you not?"

"Yes, for a few days, till I'm sure you're safe."

"I shall be tempted to pretend being sick just to keep you near me," he was saying when Redfield returned, bringing his sleeping couch. Unrolling this under a tree beside the creek, the supervisor said, "Now, get into that."

Cavanagh resigned Lee with a smile. "Good night," he said. "Oh, but it's good to remember that I shall see you tomorrow!"

With a happy glance and a low "Goodby" she turned away.

Laying aside his blanket and his shoes, Cavanagh crept into the snug little camp bed. "Ah," he breathed, with a delicious sense of relief, "I feel as if I could sleep a week!" And in an instant his eyes closed in slumber so profound that it was barren even of dreams.

CHAPTER XXII.

OUT OF QUARANTINE INTO HEAVEN.

When Cavanagh awoke it was noon, and Swenson, the guard, was standing over him. "I'm sorry, but it's time to be moving," he said. "It's a long ride over there."

"What time is it?" inquired Cavanagh, with some bewilderment.

"Nearly noon. I've got some coffee ready. Want some?"

"Do I? Just watch me!" And he scrambled out of his bed with vigor and stretched himself like a cat, exclaiming, "Wow, but it does feel good to know that I am out of jail!"

Going down to the stream, he splashed his face and neck in the clear cold water, and the brisk rubbing which followed seemed to clear his thoughts as well as sharpen his appetite.

"You seem all right so far," hazarded the guard.

"I am all right, and I'll be all right tomorrow, if that's what you mean," replied Cavanagh. "Well, now, pack up, and we'll pull out."

For a few moments after he mounted his horse Cavanagh looked about the place as if for the last time, now up at the hill, now down at the meadow and last of all at the stream. "I hope you'll enjoy this station as much as I have, Swenson. It's one of the prettiest on the whole forest."

Together they zigzagged up the side of the hill to the north, and then, with Cavanagh in the lead, followed by his pack horse, they set up the long lateral moraine which led by a wide circle through the wooded park toward the pass. The weather was clear and cold. The wind bit, and Cavanagh, scantily clothed as he was, drew his robe close about his neck, saying: "I know now how it feels to be a blanket Indian. I must say I prefer an overcoat."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, MAY 26 1911.

Our character is our will for what we will we are.

"World Wide Peace" is a favorite theme with many writers, orators and statesmen. It must and will come.

A good sign of the times it is when a man like Boss Cox of Cincinnati finds it necessary to remove himself from the political arena.

The man who is willing to do nothing in this world but for personal gain bequeathes nothing to the world. It were better for him had he not lived at all.

According to Alexander Irvine the man who is a socialist for the benefit of his fellow-man is a true socialist, while the man who is a socialist because, if that party were in power he would get more than he gets now, is a fake.

Cultivate the habit of reading and you will never be lonesome. A good book is a good friend. Be jealous of what you read, in this day and age there is so much written in books that instead of instructing and building up the mind, it degenerates and tears down.

One good book thoroughly read wil do you more good than 100 poor ones. The choice of reading matter requires much care, but anyone who will study the matter, will soon be able to pick out the best with little trouble.—Herald Rustler.

Uncle John, who for nineteen years has smiled his way through the shadows in this vale of tears, believes the time is fast approaching when he will be able to enjoy God's sunshine out in the great free world. But very few of the men that were here when he first came, still remain; one might count them on one's fingers. He has seen hundreds of unfortunate ones enter, pay their penalty and depart. Some few there were who have ended their days here, and sad to say, others who must.

Through all these years he has labored and waited patiently for the day of his freedom to dawn; always hoping, but so far in vain, that it might be soon. He does not ask for pity or sympathy, he merely asks for one more chance, just a chance to make good.

He may have sinned greatly; but ought nineteen years of repentance wipe out the blot of any sin?

We who know old Uncle John, have nothing but good words for him; he is our friend; he is everyone's friend, and we all would rejoice to see him happy once more.

Unselfish, generous, unassuming, the days, weeks months and years pass over him, and find him hoping, forever hoping.—Mirror Stillwater.

The highest duty of an editor is to battle with wrong. This of course brings him in conflict with wrong doers and they are apt to show their spite in many ways. It is quite common for the thin skinned or wounded to rush into the office and shout "stop my paper!" This class is pointedly shown up in the following fashion: A certain man hit his toe against a pebble, and fell head long to the ground. He was vexed, and under influence of anger and selfsufficiency he kicked mother earth right saucily, imperturable gravity, he looks to see the earth itself dissolve and come to naught. But the earth remained and only his poor foot was injured in the encounter. This is the way of man. An article in the newspaper touches him in a weak spot, and forthwith he sends to stop his paper. With great complacency he looks to see the crash, when he finds he only hit his toe against a world that does not perpetually feel the shock, and injures nothing but himself.

No sensible editor expects to please everybody. Such an editor lays no claim to infallibility, and may at tims fall into error. But an outspoken, independent journal, aiming to suport the right and attack the wrong, is such a power for good in any community that well-balanced minds will look over the little faults in view of the greater benefits conferred. An editor who is afraid to speak out on public questions for fear of offending somebody, may have an easy time of it, but he will never amount to much as a leader of opinion. Thoughtful people will generally honor independence; and for every subscriber lost in hustling for right he will likely find two to take the place. This is according to the law of compensation.—New Folden Review.

THE PLAY AND COMPANY ARE PERFECTION

Speaking of "The Climax," which is to be presented to our theatre patrons very soon, a reviewer says: "But no words can portray the beauty or tell of the exquisite charm that permeates the play. It is daintily touched here and there with an artistic brush and radiates and sparkles until it is bedewed with tears. The atmosphere of home, the wholesome idea, the sweet Italian music and the clear, beautiful wording make it an uplift; a play that to be seen rouses noble thought and purposes.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

Attention is called to the fact that it is not too late yet to plant corn. Some seed corn can still be had at this office.

The last session of the legislature passed two laws, attention to which I desire to especially at this time, to direct our common school patrons and school officers. They are Chapter 207, H. F. 210, relating to consolidation of school districts and Chapter 60, H. F. 108 relating to State aid for public schools.

A careful persual of these laws will aid us in solving some very important problems for our schools. We deserve to promote and better school facilities and conditions wherever possible, and these laws present some possibilities, advantages of which may be taken and utilized for our own good. Kindly look up the Minnesota Law Supplement and study the subjects of school consolidation and State Aid and a clearer understanding of these subjects will be the result and actions taken at Annual meeting.

The State Summer school will not begin until June 26th, for a few weeks session. Let teachers prepare for a full attendance and application for the work at hand.

Respectfully submitted,
E. A. Mostue,
Supt. of Schools.

The reservation is thirsty for rain. I wonder how long the clouds are going to keep away.

Mrs. Geo. Wold called at Anstad last week. Glad to see her improving.

A crowd of Anstad people was to Germantown last Sunday and returned to Theo. Vigenstad's and had a grand time.

Martin and Iyer Westby and P. Kolstad visited at Tharalseth's last Sunday.

Mr. Isacson returned home last week.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. and Mrs. Kjeverstad are going to leave the country as we don't have more people than we need.

One of the prominent young ladies around Anstad called out east some where last week, one evening. The young folks decided to go for a walk. But be careful, boys, Henry might get after you, and you young man had better be careful too, the schoolma'am may be back pretty soon and find her radishes all gone.

Mr. Kalstad has broke up quite a field. Now he is going to Thief River Falls to get his wife home. They will plant garden—going some alright

LEAVITTS' LETTER.

"It is fair to accuse Mr. Whittier of 'clinging to his office' when he believes he has been unjustly attacked and when the law says he shall not be removed until after a hearing before the Board of Control upon written charges? Is not Mr. Whittier acting clearly within his rights and doing just what you and I would do under such circumstances?

"Again referring to the editorial, you say:

"Governor Eberhart does not mince matters in advising the Board of Control that Whittier must resign or be dismissed."

"Do you wish your readers to understand that Governor Eberhart 'does not mince matters' in advising the Board of Control to ignore or disobey the law by summarily discharging Mr. Whittier without a hearing by the board upon written charges when the law positively forbids such action?

"Again I quote:

"Unfortunately it seems accepted that the investigation by the legislature is not a trial within the meaning of the state.

"The Dispatch would champion the cause of the worst criminal ever born or allowed to live in our state in demanding that he should have a fair trial, as provided by law, before being condemned. Should not Mr. Whittier at least be accorded as fair treatment? Would the Dispatch, if arrested for criminal libel, consent for one moment to be tried under such circumstances or submit to a conviction on such testimony as a whole as was allowed to be received by the legislative committee and upon which Mr. Whittier's condemnation is sought? I think not.

"No more than one per cent of those who had been immates of the Red Wing institution were called before the committee, as witnesses by the parties pushing the investigation, and that one per cent was, as a rule, the sifting of the siftings by the police, juvenile courts and probation officers, of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Dulth, from the worst elements in these cities. Had the prosecution been after the truth, they would also have called the other and better class of former inmates of the institution.

"Mr. Whittier was urged by his friends to call a hundred or two boys many of them now adults, who live in the Twin cities, occupying positions of trust and responsibility honored and respected by their fellow and who served their time at the institution without 'spanking' and owe all they have and are to the good accomplished for them at the institution under Mr. Whittier's supervision and who have none but words of love and praise to call them, and why? He said in substance:

"'These boys are now making good. They occupy positions of trust. They have sown their wild oats and are now honorable citizens of these two cities. The fact that they were at Red Wing is not known by their employers and associates; or if known has been forgotten. If I call them here, it will open up their past history and may cause loss of position, of standing in the community, courage hope and result in their downfall and utter ruin. I had rather take my chances with the legislature than be responsible for such results'. And he was right.

"Would the Dispatch wish to have a man actuated by such principles drawn and quartered by a dishonorable discharge from his official business without the hearing accorded him by the law under which he received his appointment? Surely not.

"Once again you say:

"'In what he has said since the adjournment of the legislature and in asking that he be retained at the head of the institution, Mr. Whittier has furnished the best reason why his usefulness is at an end. He virtually says he will abandon his own ideas and theories and run the school as the board may direct so long as he is permitted to stay. He told the legislative committee there was but one way to conduct the school and [illegible]at was his way. Now he is will[illegible] to adopt such methods as the [illegible] approves and believes the [illegible] can be conducted successfully [illegible] they may be.

"Q[illegible] naturally Superintendent [illegible] desires to preserve his offi[illegible] the length to whic[illegible] will go for that purpose should condemn him. He is willing to be wrong in theory and practice; he is willing to abandon the flogging he declared was necessary; he is willing to change from the system he asserted was right and necessary to that which the board shall dictate, if he is permitted to stay. He seems willing to do anything but resign, and that is the one thing he should do.'

"And again you condemn without a hearing. The law says:

"'The Board of Control shall send to such officers (superintendents) such recommendations in regard to the management and improvement of the institutions as may be necessary or advisable, and the board is vested with power to enforce such recommendations and directions.'

"Mr. Whittier, in full accord with the letter and spirit of the law, says:

"'Whatever directions the Board of Control give concerning the management of the institution will be faithfully carried out.'

"The Dispatch charges that in so saying 'Mr. Whittier has furnished the best reason why his usefulness is at an end. He virtually says he will abandon his own ideas and theories and run the school as the board directs,' when the law specifically states that he shall do so. It seems to me the best possible evidence that his usefulness is not at an end, when he is willing to sacrifice 'his own ideas and theories' and in obeying the instructions of the Board of Control obey also the law.

"In another part of the same issue containing the editorial in question, your reporter says: 'The question of what action the governor can take if the board refuses to dismiss Whittier, was discussed freely in the capitol this morning. The matter is solely in the hands of the board and if it decides to retain Mr. Whittier despite the protests of the governor, the governor may remove the refractory board members. The law gives him the right to remove them 'for cause'.

"This would indicate that in the opinion of the Dispatch the members of the Board of Control become 'refractory' when they refuse to remove an official because the governor orders it done.

Nowhere in the Board of Control law is the governor authorized or empowered to remove an appointee of the Board of Control, and hence he has no right to order such removal. They can be removed only by the Board of Control when, in its judgment, not on the impulse of the governor, just cause for such removal exists. Had the law intended to give the governor authority to remove the appointees of the board, it would have so stated. The intent of the law was the reverse. To give him such authority would be to plunge the appointment of every employe of the state institutions into public politics. If the governor can order the dismissal of one employe, he can order the dismissal of all, appoint a Board of Control subservient to his wishes, who in turn, would be required to appoint his supporters to positions vacated, and so turn the whole system into a worse political machine than it was before the Board of Control came into existance. It is true the law authorizes the governor to remove members of the Board of Control for malfeasance or nonfeasance in office, or for any cause that renders him ineligible to appointment, or incapable or unfit to discharge the duties of his office. Will the governor hold that any member of the board beomes so disqualified because of failure to agree with him in a matter his oath of office requires him to determine for himself, or refusing to carry out instructions he may give which are unauthorized by law and which he has no moral right to attempt to impose?

Every member of the Board of Control from its orgaization to the appointment of the investigating committee, knew that corporal punishment was being administered at the Red Wing school, and permitting it, were as much responsible for it as thought it had been introduced by their direct order. For any member or ex-member of the Board of Control to claim otherwise would be a serious reflection upon his veracity and intelligence. It was further the business and duty of every member to know if there were existing abuses there and to investigate all charges that might be made. If during the ten years of the Board of Control, there have existed conditions and abuses at that institution calling for public condemnation, the Board of Control is more to blame for it than Mr. Whittier, or at least, equally so, and if Mr. Whittier is entitled to be removed, the Board of Control should go with him. I can conceive of no more reprehensible, cowardly act than the removal of Mr. Whittier by the Board of Control for reasons stated and the failure to tender their own resignations to the governor at the same time. Mr. Whittier should not be made a scapegoat by those who have neither the courage nor the inclination to attack the Board of Control.

"I was a member of the Board of Control during most of the time covered by the so-called investigation. I acted in many investigations of complaints made personally and through the daily papers, and know of my own knowledge that no such state of affairs existed there during the eight years of my service as is claimed by the report of the investigating committee, and if the matter could be taken into the courts and determined upon evidence admitted by the court the charges would be disproved. What changes, if any, may have taken place in conditions there during the last two years, I know not. If I am in error in my belief, I am ready to shoulder my share of the blame and criticism, and to bear my official sins into the wilderness. My experience has taught me that corporal punishment is necessary under many circumstances. I believe in it as a corrective measure when other remedies fail. I know it was being administered while I was a member of the board. Not one iota of trustworthy evidence was offered during the investigation to show that anyone had been injured at the school through its use, and I have no knowledge or information that leads me to believe now, that the punishment was necessary and in the interest of good order, discipline and reformation. If I were still a member of the Board of Control, I would never order Mr. Whittier, or any other capable and efficient officer, removed from his position for cause where I was equally to blame with him without removing myself at the same time. Neither would I assist in the unjust removal if an official on the unlawful order or demand of a governor to save my official skin."

THE VERY BEST EVER

The company which will present "The Climax," the very best comedy offered the public in several years, has a really wonderful array of dramatic talent enlisted in the ranks of its organization. The management does not believe in the common system of "one or two giving the whole show," but have an organization that is undoubtedly one of the strongest comedy casts ever brought together.

THE PLACE TO GO

Does your wife love amusement? Do you? Then send her out for an evening, or what's the matter with you escorting her to see that enjoyable comedy, "The Climax"? You wil enjoy it, and it wil be remove that tired look from your face. You will both feel beter, having seen it.

We have it on good authoritythat the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company, whose articles of incorporation we are printing this week and who recently bought up the Sash and Door Factory, will start up in about one week more. Preparatory work is being pushed with all possible speed. All the incorporating parties, namely, C. O. G. Johnson, E. B. Charlson and C. G. Dosland of Moorhead and T. Ostbye and Ludvig Skjold of Fargo were here during the week. Some of them hurried back on Wednesday, while the others remained to push things through. We understand Mr. Ostbye will be manager and expects that after he gets things running right he will employ about 20 men.

School Notes.

State Examinations begin Friday of this week and continue throughout next week. Necessarily, this prevents the continuance of the regular program in the high school and eighth grade.

Next Tuesday being Memorial Day and a legal holiday, there will be no session of school. Arrangements are being made for the observance of the occasion by the band committee and the school children will participate in the event.

Misses Ekholm and Porter will teach next year at Chehalis, Washington. The town is within seventeen miles of Windlock, where Miss Cipra will be located.

Earl R Vandyke is the name of the gentleman who has been engaged to teach agriculture and allied subjects next year. He has had charge of similar work for two years at Iron River, Michigan, and was re elected but prefers to teach in Minnesota.

The following is the program for the closing days of this school year: The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. Adolph B. Roseland of the United Lutheran Church at the Auditorium on the evening of Sunday, May 28th, services beginning at 8 p. m. The eighth grade graduation exercises will take place at the Lincoln assembly room Wednesday evening, May 31st. The class day program will be presented on Thursday evening at the Auditorium by the senior class, and commencement will occur at the same place on Friday evening following. Hon. Charles E. Elmquist, one of the state railway commissioners of Minnesota, will deliver the customary address. These exercises are free to the public and everybody is urgently requested to attend them all.

The monthly literary program, which is prepared in turn by the high school classes, will be presented at the high school next Friday evening at 8:30. A small charge of 10 cents admission will be asked. The program will be of a memorial nature. All old soldiers are invited and will be admitted free.

Some pupils will necessarily fail of promotion at the close of this school year. Various reasons may be assigned to account for these failures, but if regular attendance more than anything else prevents satisfactory progress. The report cards which the children will take home with them next week will give all particulars as to the school work for the year.

Careful inquiry at all colleges and normals in this and adjoining states where graduates of the local school are in attendance discloses the fact that not a single student is failing in his or her work this year. True, a few found the tasks difficult, but that was to be expected, but the success of the boys and girls is gratifying, particularly when it is known that many students were compelled to leave the state university this year because of failure to perform their work. Nearly all this delinquent list, which Registrar Pierce will supply on request, consists of graduates of the Minneapolis and St. Paul high schools. Every high school graduate of this or any other state high school is qualified to succeed at normal or college unless illness, homesickness or a "good time" intervenes to block study and progress.

UNITED CHURCH NOTICE

Adolph B. Roseland, Pastor.

Parochial school opens June 5th at 9 o'clock a. m.

Don't forget the services at the Auditorium next Sunday evening. Everybody welcome. Good music.

PLATFORM OF THE "Anti-Tuberculosis Party"

BY

IMMEDIATE MEASURES

First—The care of Consumptives.

We believe that every community should make provisions for the care of consumptives as the first and most important measure of prevention.

We declare that the following institutions are needed in the order named:

(a) A hospital for all stages of the disease, with separate provision for incipient cases and tuberculosis children; the hospital to maintain a farm in connection, so as to furnish employment for certain cases and also to reduce operating expenses. Provision to be made for day and night patients when the hospital is located near a large city.

There should be a hospital for every group of 100,000 people in each State. The hospital should begin with a bed capacity of 50, and the architect's plans should permit of enlargement if found necessary. As the death-rate in 1909 was 167.5 per 100,000 of population, 50 beds would accomodate practically all of the decedents for four months before death, nearly two-thirds of them for six months before death or one-third for the final year of life. As it would be impossible for a long period after the establishment of such a hospital to "round-up" all advanced cases in the group of 100,000 people, there would be room for some incipient and for bone and glandular cases. In but few of the larger cities can we hope to secure special hospitals for the latter. As the death-rate decreases it is possible in some communities, that the hospital would never need to be enlarged.

(b) Free dispensaries and visiting nurses are the second great need for the care of consumptives, and their most important work is to locate and supervise cases and to place them in the hospital. One dispensary and one or more nurses is needed in every town of 5,000 population and over, and when the above-mentioned group of 100,000 people living are living in one or more county, rural visiting nurses should work in conjunction with the hospital.

(c) We favor home relief and treatment of patients only in such places where there is no special hospital and in a few selected cases for special reasons.

We believe all such institutions should be erected and maintained with public moneys, and that the funds of anti-tuberculosis organizations should be expended in the effort to secure such action by organized government.

Second—Education.

While we believe that the care of consumptives is of first importance, we realize that it is impossible to secure the needed institutions without considerable agitation of the subject, and this agitation should be a part of the work of popular education for the prevention of tuberculosis. It is therefre necessary, in most communities, that the second step should become the first. We believe such educational work should be carried on by anti-tuberculosis organizations because they are free to demand hospital provision by municipalities, whereas an official bureau cannot always do so.

We favor a continuous campaign of education in all cities and States by groups of citizens organized for that purpose.

Third—Investigation.

Until such time as organized government will do so, we declare it the duty of an anti-tuberculosis organization to escertain the extent of the disease in its community and to investigate conditions favoring its development and spread, such as unsanitary housing, lodging-houses and factories and to make public the facts secured.

Fourth—Legislation.

We believe the legislation to secure needed institutions, and for the improvement of living and working conditions, and other measures for prevention, should be drafted and presented to legislative bodies by anti-tuberculosis organizations, and that such organizations should stimulate popular demand for their enactment.

Fifth—Gneral Measures.

We realize that the care of consumptives is but a palliatory measure and that tuberculosis cannot be stamped out until there is great improvement in the enviroment and habits of all of the people. We pledge ourselves to endeavor to secure such improvement by investigation, education and legislation.

We pledge our support to the movements for housing improvements for the abolition of child labor, and the restriction of the hours of labor of women; for the sanitation of factories and all similar efforts for the improvement of living and working conditions.

We declare tuberculosis to be a disease of poverty, and its eradication to be impossible until poverty is abolished.

We favor the careful physical examination of all children and the establishment of special schools for the tuberculosis.

We favor careful physical examination, at regular intervals, of everyone, especially workers in dangerous trades.

We favor the most rigid supervision of all consumptives through some modified form of the parole system so that no one may be permitted to spread infection.

We declare for the extension of parks and playgrounds, and promise our support to such a movement.

We believe that clean milk from healthy cattle is essential for the protection of the children.

We agree with Dr. Frederick Knight's dictum, that "the movement is not merely a fight to combat the disease in those already affected, or even to annihilate the germ, but to make the people immune to it. When they are no longer susceptible subjects the germ will cease to exist."

We declare it to be the duty of organized government to take over all anti-tuberculosis work so that the expense of same will be shared equally by all taxpayers instead of by the comparatively few who are generously inclined.

An Ironclad of 1585.

It is generally supposed that the first use of armor for battleships was during the Crimean war. As a matter of fact, the Dutch claim to have been the pioneers of ironclad building more than 300 years ago. During the famous siege of Antwerp by the Spaniards in 1585, says J. R. Hale in "Famous Sea Fights," the people of the city built a huge flat bottomed warship, armed with heavy iron plates, which they named the Finis Belli, a boastful expression of the hope that she would end the war. An old print of the Finis Belli shows a four masted ship with a high poop. But the vessel steered badly and eventually ran aground under the Spanish batteries and fell into the hands of their commander, the Duke of Parma. He kept the Finis Belli as a curiosity till the end of the siege.

New Kind of Flute.

"Drive me to King's Hall!" he said.

When, after a hard tussle, he had wedged himself and his instrument into the limited area of the cab, the driver cracked his whip and drove off.

They reached the hall. The musician alighted and took out a shilling.

"What's this?" demanded the driver.

"Your legal fare," said the musician.

"Yes, I know it's my legal fare for carrying you," retorted the jehu, with a direful glance at the bulky instrument, "but what about that there flute?"—London Answers.

NOW

All The Family Can Have

The More Than Merely "Guaranteed" Hose

The wonderful popularity of Everwear Hose for Men and Women has created a widespread demand for a Children's hose of the same quality. Fathers and Mothers say: "If I could only buy stockings for the children that would wear like my own Everwear all our hosiery troubles would be over."

So here you are, parents—the boys and girls can now have real Everwear Hosiery—made to wear where the wear comes most—the knees and legs being made to stand hard knocks as well as the heel and toe. They are made entirely of extra long staple cotton. The leg or body of the hose having twice the number of stitches permits them to stretch freely when needed. Yet the same Everwear standard—the fit, comfort and general elegance are maintained in the Children's hose.

Remember that Everwear is always sold under this guarantee: If any or all of six pairs shows a hole or tear within six months after date of purchase, new hose will be given free. Try six pairs for yourself and family. We have them in all the popular shadings.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

DO GHOSTS HAUNT SWAMPS?

No, Never. Its foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against in swamps and marshes, bayous, and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroys and casts out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "and I've had fine health ever since." Use this safe, sure remedy only, 50c at all Druggists.

SAVED CHILD FROM DEATH.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year. "wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., "we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctors medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, croup and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all Druggists.

JUDGMENT SALE

IN DISTRICT COURT

Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said da to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

W. J. LaBree,
Sheriff of Pennington,
County, Minnesota.
G. Halvorson, Esq.
Attorney for Plaintiff.

PROGRAM FOR SANGERFEST

Prepartions for the Sangerfest June 23, 24 & 25 Just About Completed.

Preparations for the Sangerfest at Thief River Falls June 23, 24 and 25 are now being pushed with vim and vigor. With the executive committees at the head issuing orders, the sub-committees must promptly respond or woe unto the ones who fail to do so. We are sparing no efforts in trying to make this sangerfest the grandest in the history of the association, a festival whereof Thief River Falls can justly be proud, and, with that in view, we feel confident that the loyal citizens of our city will take great pride in assisting us in making this affair a grand success, and receive the ticket-committee royally when they come around. The price of tickets will suit everybody's pocket book so no one need stay away on that account. We are not satisfied with only the citizens of Thief River Falls and immediate vicinity, but we are very desirous of seeing every one that possibly can within a radius of 50 to 100 miles of this place lay aside his daily doings to jubilate with us during the three mid summer days set aside for the sangerfest in our beautiful city. Following is a synopsis of the festival program:

FRIDAY, JUNE 23.

9:00 a. m.—Exchange of Greetings at headquarters.

Singers' headquarters—Antlers Club Rooms.

Concert hall—Auditorium.

Died Saturday

Mrs. Joe Halda, born Ethel Lang, passed away at her home here last Saturday morning at 2 o'clock at the early age of 37 years. The cause of death was peritonitis and deceased was sick only about three weeks. She had lived in Thief River Falls over twelve years and leaves behind to mourn her death five children besides her husband. The funeral was held Monday from the Catholic church, Fr. Adolph officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery northwest of the city.

Obituary

S. F. Giervahl of Highlanding came in to town yesterday and reported that a 23-year old invalid sister of his had died. Deceased has been an invalid since infancy and, we understand has dwelt at her brothers home. The funeral takes place today and interment will be at the cemetery near Highlanding.

HEALTH STATISTICS.

Health Statistics gathered by the United States census bureau which have been reported to the State Board of Health of Minnesota show that Traverse with a rate of 6-2 per thousand inhabitants, is the healthiest county in the state and indicate that Minnesota will have the honor of being one of the healthiest state in the Union. St. Paul with a rate of 11-9 is the healthiest city in America and Minneapolis, where the rate is 12-4 is second. Duluth's rate is 13-4.

MEMORIAL CELEBRATION

Good Program Rendered in Commemoration of National Heroes.

Bad weather conditions prevented carrying out the memorial program as was originally planned. Instead the whole thing was postponed till 3 p. m., and was then held in the Auditorium. The attendance was all that could be expected under the circumstances and the program as carried out was appropriate and good.

Rev. Boyden, of the Presbyterian church pronounced the invocation and benediction; the band led by Prof. Maxwell did itself proud in two selections, one before and one after the address of the day. The speaker of the day was attorney at law, H. O. Kjomme, who delivered a rousing oration, of which we will attempt to give extracts showing the main thoughts.

In introduction the speaker after calling attention to the fact that this year was the semi-centennial anniversary of the Civil War, dwelt briefly on the stupendous scale of the war, the numbers involved, battles fought and sacrifices required. Attention was then called to the fact that the North and South now are both unalterably in favor of perpetual union that "the blue and the gray have joined hands, and as brothers are facing the common problems of a common country." Whereupon the speaker continued:

"But our purpose in commemorating this day is primarily to give a tribute to the brave men and boys, living and dead who fought for the union, and to dwell on their splendid characters and notable achievments. We want their memory to live. We want to add our voices to the grand acclamation of history, and express our gratitude and admiration for their work, and our grief over the loss of the many wholaid the full measure of their sacrifice on the altars of their country.

• • • • • •

One thing that stands out prominently before us when we read the history of those stirring times and observe the characters of the defenders of the union, is the deep conviction, the sublime faith in the justice of their cause, that animated the soldiers of the North. They responded to the call of their country with faith as well as with courage. They fought and died not in a momentary burst of passion or in a mere transport on national enthusiasm. Their sacrifice was the deliberate decree of their convictions.

• • • • • •

And what a splendid spectacle those soldiers present. Their rock-ribbed stead-fastness, their firm and unyielding purpose, in defeat as unalterable as in victory; their masterly progress, their sublime sacrifice—display a deliberate, a mature, an invincible patriotism, the like of which the world never before had seen.

Surely America will be careless of her privileges, as well as unfaithful towards her obligations, if she fails to place the wreath of eternal memory around the men who died in her battles, and to honor as well the equally devoted sons who survived the conflict.

The warlike settlement of the great issue required a toll of life that is appalling. We stand agast before the necessity that claimed so great a sacrifice from the people of the country. The loss to the nation, the personal loss to its people, is one that can never be properly estimated, much less restored. Our wordy tribute, the nations unceasing memory can never blot out the deep and lasting wounds, he heart-burnings, occasioned by the loss of so many brave and promising citizens. Our minds turn instinstively to the future with the burning question: How much longer will the institution of war be tolerated by mankind, how soon will civilization find some less terrible method for settling its great issues. Let us hope that the Civil War, draining as it did the very life-blood of the nation, has marked the turning-point, and that America will ever be found foremost in demanding the total abolition of war, and the adoption of peaceable means for the settlement of international disputes.

But we have no reproaches. The civil war was a necessity, and the brave men and boys who stained its battlefields with their life-blood, who gave the country in fullest measure the benefit of their devotion and sacrifice was on the altars of their country and posterity.

Their lives they gave voluntarily, consecrated to the uplift of mankind, andthe betterment of human conditions. America must indeed be cold hearted, if she ever as long as a spark of national life remains, forgets to render them her tribute. Let her ever seek faltering and incomplete as the endeavor must be, to pay back in gratitude, some measure of the devotion they gave her. Let their final resting places ever be hallowed and doubly consecrated ground. And every recurring spring, on the day set apart for their remembrance, let the recollectio of their sublime sacrifice grow fresh and green anew; let the thought of their faith, the memory of their devotion, join with the blossoms in the meadow, the greening leaves of the trees, and with them unfailingly proclaim the season.

But we of the present generation have a peculiar duty and a preeminent privilege. We are fortunate in that we personally can come in touch with many of those who fought for the Union in the great war. We need not bridge the gap of eternity to render them our tribute.

Let us then on this day give the old veterans our personal thanks for what they did, before they too shall have joined their comrades in the encampment of the great beyond. Let us remember that in them we have the visible embodiment of the spirit of '61. Let us recall that in the time chosen for them by destiny, they met and nobly solved the problems placed before them, accomplished the great work alloted to them. It is not too much to day that we owe them too, a debt of eternal gratitude; that this proud nation, as it exists to-day, united and compact, with boundaries extending broadly and uninterruptedly from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, could never have survived but for the work they did, and for the patriotic zeal and conviction they displayed.

To my mind our foremost duty on Memorial day is a personal one that we owe to the men and boys of '61. But the day has also a broader significance. It is a national day. It marks a vital step in the history of the nation.I believe that memorial day is peculiarly a day of sentiment; but I believe that we should on this day open the springs of our feelings, and allow our patriotic emotions to embrace not only the brave soldiers who fought in the great war, but also the country, the Fatherland, for which they fought.

The issue confronting the nation and mankind in those days was a tremendous one. Our form of popular government was hardly more than an experiment. The eyes of monarchial Europe looked on it with disfavor, jealous of its strength and stability. Oppressed humanity the world over fastened its last hopes in the success of the republic. And had the South been victorious in the great conflict, had the union fallen, dismembered, the knell of popular liberty would have been sounded throughout the world.

From the nations own point of view the issue was equally tremendous. The great crisis in the nations history had come. The hour secretly feared by the founders of the nation, the hour of threatened dismemberment and disruption was at hand. The great question of states rights as opposed to federal rights, of the privilege of separation as opposed to the obligations of union, which had been heard mutteringly in the underground for years, suddenly, aroused by the underlying issue of slavery, assumed commanding proportions, and demanded final settlement. The turning point in the nations career had arrived, and humanity awaited the outcome.

The nation rose equal to the great test. The faith of the nation, the belief in its providential right to be and remain a union, intact and inseperable, took form, grew in intensity and swept the North from East to West. But not until the country had been steeped in the horrors and misery of internicine warfare, not until it had been compelled to drink to the dregs the bitter cup offered it, was the great issue satisfied and settled, but settled it was, and that for all times. America was saved. The United States were vindicated. The inherent strength and stability of our form of government was established, to be questioned no more by the critics of the republic. The confidence and belief of humanity that America was unalterably and fundamentally opposed to slavery and oppression of every kind, was restored and strengthened, and popular liberty received a new impetus the world over.

Can we in view of the magnificent manner in which our country met the great issue, stood the great test, neglect to give it, on this day of all days, our patriotic tribute. Memorial day is the nations second great Holiday, the second day of independance. It marks events which fulfilled, rounded and perpetuated the work of the founders. It signalizes the arrival of the nation at the age of maturity, when it took up the heaviest responsibility and burdens, that could be imposed on a nation, and discharged them manfully and nobly.

Memorial day means more. It marks the time when the citizens of our nation were tested, were weighed and found not wanting. It marks the time when history placed her great stamp of approval on the character and make-up of American citizenship.

Memorial day means more. It marks the period when patriotic sentiment in this country was crystalized. It marks the erection of a vast store-house of patriotic example, of sublime sacrifice and devotion to country, of exalted citizenship, upon which posterity may gaze with profit and admiration to the end of time.

As an instance of the sublime sacrifice and devotion to duty that was displayed by the citizen-soldiery of the North, the story of the deathless First Minnesota at Gettysburg, was told, how that small regiment with a loss of over four-fifths of its members, charged and held at bay an entire army of the rebels, and gained the few minutes that were needed for reinforcement to the wing to arrive. Continuing the speaker said:

"Let us then on Memorial day as well as on the fourth of July give vent to our patriotic emotions.

• • • • • •

Let us not forget to give a tribute to the government of the period, the government that rose equal to the great task before it. Particularly let us not on this day fail to pay a tribute to the memory of him, who in those trying days, mounted step by step to his exalted place as the greatest American, him, who nobly led his country thru its test of war and fire, him, who, when his work was accomplished, and victory won, was laid an unnecessary sacrifice on the alters of the country. Let the name of Abraham Lincoln, be this day a sacred name; let us stir the glowing embers of love and memory that make that name the supreme name of the nation, the embodiment of all that is noble, virtuous and patriotic in American citizenship.

The great lessons of the civil war to American citizenship and to the nation at large, are obvious. I shall not dwell upon them. Only this thought in closing: The generation of the period of the Civil War nobly fulfilled the demands of its times. Let us see to that we as creditably fulfill those of our own. Let the same patriotic devotion, the same high-minded sense of duty, the same singleness of purpose and maturity of conception—let the same spirit ever impel us as impelled that great generation to do its work. If it does so our country is safe, the republic will endure, the noble heritage of our liberties will descend to posterity as we received it, intact and uncorrupted, unassailable and invincible, a blessing to humanity forever.'"

Will Visit Old Home

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Sponheim, accompanied by their daughters, Clara and Hanah expect to leave here Sunday for an extended visit of some three or four months to various places in Norway.

Mr. Sponheim left Norway some forty-three years ago and this will be his first visit to his old home in the province of Hardanger, from which province Mrs. Sponheim also came.

The trip means a great deal in the way of additional education for the two young ladies, Hannah and Clara, who are among this year's graduates from our local High School and who consider the trip by far the best graduation present obtainable.

Baccalaureate Sermon

The baccalaureate sermon this year was delivered by Rev. A. Roseland at the Auditorium Sunday evening to a large audience. The graduates and faculty attended in a body.

The sermon contained some good advice that our graduates would do well to heed.

Among the musical numbers of the service were vocal solos by Mrs. Melby and by L. O. Lasseson, and a violin solo by Arnold Bjerkhoel.

"Tigers'" Dance

Last Tuesday evening the "Tiger" base-ball aggregation of this city showed what they could do in the way of getting up a benefit ball. In spite of the rather threatening weather there collected an immense crowd of young people. No less then 80 couples were in attendance and all reported having had a glorious time. We hope the exchequore of the organization now holds the "Spondulix" that will make the team go.

Lake McDonald, Glacier National Park

Lake McDonald, conceded to be one of the most beautiful water spots in the world, is located in Glacier National Park in northwestern Montana. This district was created into a National Playground by the Sixty-first U. S. Congress, and since that time has been given much publicity through the columns of the leading newspapers and magazines as well as the Great Northern Ry. in its "See America First" movement.

Lake McDonald lies in the southwestern part of the Park, is 12 miles long and 1½ miles wide and is surrounded on all sides by high pine covered mountains. The principal accommodations in the Park at the present time are those located on this lake, and arrangements can be made at these hotels for one day, two day or longer trips through this wonderful region with competent guides at reasonable rates.

This new Park sooner or later will surely come into its own as a big drawing card for tourists.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS

Lorimer, The Tariff, and The Standard Oil Decision.

Washington, D. C., June 1st, 1911—It is generally admitted that Lorimer is making his last stand, and in the opinion of many the Illinois Senator will resign rather than permit the question of his retaining his seat to come to a vote. With the introduction of new evidence and the reopening of the case even the closest friends of Lorimer admit that the situation so far as he is concerned is decidedly gloomy. The anti-Lorimer forces believe that they now have more than sufficinent votes to oust him, and as the matter is more carefully gone into and additional facts brought to light it is probable that the anti-Lorimer strength will be considerably augmented. It is just possible that the case will not come to a vote at this session at all, in which event it will be carried over to the next session. But there is a strong feeling that Lorimer will voluntarily resign rather than meet what seems certain defeat when the matter comes up for final decision at the bar of the Senate. The new evidence secured as a result of the Illinois investigation conducted by the State legislature is considered very damaging so far as Lorimer is concerned. It has had great weight with some of the Senators who formerly were on his side, or who were doubtful as to the propriety of voting him out of the Senate.

••••••••

Congressman Sydney Anderson of Minnesota believes that the Tariff Board should get a move on itself and give Congress the benefit of the information it has in its possession relative to the woolen schedule. The Minnesota representative has recently introduced a resolution in the House which is destined to create some stir before many moons. The resolution, which has been referred to the House Committee on Ways and Means, calls upon the President of the United States to transmit to the House of Representatives all information secured by the Tariff Board relating to the various articles and commodities named in Schedule K, known as the "wool schedule." Mr. Anderson points out that the Board has had ample time to make it its investigation and report to Congress. The information is desirable at this time in view of the possible revision of the wool schedule. Anderson anticipates that when the resolution comes up in the House the Republican standpatters will balk at the proposition and refuse to support it. The Anderson resolution will therefore furnish an excellent opportunity to place this element of the party on record, if it does not accomplish anything else.

••••••••

The National Progressive Republican League believes that some, if not all the five principles of its platform, will figure prominently in the platforms adopted by the national conventions of the different political parties next year. One feature of the League's principles is the Presidential Preference law, which, although it must be enacted by the States, has a national bearing because it provides for a popular expression of choice for candidates for President and Vice-President. This Presidential Preference law is necessarily a part of the direct primary law. Popular election of United States Senators is also closely related to direct primaries. It is therefore expected that one or both of the leading parties will make these principles prominent planks in their platforms. The National Progressive Republican league finds ample reason for continuing its campaign in behalf of the popular election of Senators, in the failure of the Colorado legislature to elect a successor to the late Senator Hughes, the long delay in the election of Senators in New York, West Virginia and Iowa. It is pointed out that Oregon legislatures have elected two Senators under the Oregon plan without a moment's delay, the men elected having first received a popular endorsement at the polls. Senator Clapp, who, in the language of Senator La Follette, "always does a good job" in his public talks on popular government, recently addressed the West Virginia legislature on behalf of the enactment of a direct primary law, for the consideration of which Governor Glasscock called a special session. The indications point strongly to the adoption by the Senate of the Borah resolution providing fo rthe direct election of United States Senators. The resolution has several more friends than last session, when it will be recalled it

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

The wonder of baking powders—Calumet. Wonderful in its raising powers—its uniformity, its never failing results, its purity.

Wonderful in its economy. It costs less than the high-price trust brands, but it is worth as much. It costs a trifle more than the cheap and big can kinds—it is worth more. But proves its real economy in the baking.

Use CALUMET—the Modern Baking Powder.

HALF MILLION LOSS BY INCENDIARY FIRE

Firebugs Start Several Blazes at Dubuque, Ia.

Dubuque, Ia., May 28.—A large part of the yards of the Standard Lumber company was destroyed by what is believed to have been a fire of incendiary origin. The loss will aggregate half a million dollars. For hours, while the firemen battled with the flames, it was feared that the mill and every foot of lumber would be destroyed, entailing a loss of several million dollars.

In the midst of the burning lumber district stood a shot tower nearly two hundred feet high. This early took fire and flames burst from every window.

The fire at the Standard lumber yards followed three other fires, all of an apparently incendiary nature.

Revised losses of all fires are: Standard Lumber company, $500,000; Carr, Ryder & Adams company, sash factory, $2,000; Flick box factory, $500; Key City Furniture company, $300.

Endorses Aldrich Plan.

Kansas City, May 26.—Secretary MacVeagh of the treasury, speaking before the assembled bankers' associations of Missouri and Kansas, endorsed the plan for monetary reform proposed by Senator Aldrich and made a plea for all bankers to support it in a public spirited, nonpartis way.

Did He Get Off?

The famous Liddell, who, with Scott compiled Liddell and Scott's lexicon, was dean of Christchurch college, Oxford. It was whispered in regard to the lexicon that Liddell provided the money and Scott the brains. A young undergraduate was haled before the dean for some misdemeanor. "I hear, Mr. ——, that you have a pretty wit for impromptu verse," said the dean. "If you will write one on the lexicon I will let you off." The young man thought a moment and then said:

"There's a lexicon written by Liddell and Scott.
Some of it's good, and some of it's not.
The part that is good was written by Scott.
The part that was written by Liddell is rot

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1911.

They dedicated a magnificent $9,000,000 public library building, erected on a $20,000,000 lot, in New York city Tuesday. An elaborate machine of police arrangements had been built to handle the crowd, but lo, there was no crowd. The New York papers that we saw tucked the news on an inside page, and the event would have scarcely stirred a ripple had not the president of the United States honored the event bymaking a speech in person.

When they dedicate out in Lonesomehurst a public library costing a thousand or two dollars and built of simple wood, the funds secured by giving farmers suppers, agriculture is suspended for the day, while all the inhabitants gather in solemn rows of breathless listeners.

The vast world of books, those golden accretions of human experience in all the ages, the very cream and quintessence of human wisdom, seems remote from the frothy sparkle of the metropolis.

When your life is built and rooted in the mere physical sensations of the moment, when the morning paper is ancient history at 9 a. m., the words of Earth's sages can not only possibly be of any significance.

The only real vital problems are, what are you going to have for dinner and what particular brand of human tinsel you propose to see at the theatre to-night.

You will find few captains of industry delving in those shelves, for the broader view of human relations that would so sweeten life for their employees.

Students of city life say that the great masterpieces of fiction are read quite as much in the slums as on the avenues. Ifthis be true, the influence of this great institution is not measured by the number of readers visible at its tables. Many a little toddler whose chin can scarcely reach the counter, will bring into a sordid home pictures of another type of life. These will fire the young people with a determination to acquire for themselves a fair share of earth and sunlight.

THE PASSING OF DIAZ.

The retirement last week of President Diaz of Mexico is in striking contrast to the historic farewell of our national hero, George Washington.

Mr. Diaz takes his downfall with ill grace. It has required the subterranean mutter of the mob to draw it out of his like pulling teeth. Although he has been president eight terms, and ought to concede that there should be more than one man in Mexico able to lead its destinies, he cannot admit any fact imputable to him which may have caused the revolution.

George Washington, on the other hand, after leading American destinies but two terms as president, ardently insisted on his own retirement.

"I have not a wish" he wrote "to mix again in the great world, or to partake of its politics. The remnant of my life will be secluded as much as possible from the noisy and bustling world."

He looked to his seclusion at Mount Vernon as a haven of repose from an anxious and agitated life.

From the above will be seen the difference between a leader whose soul was moved only by patriotism, and one whose patriotism was tinged by some stain of personal ambition.

Honestly anxious for Mexico's progress, Mr. Diaz's opinions were so warped by his lust for power, that his conception of what Mexico needed was a kind of ready made government, distributed in canned packages, all of them sealed and stamped with his name and authority.

Revolutions have long been regarded as the national sport in the Southern republics, and their elections, congresses, and constitutions have regarded as merely the stage play by which autocratic monarchs have assumed the fake forms of democracy. Hence it has been assumed that Mexico was incapable of anything better.

While this is true of Central America and Venezuela, yet the great republics of Brazil, Argentine, Chile, and Peru have made long steps toward more stable and democratic ideas. Had Diaz listened to his friends had he been more like George Washington, he would have gradually trained his people to assume the responsibilities of a sovereign people.

NOBLEST ROMAN OF THEM ALL.

John Marshall Harlan of Kentucky at the ripe age of 78, after 34 years on the bench of the supreme court of the United States, stands out as the grandest figure of that tribunal, and as one of the grandest figures of these stormy times. Alone of the nine justices, he saw clearly and spoke bravely on that memorable day, May 15, 1911. He said, in effect:

"Labor comes here and asks you to put something into the safety appliance act that congress did not put in. Labor speaks for human lives. You deny the petition.

"Organized dollars comes here and asks you to put something into the Sherman anti-trust law that congress did not put in. Organized dollars speaks for human greed. You grant the petition, and that upon the same day, almost in the same breath, that you deny the identical request of labor. You have made the judge the legislator, and your legislation is against men but in favor of boney."

If Justice Harlan were 20 or 30 years younger, he would logically be the next president of the United States. If Justice Hughes had been as wise and brave as the great Kentucky jurist, nothing could have kept him from the White House. He has youth, a fine executive record, and he comes from pivotal New York, but when opportunity beckoned, Hughes was facing the wrong way—toward Wall St. As Dr. Samuel Johnson would have said: "And that's the end on't."—Daily News.

THE CUCKOO PARENT.

The cuckoo, you know, deposits its eggs in the nests of other birds, which is the point of Col. Roosevelt's remarks at a recent function in the De Witt Clinton high school, New York.

"I cannot express my weary contempt for the cuckoo type of parent father or mother, who deposits the child at the school door and then goes away with the feeling that all the future physical, mental and moral welfare of the child lies in the hands of the teacher."

Doubtless there are such parents, and they deserve to be sharply reminded of their folly and neglect. The teacher who can take the place of a child's father and mother has yet to be born.

Don't be a "cuckoo parent!"—St. Paul Daily News.

WHEN YOUR WIFE'S FACE IS SLAPPED.

Mr. Roosevelt raised the question in the last Outlook, as to what you would do if someone slapped your wife's face. Saying that the man who would go to law about it, instead of forthwith punishing the offender,would be regarded with derision, he argues that there are some international differences that can not be arbitrated.

Mr. Roosevelt's argument will seem more or less convincing according to the statute and muscular development of his readers. If you weigh 200 pounds, if your muscles are hard, the statement may seem axiomatic.

But some of us are not fortunate enough to combine these favorable conditions. We may weigh but 150 pounds, for reasons for which we can in no wise hold ourselves to blame. Under such circumstances, if the man, who does the slapping, through no apparent merit of his own, belongs to the 200 pound class, most of us would adjourn proceedings to a field where there are no physical handicaps to avert justice.

Even among some of the 200 pounders, too, we imagine that there is a growing disinclination to mete out justice jersonally. If you receive a black eye because you slapped your neighbor's wife's face, there are no reporters around to set forth your down fall in big adjectives.

But when you are ignominiously marched into court in charge of a coppered policeman, just as if you had been fished out of the gutter, you have invited the nwspapr artist to reveal your abject condition to a world thirsting for just such sensations. The man who is a real artist in inflicting retribution is quite apt to forego the mere physical delight of a well planted blow, in view of the more artistic revenge of a public humiliation.

When a man engages in a street fight, no matter for how good a cause, he descends to the level of the coarse antagonist whom he seeks to punish. Where such action is necessary to prevent another person from injury, all well and good, but when it is merely a question of retribution for a past act, the gentleman is apt to prefer a method where he can give a hog his deserts without having to jump into the pig pen.

So we imagine that Mr. Roosevelt's illustration will not meet with quite universal assent, as proving that as a nation we really care about punishing ourselves in order to award justice.

The Proof Is In Thief River Falls Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Thief River Falls citizen is in itself strong proof for Thief River Falls people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Thief River Falls citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. James Rogers, 522 N. Main St., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case in 1907 has been permanent. It is a pleasure for me to again recommend this remedy. I suffered intensely from backache and there was much pain and soreness through my loins. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I felt languid and devoid of strength. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Curtis' Drug Store, proved their merit by disposing of these troubles in a short time."

The alleged irregularities in the White Earth Indian Reservation, Minnesota, in connection with the conveyance of lands from Indians to white purchasers, will in all probability be the subject of a Congressional investigation. Representative Steenerson of Minnesota has been urging the matter and in case the investigation is ordered, and a special committee appointed to conduct it, the committe will make its headquarters at Detroit, Minn.

Justice Harlan's formal dissenting opinion recently made public, in the Standard Oil decision, is nothing short of sensational and coincides with the view expressed by Minnesota members of Congress in this letter last week. He declares in effect that the decision by overreaching the action of Congress through judicial construction is a blow at the integrity of our governmental system, and in the end will prove most dangerous to all.

The farmer's business often needs a little extra financial backing if it is to grow and prosper.

That is one reason why he should have a strong and willing bank behind him.

It is an important function of this bank to give temporary assistance to farmers who seek it of us, and who have demonstrated their ability to repay their obligations when due.

Hundreds of farmers who have made real estate loans at the CITIZENS can testify that our treatment of them has been the most liberal.

Before making your loan, be sure to call on us.

The engagement of this company at the Auditorium gives promise of being the most important comedy event of the season. The play, which is in three acts, is so constructed as to give scope for the introduction of several intensely strong situatons, and from the reviews seen of the production, "The Climax" will prove an entertainment of a very superior order.

THE SONG OF THE SOUL

One of the pleasing features in "The Climax" is the rendition of the beautiful song, "The Song of the Soul," which occures in the last act. This number will make the singer and composer famous, and few dry eyes are rarely seen at the close of the song. As one critic says, "Capacity houses will be given every production which ranks with "The Climax," and we are glad to spend our money when the return comes back in such beautiful measure."

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by all druggists.

"THE CLIMAX."

"The Climax", one of the most successful plays of the last decade comes to the Auditorium June 6th. It is a sweet story, not without its shadows, but none the less appealing on that account. It involves the happiness of a beautiful girl who loves music and has a wonderful voice, an old music teacher who has a heart of gold, an impatient, talented young teacher and composer, and a wordly young physician, the last two in love with the singer.

The story runs easily and swiftly to a high dramatic point and the ending—well, you will not find fault with it.

"The Climax" created a great stir in the large cities, because of the real worth of the play and its fame has grown steadily. Members of the original Weber company appear in the cast which presents the play in this city.

The theatre goers of this city will be pleased to learn that arrangements have been made whereby the United Play Co's. beautiful production of "The Climax" will appear at the Auditorium on Tuesday, June 6th. As this attraction will play only a limited number of cities in this state, the appearance of "The Climax" on the above date will mean the theatrical event of the season and it is hoped that our theatre-goers will turn out in large numbers.

The unwashed cup—Do you useit? Do members of your family use it at home or elsewhere? If you do it is up to you to wake up and realize that you are not only behind the times, but so far as this practise is concerned still in the stone age of civilization. Don't you know that the trend of all the centuries is away from the gregariousness of the primitive man and toward the privacy and individualism of modern life? In thought and action men are becoming more social but in habits of living more individual. In the dark corners of the world to day you will find people eating from one dish, smoking a common pipe, bathing in a common tub. Do you want to be classed with these people, or even with the crass, boarding—school boy who borrows his roommate's pantaloons to go to the ball game? You stopped using a family tooth brush several generations ago. Why do you continue to use a family or worse a school or railroad station cup that is practically certain to have been used by uncleanly and diseased people and cannot be cleansed by rinsing? Be up-to-date, throw away that dirty dripping dipper and unspeakable dish cloth, use some real hot water and soap powder or soda on the family glass-ware and carry your own paper or metal cup with you wherever you go in public. And don't forget to read the following numbers in this series which will tell you what the world is doing in this matter and the why and wherefore of it.

The second blacksmith shop started up here this week with Lawrence Petterson as manager and we kind of expect that the farmerblacksmith will have to go some to hold his own.

A program was given in the I. O. G. T. hall last Saturday night by the school in the Stengelson district in New Solum. This was the closing day after an eight-months school, with Gida Hanson as teacher. They had the program here at Viking in order to get more room for the crowd, and the hall was filled to the limit. The program was good and it lasted until 3 o'clock in he morning. Icecream and cake and coffee were served in exchange for a dime.

Mrs. Nordgaard and little Melven, returned Saturday morning on the train after visiting a week with relatives and friends around Strip.

The New Solum and Viking ballteams had a ball game last Sunday. The scores being 4 to 5 in favor of New Solum.

Mr. and Mrs. Jansen, our depot agent, went to Thief River Falls Saturday evening, returning Monday morning.

Styrlund Bros., are still shipping hay. They have shipped about 28 car-loads this spring to different places.

How is it we do not see so many shipments from the mail order houses to this place as usual? We do not like to tell, but the truth is we havn't got the cash and the mail order houses won't give us any credit, so we are giving our merchants the benefit thereof.

WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE

It was a long and bloody battle for life that waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and run-down. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began, three weeks ago, to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim". For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, la grippe, asthma, hay fever or throat or lung trouble it's supreme. 50c & 1.00. Trail bottle free. Guaranteed by alll Druggists.

NOW
All The Family Can Have
The More Than Merely "Guaranteed" Hose

The wonderful popularity of Everwear Hose for Men and Women has created a widespread demand for a Children's hose of the same quality. Fathers and Mothers say: "If I could only buy stockings for the children that would wear like my own Everwear all our hosiery troubles would be over."
So here you are, parents—the boys and girls can now have real Everwear Hosiery—made to wear where the wear comes most—the knees and legs being made to stand hard knocks as well as the heel and toe. They are made entirely of extra long staple cotton. The leg or body of the hose having twice the number of stitches permits them to stretch freely when needed. Yet the same Everwear standard—the fit, comfort and general elegance are maintained in the Children's hose.
Remember that Everwear is always sold under this guarantee: If any or all of six pairs shows a hole or tear within six months after date of purchase, new hose will be given free. Try six pairs for yourself and family. We have them in all the popular shadings.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. [illegible]

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

JUDGMENT SALE

IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day to satisfy said judgment costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

W. J. LaBree,
Sheriff of Pennington,
County, Minnesota.

G. Halvorson, Esq.
Attorney for Plaintiff.

Commissioners' Proceedings

Thief River Falls, Minn.,
May 15, 1911.

Pursuant to adjournment the county board of Pennington county met in the auditor's office in the auditorium bldg. in the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., at 11 o'clock a. m.

Members present, Aubol, Shaw, Larson, Wold, Hedeen.

Members absent, none.

On motion duly carried the county board proceeded to open bids for remodeling the county court house, with the following results:

F. S. Doege, Thief River Falls...$6,150
Ed. A. Krohn, " " ... 6,160

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Larson, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Hedeen:

Resolved, That the bid of F. S. Doege in the sum of $6,150 for remodeling the court house, as per plans and specifications on file, be accepted, and the proper officers are hereby instructed to execute the necessary contracts. Resolution prevailed unanimously.

On motion duly carried the board took a recess until 1 o'clock p. m.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 1 o'clock p. m. All members present.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the sum of $400 be and the same is hereby appropriated from the county's portion of the liquor license moneys, same to be expended in improving and maintaining the roads leading into the city of Thief River Falls, said sum to be available when such license money has been turned into the county treasury, provided also that said moneys shall be spent under the supervision of Commissioners Shaw and Aubol.

On motion duly carried the county board adjourned until 5 o'clock p. m., to meet with the county board of Red Lake county at the court house at Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
May 15, 1911.

Pursuant to agreement the county board of Pennington county and the county board of Red Lake county met in joint session in the commissioners' room in the county court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., for the purpose of ascertaining and effecting a division of the funds and indebtedness of the original Red Lake county and the percentage of the indebtedness to be assumed by each of the existing counties of Red Lake and Pennington.

Moved by Commissioner Shaw, seconded by Commissioner Pigeon, that Commissioner Demann act as chairman of the joint meeting. Motion carried.

Moved by Commissioner Aubol, same being duly seconded, that Auditors Latendresse and Fasel act as secretaries of the joint boards. Motion carried.

After due deliberation, the Red Lake county board acting separately, on motion duly carried, proposed to place the value of the county building at $45,500 as of date of Nov. 23, when county was divided.

The Pennington county board acting separately, on motion moved by Commissioner Shaw, duly seconded by Commissioner Hedeen, that the Pennington county board accept settlement of the county buildings at the sum of $45,500. Motion carried unanimously.

The boards again acting jointly, the following resolution was offered by Commissioner Aubol, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Kankel:

Whereas, The boards of county commissioners of Red Lake county and Pennington county have met in joint session for the purpose of agreeing upon the valuation of the county buildings and the amount of indebtedness of Red Lake county and the funds in its county treasury at the time of the creation of Pennington county, and full discussion and consideration has been had, therefore

Be It Resolved, That it is hereby agreed by and between the respective boards of county commissioners of Red Lake and Pennington counties and between said counties:

First—That the valuation of the county buildings of Red Lake county at the time of the creation of Pennington county is the sum of forty-five thousand five hundred dollars ($45,500.00).

Second—That at the time of such creation there was thirty-six thousand nine hundred twenty-seven and 68-100 dollars ($36,927.68) in the treasury of Red Lake county.

Third—That at the time of such creation the total outstanding debt of Red Lake county was the sum of one hundred fifty eight thousand six hundred and thirty-two and 85-100 dollars ($158,632.85), as shown by the list attached marked Exhibit A.

Fourth—That deducting the value of said buildings and the amount of said funds from the total outstanding debt of Red Lake county there remains a balance of seventy-six thousand two hundred five and 17-100 dollars ($76,205.17), of which fifty-five and one half (55½) per cent shall be and is hereby assumed to be paid by Pennington county and said county shall make due provision to pay the same as it falls due.

Adopted by each board acting jointly and severally this fifteenth day of May A. D. 1911.

ORDER APPOINTING VIEWERS.

In the matter of the petition of Ole Skreland and others for County Ditch No. 53 in the county of Pennington, state of Minnesota:

State of Minnesota, county of Pennington, ss.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 23rd day of March, A. D. 1910, signed by Ole Skreland and others, praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county designated and numbered by the county auditor as county ditch No. 53, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the county auditor of said county; and said county auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county board of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, towit: C. H. Martz, to make a survey of said ditch.

Now therefore, We, the county board of said county, at a session held this day, do hereby appoint Gilbert Haavi and K. O. Gigstad and R. M. Johnson three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers, and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time time and place specified in the order of the county auditor aforesaid, and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with the county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to benefited or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefited or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds, or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefited thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts, or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch, including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to chapter 230 of the general laws of 1905.

Thief River Falls, Minn., May 15, 1911.

Hon. County Board, Pennington County, Minn.

Gentlemen:—Assuming that the 1910 assessed valuation for the county of Pennington amounted to over $2,210,000.00 and that the present outstanding bonded debt of the county amounts to but $1,000,000.00 and that the portion of the general bond debt of Red Lake county to be assumed by Pennington county amounts to but $42,300.00 and that but $114,000.00 of drainage bonds originally issued by Red Lake county will have to be paid by Pennington county, and that the population of the latter is 10,000 or over, we will make you the following proposition:

For $150,000 of legally issued drainage bonds of Pennington county, Minn., bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum payable semi-annually, $120,000 to be issued on Judicial Ditches Nos. 13 and 18, the balance to be issued on other ditches to be later specified (not exceeding four ditches), denominations of $1,000 each, dated June 1, 1911, maturing serially in six ta twenty years at $10,000 per year, principal and interest payable in St. Paul, or Chicago, or New York, as we may later specify, bonds to be delivered in such of said cities as we may name.

We will pay you par plus interest accrued to date of delivery of said bonds and will attend to the preparation of bond blanks, we to be allowed $5.00 per bond to defray such expenses.

This tender is made subject to the approval of our attorneys, Ambrose Tighe, Esq., of St. Paul and Wood & Oakley of Chicago, as to the legality of the proceedings, you to furnish us without charge a full certified transcript of such proceedings and to make any corrective measures that may be prescribed by them.

As evidence of good faith we will send you a check for $1,000. to be used as part payment for said bonds.

Signed,
SECURITY TRUST COMPANY,
W. W. Matteson.

Above tender is hereby accepted this 15th day of May, 1911, by order of the county board of Penningon county, Minnesota.

GIVES ADDRESS AT DULUTH

C. L. HANSON SPEAKS AT DULUTH ON "PRINCIPAL DUTIES OF COMMERICAL CLUBS."

The Northern Minnesota Development Association Meeting held at Duluth last Thursday and Friday, June 1st and 2nd, is now a matter of history and its results will be both seen and felt by anyone who watches the progress of Northern Minnesota closely.

Among Pennington County's representatives were Math Barzen, Julien Provencher and C. L. Hanson of this city. In reporting the meeting the Duluth News-Tribune gives the following:

One of the interesting addresses in the morning was by C. L. Hansen of Thief River Falls, who spoke on "The Duties of Commercial clubs." He said:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: It affords me a great deal of pleasure to be present at this convention, nor can I be insensible to the honor conferred upon me in being placed upon the program to discuss a subject that has awakened such widespread interest throughout the northern part of the state.

During a 12 years' residence in the Red river valley every opportunity has been afforded for actual personal knowledge of conditions, and it is a matter of deep regret to say that there were more actual farmers, more actual tillers of the soil and more actual producers by at least 20 per cent than we have today. This is true in Clay, Norman, Polk, Marshall, Kittson, Red Lake, Pennington and Roseau counties, and this, it is safe to say, is equally true of the entire northern part of the state.

Now, gentlemen, the question of vital importance is this. Is there not a way or plan which can be adopted whereby this sad state of affairs may be remedied to at least some extent? After a careful and prolonged study of this matter, the conviction dictates that the failure lies in the way we use our homeseekers and prospective farmers. In short, there is too much money going to waste between the owner and the purchaser. An extensive experience in the land business enables me to speak with confidence upon the subject. In most cases the purchasers, or homeseekers, are men with but a limited amount of money and perhaps a little stock. For an illustration—a man with $1,000 in cash will buy a farm, for which he agrees to pay $4,000, which in reality should have been bought for about $3,000. He pays his $1,000 which is all he has, down on the land, and gets a contract for deed subject to payments aggregating $3,000. Now, if all his cash is handed to his agent or agents, in the way of a commission, the purchaser has nothing left to face the season's work with, consequently he goes to the bank and gets the required accommodation by giving chattel security; and by only having a limited amount of his land under cultivation the first year, he needs a little more money in the fall and then some more the following spring. The banker finds that his client is unable to pull through, and does not wish to foreclose, so the next best thing is to advise the poor fellow to hold an auction sale and get out of debt; and this he does and moves into town, or back to where he came from, and naturally gives the country a "black eye."

The whole reason for his failure is simply because he paid all his money to the agents, which he otherwise would have, to bring his farm into shape with, so that it would produce enough for himself and family.

It is extremely difficult, especially without any money at all, to make a raw farm yield a profit in a dairy community the first year. I hold that if the purchaser had paid a reasonable commission, say not to exceed $1 per acre, he would have been in shape to face one or two hard years and get properly started, and would have remained with us permanently. In selling a farm to a permanent settler, one should exercise as much care as the clothier does in selling you a suit of clothes. It must above all, fit his pocket book. As I stated before, we have fewer farmers at the present time than we had 12 years ago. This goes to show that our methods of commercial clubs would only take up the matter in the right way. It could not help but bring results. The plan is this—organize your clubs or development leagues in each town or city throughout the northern part of the state. These leagues to be under the supervision of a district league, said district league should be located at some convenient place and publish a monthly paper for the benefit of the whole district. If a paper of this kind was continually placed before the people in the states east of us, advertising the tremendous resources of the northern part of our state and setting forth the fact that the league or leagues have been organized by the local business people for the sole purpose of giving all homeseekers a square deal, and a square deal only. No commission to be charged, except the land owner may pay a small commission to the league, not to exceed $1. per acre, and thus the league might be made self-sustaining.

In addition to the paper published, judicious advertising in leading journals and newspapers in a very informal way, something like this:

"If you are contemplating going to Canada, or to the northwest, looking for a home, no matter where, be sure to call at the Pennington County Development league at Thief River Falls. This is an organization organized for the purpose of finding a home for you, to show you the country and see that you get a square deal while you are in our city."

The leagues would each hire a competent secretary and pay him a reasonable salary. It would be his duties to get in touch with non-resident land owners and, in fact, all who have land in his territory, which they desire to sell, and then this club or league would advertise these lands for sale without profit, with exception as stated above, the owner would pay to the organization not to exceed $1 per acre, and thus the league might be made self-sustaining. This I am sure would attract attention and appeal to the actual homeseekers. Similar methods are used by clubs in the west, and they have proved to be a success. The Commercial club at Regina, Alta., is calld the Regina club which advertises the country and its resources broadcast. Even across the waters you will find the Regina club's literature, and large hangers, which will be found in all public places in the states east of us, and even in England, Scotland and Ireland; in fact, they talk Regina so much that the hearers really believe that Regina is the place to go to and a good many have gone there and are now wishing themselves back.

The Commercial club of Portland is doing a wonderful work in that direction. The city of Centralla has a similar organization, and the results derived therefrom are remarkable. It is not our local real estate men who are to be blamed. It is agents from other states, who do not understand conditions of the northern part of the state, or perhaps do not care to understand. A well organized league in a community would be of much aid and benefit to our local real estate dealers, and we would want these dealers and the league to work hand in hand and assist one another. Years ago it was the custom in the ordinary course of business transactions when you got your hands on the customer to get all you could out of him, regardless of ultimate consequences. This method, however, has ceased in all lines, except in the land business.

I hold that these leagues, together with our legitimate real estate men, would form an organization which would work like a wheel within a wheel, and would be talked of all over the United States. I can cite the cases of more than 100 good farmers, to my knowledge, who have returned to the place whence they came, simply because they were not started out right. It is, in my estimation a sad state of affairs. This is not a theory; it's a condition, and we are right up against it at this time. Assuredly, there is no place in the United States more inviting to homeseekers than the northern part of this state, considering the prices of land, natural resources, etc. We have enough land tributary to Thief River Falls to feed all the people in the state of Minnesota and still keep the railroads busy shipping out the surplus. All we need is actual settlers, and we can get them by waking up to the fact that we must not take all they have away from them before they get started. I wish to take this opportunity to urge upon our worthy lawmakers the necessity of demonstration farms. I sincerely hope that a bill will be introduced and passed which will provide for at least one demonstraton farm in each county, and it would be better still to have two such farms in our larger counties. We have a splendid experimental farm at St. Anthony Park, which is a credit to our state, and we also have other good experimenal farms through out the state, but here is the trouble, these experimental farms are at least 100 years ahead of our ordinary farmer.

We could not follow their plan, because we farm for the purpose of making a living, and the state experimental farm on the contrary, is carried on for the purpose of experimenting, and has the advantage over us ordinary farmers many fold."

A good many farmers seem to be of the opinion that the men in charge are scientists, and not farmers. It is absolutely necessary to have these scientists, but here comes the demonstration farm, which could act, in a measure, as an agent between the experimental farm and the ordinary farmer. I also believe that these demonstration farms could be made self-sustaining and thus carried on without expense to the state, or any one else.

The plans above presented are the result of a wide acquaintance with prevailing conditions and earnest desire to see this northern country come to the front, as it undoubtedly will when its resources are known and right methods are employed. They are laid before you, as a practical solution of some of the problems presented to us in the prosecution of the great object of our present gathering, with the hope that they will contribute in some degree at least to the work.

$12,500 IS THE VERDICT

Ole Landro Wins Second Trial Of Damage Suit With G. N. Ry.

The case of Ole Landro of this city against the Great Northern railway company for $15,000 damages for injury sustained in a derailment wreck of a passenger train running north from Ardock two and a half years ago, was decided in favor of Mr. Landro at Warren last Monday and Tuesday. The jury gave him a verdict of $12,500.

This is the second time this matter has been threshed over by the court. In the first trial plaintiff got a verdict of $6,500, but the railway company appealed to the Supreme Court and they decided the verdict was excessive and ordered a retrial. It was this retrial that came off last Monday and Tuesday, and the company instead of getting a lower verdict got a still higher one—$12,500, said to be the largest verdict ever given in Marshall county.

It is now up to the company to appeal again or pay.

Advertising Pointers.

Advertising is playing a very important part in the commercial success of today, especially where competition is keen, and it is a question of the survival of the fittest. Advertising is the greatest force for distributive economy that man has yet known.

It has come to pass that if a business cannot be made to pay thru good advertising, it is not worthy of public patronage. This may sound rash, but it's right. People find out the weak points in a business just as soon as the light of advertising is turned upon it. If a retailer's merchandise is right, the more light the better for his business.

The merchant cannot expect to win out by spurts in advertising. He might as well expect to do a good business by opening his store a month and closing it a month, as to expect a sound increase from spurt advertising. His ad is his salesman and he can't expect results when it stops work any more than he can expect returns from his salesman while he is on his vacation. The way to get a sure and permanent increase of business and to keep stocks turning is to advertise continuously and truthfully.

If it doesn't pay to advertise, why is it that the most successful merchants of today are the greatest advertisers? The merchant in the small town can get as good returns from his advertising, according to the money invested, as the merchant in the city. The people of Thief River Falls are constantly responding to national advertisers, why wouldn't they respond to good local advertising? Experience has proved that they do.

To The Consumer

Now, Mr. Consumer we wish to say a few words to you about advertising and advertised merchandise. We a serious business, and that it is safe to buy advertised goods.

The mere fact that an article is advertised does not make it, in and of itself, any more desirable; neither does it make the article taste better, wear better or look better than the unadvertised kind.

But, the merchant who constantly advertises an article thereby proves his own faith in the merit of that article, and practically puts up a bond, to vouch for it. The wise merchant knows that he is at the mercy of the consumer. He knows that it does not pay to mislead the consumer by untrue advertising. He knows that he is losing far more than the cost of advertising if he does misrepresent, because the people will not only stay away from his store but will influence others to do likewise.

So, Mr. Consumer you can put it down that any merchant who constantly advertises is out after your business, is willing to give good service, and is going to "deliver" the goods" when you call at his store. want to show you that advertising is

Commencement Exercises

Thursday evening, June 1st, at the Auditorium, the High School graduating class presented their class day exercises. The exercises were exceptional, and the immense crowd that packed the Auditorium gave every evidence that the efforts of the young people were highly appreciated. Every number was so creditably executed that no discrimination can be made in favor of any particular one. When young men and young women can prepare and carry out such an excellent program as was presented Thursday evening, it is good evidence to the people of Thief River Falls that these boys and girls will be able to successfully grapple with the future problems of life.

The commencement exercises were given at the Auditorium on Friday evening. Besides the thirty-five graduates there were on the platform the Hon. C. E. Elmquist, speaker of the evening; Rev. J. B. Smith, Superintendent Hay, and members of the School Board.

Both the Salutatorian, Wilber Rice, and the Valdictorian, Olga Aos delivered their addresses in a manner befitting the occasion. Miss Aos did remarkably well. Her expression and enunciation were perfect, every word distinctly reaching the most distant members of the audience.

The Hon. C. E. Elmquist's address to the graduates was thoroughly enjoyed both by the young people and the older people. The speaker's main theme clearly brought out the necessity of educating the young people of today for an intelligent citizenship. He showed that the corporation problems and other present day problems of vital interest to the nation were becoming so intricate and involved that their right solution could be brought about only by keen and well-equipped men and women. His illustrations were drawn mostly from railroad growth and legislation. He impressed upon the graduate the fact that the opportunities for success are greater today than ever before.

In his address Hon. Elmquist made some interesting and very deserving remarks about the work of Superintendent Hay and the Hon. D. P. O'Neill. His remarks were greeted with enthusiastic applause.

Following the Valedictory Superintendent Hay announced that Allen Lipscomb, president of the class of 1911, had a few remarks to make to the president of the school board. Mr. Lipscomb presented president Backe with a purse of money, this money to be used in buying a fountain and installing it on the campus as a memorial from the class of 1911.

ONE KILLED; MANY INJURED

Soo Flyer Ran Into Washout Near Vergas, Friday Night.

One person was killed and 11 or more injured when the north bound Soo Flyer No. 109 ran into a washout and was wrecked near Vergas, Minn., a small town south of Detroit, at about 11 o'clock last Friday evening.

Dead.

Mrs. L. S. Berg, wife of the president of the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago railroad.

Injured.

L. S. Berg, New York, body bruised. C. F. Smell, Detroit, Minn., body bruised. Roy Lewis, Whitehall, Ill., ankle sprained. I. K. Conn, Douglas, Minn., slightly bruised. L. M. Lonilang, Seattle, foot sprained. W. H. Hoff, Chicago, foot torn. C. H. Boin, Detroit, Minn., knee and ankle sprained. A. Beaken, Minneapolis, chest bruised. George Smith, Minneapolis, brakeman, internal injuries. L. Becker, Minneapolis, baggageman, abrasions and cuts.

The injured were taken south to Dent, thence to Henning, shortly after the awful catastrophe.

During the 24 hours the passengers on the ill-fated flyer were taken away by two trains one from Glenwood and another from Detroit. A wrecking train was run out from this city at three o'clock Saturday morning and soon put things in shape again.

The locomotive, mail and two baggage cars crossed the weakened place successfully, but the private car which came next, topped over into a 12-foot ditch, dragging after it four more coaches, making five that rolled down the embankment into two feet of water. The next car stood leaning on the brink but did not fall. The sleepers never left the rails.

One who was on the wrecked train stated to the Press reporter that he was riding in the car which stood leaning when it had come to a standstill—the one next to the sleepers. "The first we knew," he went on, "there was creaking of timbers and our car began to jar so that we were forced to clutch hold of our seats with all our might to keep from being thrown about. Women screamed and men went instantly mad. Then the silence of death ensued for a minute, and then, the car having come to a stand-still, all became calmed while they climbed out of the car, the ends of which were all broken open so that one could walk right out. But when we got out and saw how the cars in the ditch were all aflame, with humans clambering out of their windows, an awful wail arose again and it required renewed efforts to calm even the rescued."

"We beheld the porters of the private car come bearing out Mr. Berg, the railroad president, over the ditch to a place of safety, but no sooner, was he released than, like an insane man, he plunged into the water in the ditch and waded out to the car and was about to fling himself into the very flames that were rapidly consuming it, when he was caught and forcibly restrained. The loss of his wife in the smoke and flame had made him a raving maniac in a few brief minutes."

The baggage car nearest the private coach had caught fire in one end but some of the passengers who were only badly shaken up set to work and took out all the baggage from the car, and later, a band of farmer boys of the neighborhood came and put out the fire in that car, thus saving all but the one end of it.

All on the train were badly shaken up and many not enumerated in the list of injured had received bruises and bumps of more or less serious nature.

That there were not more killed and seriously injured is considered miraculous.

SENIOR PICNIC

Last Saturday afternoon the High School graduates took a trip up the river for the purpose of having one last picnic before the members scattered to their respective homes and summer duties.

At 2:30 p. m., the Carrie Nation, in charge of Mr. Olson, left the dock with 29 joyful graduates on board. Mr. Hess went as one of the boys, and Miss Schwalbe acted as chaperone.

The first landing was made at the Douglas farm. Here some of the boys roamed thru the woods and fields and others boated on the river. However, it was not long before the majority were back and asking that the "eats" be provided. Edwin Dahl made coffee, the girls brought on a sumptuous feast, and John Ryan presided over the ice cream freezer.

After everyone had been refreshed by the delightful repast, the Carrie was headed upstream and another landing made. Then the students settled their dinners by playing games and climbing trees. After this Johnson made some lemonade, and at 7:30 the merry crowd started for home, they reaching Thief River Falls at 8:45. The class parted singing "God Be With You 'Till We Meet Again."

Mr. Olson is to be complimented on the masterful way in which he handled the boat, and for his kind consideration for the welfare of the young people.

MARRIED

On Wednesday, June 7th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Swanson in the town of Black River, was solemnized the marriage of Edna Caroline Swanson to John Albin Naplin, Rev. Alx Sand of St. Hilaire officiating. The bride is one of the popular teachers of this county and well known to the people of this section. The groom is one of the substantial farmers in the town of Polk Centre and the young people will take up their residnce there. The Press wishes them great happiness.

DOHERTY—McCARTY

On Wednesday May 31st was solomnized the marriage of Miss Camilla Lucile Doherty and Jeremiah J. McCarty. The ceremony was performed, under an arch of ferns and cut flowers, at the brides home in Adams, N. Dak., Rev. J. J. McDonald of Michigan City, officiated and preached an eloquent sermon on the sacredness of matrimony. Only relatives and a few intimate friends were present.

The bride was attired in a beautiof American Beauty roses, her traveling suit was of king blue french serge ful white lace gown and wore a wreath with chiffon blouse, to match. A blue picture hat trimmed with willow plumes completed the custome.

A ten course dinner was served to the bridal party at Hotel Adams, after which the newly-weds prepared to leave on the east bound train for their honeymoon trip. It will include visits in the Twin Cities, New Richmond, Wis., Duluth and several other points in Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarty will be at home to their friends in Thief River Falls, Minn., after July 15. The many pretty gifts they have received will make charming additions to their cozy flat [illegible]

MARRIED.

J. E. Budd, Deputy Register of Deeds of Roseau, and Miss Marie Mosestad of town of Norden, a graduate nurse at the Warren hospital, were united in the holy bonds of matrimoney at the Riesberg residence in this city last Saturday at 5 p. m., by Rev. I. T. Aastad in the presence of a few friends.

The bride and her people are well and very favorably known here, and the groom, while less generally known in this community, bears a good reputation, holds a responsible position of trust, and made a very favorable impression upon all who met him. The Press joins with their many friends in wishing them a happy voyage through life together.

WORK WILL SOON START

after you take Dr. King's New Life and you'll quickly enjoy their fine results. Constipation and indigestion vanish and fine appetite returns. They regulate stomach, liver and bowels and impart new strength and energy to the whole system. Try them. Only 25c at all druggists.

DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The annual district convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held here June 21, and 22nd, in the new Swedish Lutheran church on Horace avenue. Many outside people from this part of the state are expected to be present at this convention to take part in its deliberations.

Features of this convention will be a silver medal contest and a general literary temperance program of speeches, songs, readings ,etc., the complete program of which will be announced later.

A regular meeting of the local union was held Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Quist in Porters addition and steps taken to entertain the convention in an appropriate manner.

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by all druggists.

VERIFY IT

The Proof Is In Thief River Falls Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Thief River Falls citizen is in itself strong proof for Thief River Falls people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Thief River Falls citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. James Rogers, 522 N. Main St., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case in 1907 has been permanent. It is a pleasure for me to again recommend this remedy. I suffered intensely from backache and there was much pain and soreness through my loins. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I felt languid and devoid of strength. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Curtis' Drug Store, proved their merit by disposing of these troubles in a short time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE

It was a long and bloody battle for life that waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and run-down. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began, three weeks ago, to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim". For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, la grippe, asthma, hay fever or throat or lung trouble it's supreme. 50c & 1.00. Trail bottle free. Guaranteed by alll Druggists.

The heavy thunderstorm Saturday night did not suit our base-ball players, as they intended to go to Grygla and show them how to play ball.

Seedflax is in great demand, so by the reports it seems flax is going down as fast as it is needed. Suppose next fall we will have to combine and hold our flax.

D. Danjr is employed on the dredge south of Germantown as cook. There are three of our boys on the dredge now; Edwin Ristau and Bernard Bendickson are also working there.

Martha Habedank came home last week from Thief River Falls where she has been with the Jackson family.

The receipts of our creamery were increased 34 per cent, May last year.

CORA BAKKEN DEAD.

After an illness extending over several months Cora Bakken, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bakken passed quietly away while sleeping Tuesday afternoon at four p. m.

Cora had come home from Minneapolis only a few weeks ago to rest and recuperate after an extended illness and tho she had been growing weaker for some time her death was not expected. It is a particularly sad death as she was just entering womanhood being only twenty-one years of age and before her illness had expected to be married this month. The deceased has practically lived in this city all her life tho the past few years her work has kept her in Minneapolis except for an occasional visit home, and her many friends who will mourn her loss will always remember her sweet womanliness and gentle nature.

Funeral services were held at the church, Black River Township where enterment was made Thursday afternoon.

Her brother Arthur, her aunt, Mrs. Tunie, with whom she made her home, and other friends, from Minneapolis were present at the funeral.

The women of today who has good health, good temper, good sense, bright eyes and a lovely complexion, the result of correct living and good digestion, wins the admiration of the world. If your digestion is faulty Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correst it. For sale by all druggists.

CITY DELIVERY SERVICE

Delivery of Mail.

1. Carriers are not required to deliver mail above the second floor of office buildings not equipped with elevators, nor to the different rooms or suites in apartment houses. If boxes are not provided in the front hall on the lower floor of apartment houses arrangements should be made for some reliable person to receive the mail distribute it to the occupants of the buildings.

2. If patrons so direct, all mail intended for them, however, addressed, will be delivered in one way—by carrier, through the general delivery, or through a rented box; but if such directions are not given, mail will be delivered as addressed. Postmasters are not required to withdraw mail in the course of delivery by carrier in order to deliver it to persons calling at the Postoffice. Mail is considered to be in the course of delivery as soon as it has ben distributed to the carriers.

There will be two collections and two deliveries each day in the residence district. And two deliveries and three collections in the business districts.

For the last collection in the business district the carriers will leave the postoffice at 5:30 p. m., and return to the Postoffice at 6:00 p. m.

JUDGMENT SALE

IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said da to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

P. Solum and John P. Swanson visited with P. B. Malberg Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Berg of Willmar visited with his brother, J. J. Berg last week.

Miss Mildred and Vernon Malberg returned Saturday from Warren where they have been attending school during the past year.

A bunch of young people were to town last Thursday to attend the High School Class Day exercises.

Edwin Swanson is wearing a rather big smile this week. I wonder who is the cause of that?

School closed Friday in the Excel school house with a program and refreshments were also served after the program. Miss Ella Johnson, who taught the term, left for her home at Strandquist Sunday evening.

We would like to know where those people are that predicted a dry year? We certainly are not having a dry year because we have had all the rain we need for a while.

Hubert Jacobson had made up his mind to enter matrimonial life and that he would have the knot tied last Sunday but somehow she — — — —.

Miss Theresa Kelberg came home Saturday to spend Sunday with her "mamma."

SCHOOL EMPLOYMENT

The records show that during the past school year there were enrolled in the city schools a total of 1175 pupils. Of this number 1076 are entitled to an apportionment at the rate of $5 per pupil.

No. of Pupils 5 to 8 years, ...24
No of Pupils 8 to 16 years....751
No. of Pupils 16 to 21 years...178
No. of Pupils over 21 years.....5
Total..........1175

In the schools of Thief River Falls the text books are loaned free to the pupils. It has been figured out that the cost for the past year was 39½c per pupil. Do a little figuring yourself and you will see that this is a remarkably low rate.

School in district No. 17, will close next Friday. A brief program will be given on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. After the program refreshments will be served to the children and the visitors. All are welcome. Then comes that longed for vacation and bright happy June days when living on a farm is the greatest enjoyment of life.

The work of leveling the grades is progressing fine and we hope that in the near future we can say that the roads in Excel stand for all that that name implies.

It has been reported that another building will be erected at Steiner. Who says that times are not progressive?

We hope that the Excel reporter will not forget the program in the Steiner school next Friday afternoon for which we are all waiting with the same amount of patience and resignation. Nevertheless we feel amply repaid in the anticipation of a pleasant vacation which is the reward provided for all good workers. According to that version of the subject, he is as much entitled to a vacation as any one and we would be only too glad to see him get it. His latest efforts at composition show the necessity of providing some means of rest and recreation. There may be some danger that his mental faculties will not be able to withstand the strain of acting as guardian to the whole community and being held responsible for the publication of other people's doings as well as his own.

Notice:—For the benefit of those who are interested and out of consideration for those who are looking for them, it has been requested that the announcement be made that the young couple who was advertised as lost two weeks ago has been found and is not likely to be lost again as they have been duly returned to their rightful owners. It might be of interest to note that they were even nicer looking when returned than they ever were before which proves that they have no regrets which disturb the peace of their minds in any way.

Goldsmith says in one of his poems "Distance gives enchantment to the view." We are inclined to think that that harmonizes better with the natural inclinations of human nature than the old maxium, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

Wid you ever think how much the insignificant title, "school ma'am" implies and how much honor is connected with it? Let me tell you. She must know as much about arithmetic as the shrewdest business man, must teach civics with the keenness of a lawyer, and discuss history with the diplomacy of a politician. She is expected to explain physiology with theknowledge of a doctor, agriculture with the interest and experience of a farmer, look after the moral welfare of he children under her charge with the insight and patience of a saint and possess the qualities of leadership of a general. It is her duty to look upon the children with the same eyes as their parents do, no matter how disgusting and disagreeable they may appear to her. She must be every body's friend and keep only good company, two things which are sometimes hard to do, and must not be a gossiper. She must be able to sweep all of these requirements, it is only fair that she should be criticised for it, even tho she is only a human being brought up under the same baneful influence and the same natural tendencies to evil as the rest of us. Any one who is worthy of having the title "school ma'am" conferred upon them is worthy of one of the highest places in your estimation. If it is given as an implied insult, it throws no shadow on the receiver but reflects no bright picture to the giver. It is our actions not our thoughts that give us our places in the estimation of the world.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

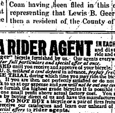
The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).



Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Capital And Surplus

This ad is to tell you the meaning of capital and surplus, and how it aids in the selection of a safe bank for depositing money. Capital is a double liability and surplus is an extra accumulation. Therefore, when we say our it means that this bank can stand a loss of $61,900 before causing any loss to depositors. The rule is: Multiply the capital by 2 and to the result add the surplus. This calculation shows that The Peoples State Bank amply protects its depositors.

Capital Is $30,000
And Surplus $1,900

LOCALS TAKE DOUBLE HEADER

White Earth Beaten In Afternoon Five to One. In Evening Fourteen to Two.

In spite of the fact that it looked as if J. Pluvuis would again interfere with baseball, manager Peterson courageously ordered the White Earth Indians to fulfill their engagement for a game last Sunday. The local men got out Sunday morning and fixed up a grass diamond, so that a dry field would be in readiness by afternoon.

The Red Men did not come up to their usual good form, they being outfielded and outbatted in both games. The locals were in fine fettle. They went thru the first game with but a single error, accepted all the difficult chances, and showed plenty of "pep" at all times. The records show that the batting and base running were consistently good. The "Indians" have shown in the last three games that they sure are a bunch of good stickers.

The afternoon game started with honors about even, buf soon the locals began to connect safely, and after that there was no question as to the supqeriorty of the teams. The real Indians were unable to hit regularly enough to earn any runs. Their only run came in the fourth inning, when with one man out, Belcourt walked, took third on Annawash's two-bagger and scored on a passed ball by Dolan. Annawash was the only visitor who was especially dangerous at the bat, he hitting for three safe ones.

The score of the second game is enough to show that there was something radically lacking in the Dusky Hues. The high score was due to the hard hitting of the locals and the poor fielding of the visitors. The game lasted but five innings.

Aaslund and Hess did the twirling for Thief River River. Aaslund certainly showed that he has the goods. His curves were entirely too much for the opposition. Hess pitched in his usual good form and was not worried at any time.

The most notable features of the games were the fielding and batting of Courtney. He is one of the fastest short stops in this section of the country. He covers lots of ground, makes clean pickups, and shoots the ball like a bullet, and accurately, too, His home is at Bagley, but he expects soon to have a position in Thief River.

WHAT ARE YOU?

County Official (to Lady at Auditorium)—What are you? Saetesdal, Sangerfest, or Sogning? Lady—A Sangerfest.

Don't forget to take in the Sangerfest beginning a week from to-day.

Friday morning, June 23d it will be seen if the Scandinavian still loves music. Then opens the three-day Sangerfest, which will no doubt be the biggest feature in this city this season. A thousand outside people are expected of a certainty, and this estimate may prove altogether inadequate. You simply cannot afford to miss such a treat as this. Plan to be on hand.

"Saetesdals-Stevnet"

The "Sætersdals-Stevnet" took possession of the city already Tuesday night and on Wednesday they filled the streets so completely that they were the only ones in evidence. They had the Auditorium for two days as headquarters, and the air was ripe with speeches and music all Wednesday and Thursday.

Many came in by rail from neighboring towns. The Soo brought up quite a contingent from Erskine Tuesday evening and when the Great Northern pulled in next morning several hundred piled off the cars.

The president of the association, B. Bjorneraa, of Starbuck, Minn., was here, as was also the secretary, G. Grunderson of Griebrook, Minn., who formerly was a member of the Editorial Staff of the "Decorah Posten" Decorah, Iowa.

Here was a chance for many of those attending to meet old time play mates, or relatives whom they had not seen for many a year. Some had not met in 40 years, but now were reunited for a brief period to talk over their experiences in a new found world. That such reunions must prove a great diversion goes without saying.

Thief River Falls did its best to give the visitors a glad welcome, and we think all went home rejoicing.

Weds a North Dakota Printer

A very pretty quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Vallacher, 509 Markley Ave. So., Tuesday evening when the marriage of their daughter, Louise and Mr. Henry E. Geortz of Langdon, N. Dak., was solemnized. Rev. J. B. Smith of the Methodist church performed the ceremony.

The bride was very becomingly gowned in white crepede-chine, her traveling suit was of grey. Only the immediate family of the bride were present and after the ceremony the happy couple left for a short wedding trip to the cities and other points in southern Minnesota. They will make their home at Langdon, N. Dak., where the groom is employed in a news-paper office.

Cars Derailed

Three freight cars were derailed in the Soo yards here last Sunday night, two of which rolled completely over into the ditch, requiring the wrecker on Monday to put them on their feet again. Nobody was hurt and the cars suffered little damage. One carried some galvanized sheet steel, the others were empty.

RECEIVES INSURANCE PROMPTLY.

That insurance with the Modern Brother-hood of America is a safe proposition is the experience of Mrs. Ben Bjorge of this city who Tuesday of this week, June 14 received a check for $1,000 from the M. B. A. in payment of insurance due her from her husband's policy. Mr. Bjorge's death occurred May 22d.

TORGERSON

Well, we all know it has been dry for a while but it is coming back to the old stand by rain, rain all the time. Some people thought it could not fill the swamps with water this summer, but they are full, and one more rain will over-flow them but we are in good hopes now, as Arpin is shoveling the dirt faster than ever.

Well, the suveyors have been here setting the stakes for the ditches. We all hope Arpin will work that fast.

The storm on Wednesday night did some damage in the north east corner of Reiner. It took half of the roof off Chas. Johnson's house leaving them all under open air for a while. Did you get wet Charley?

At Anton Knudson's the storm took a hay rack and carried it all of ten rods, and moved a building 12by 19 about 4 feet.

B. Bakes went to Thief River Falls Sunday to prove up on his claim and Aug. Knudson went with him as one of his witnesses.

P. Weisinger of Marshall county, who has been in N. Dakota this spring to work, came home last Saturday.

Mr. C. Johnson made a flying trip to Olaf Peterson's last Saturday.

Emil Bogren was also out east, guess it must be a bird out there that charms.

K. Haugen moved his family over to O. K. Olsone's last week, while Haugen is out working.

Mrs. W. W. Prichard arrived in the city Tuesday evening enroute to her western home from Iowa and will remain for several days as the guest of Mrs. Ben Christenson.

ALUMNI BANQUET GREAT SUCCESS

Alumni Banquet Held At The Evelyn Hotel Monday Evening.

The Alumni banquet held at the "Evelyn" Monday evening tho not big in respect to numbers was a big thing for those who did attend. Many of this year's class were unable to be present having already left the city for their homes in surrounding territory or to work at various places for teh summer, while of those of former years few are now residents of this city for aught but a short part of the year.

Covers were laid for thirty guests, the tables were beautifully decorated with yellow roses, the class flower, ferns and smilax, and as souvenirs the guests had very dainty hand painted napkin holders.

Mr. Hay spoke to the assembled guests in his usual pleasing manner but no regular order of toasts were followed the affair having an air of delightful informality not often attainable at such gatherings.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Miss Marie Caldwell, '07; Vice Pres. Lloyd Crowe, '11; Sec. Edwin Karwand, '10, and Treas. Alf Barry, '10.

INGALLS

Mr. Ingalls was very agreeably surprised last Saturday when his two sisters, Mrs. Ellen Lindsay and Mrs. Alma Brown, of Minneiska, Minn., came to make the Ingalls home happy by a visit. They made their last visit seven years ago.

The Spruce Valley Cubs played a game of base-ball with the Humbolt Club June 5th and were beaten. They were not on their Spruce Valley Farm Diamond doing a lot of practice Sunday and will try it again soon with the Humbolt Club.

We have had almost too much rain. All of us wish for a spell of fair weather now, and if we get it we will have the record crop this year. The wheat, oats and flax stands thick and looks fine.

W. C. T. U. Convention

The district convention of the Womens Christian Temperance Union will be held in this city next Wednesday and Thursday. Wednesday evening's meeting will be held in the M. E. church and will be a silver medal contest intespersed with vocal and instrumental music. All the other sessions will be held in the Swedish Lutheran church. Thursday evening there will be a speech by Miss Effie McClair of Rochester, the state L. T. L. organizer, and music, both vocal and instrumental. Other speakers will also be present, and a good program is assured.

To all these meetings the general public is welcomed.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. Oscar Wahlund and Mr. S. Sorenson of the United Church Theological Seminary will conduct a Union service in English at the Swedish Augustana church next Sunday evening at 7:45 o'clock. Special music. All welcome.

CITY DELIVERY.

I herewith publish a letter from from the First Assistant Postmaster General, relative to the erection of receptacles for the receipt of mail. Those who desire their mail delivered by the city carriers will please govern themselves accordingly.

F. H. Kratka,
Postmaster.

June, 14, 1911.

Post Office Department.
First Assistant Postmaster General. Washington.
June, 10, 1911.

Postmaster,
Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Sir:—

With reference to your letter of the 5th instant, relative to the erection of receptacles for the receipts of mail by the patrons of your office when city delivery is established on June, 15, you are requested to advise this office what percentage of the patrons have complied with this requirement. Delivery should not be made to any one who fails to erect a receptacle or to cut a slot in the door for the receipt of the mail.

Respectfully,
E. T. Bushnell,
Postmaster General
Acting First Assistant

Carl Jacobson and sister, Miss Mabel, returned from Northfield Sunday morning, Miss Mabel having been present at the graduation exercises of Carlton College last week and Carl being numbered among the graduates.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR THE CITY

Medical Men Start Plan For New Hospital For Thief River Falls.

The local representatives of the medical profession held a meeting which ought to be of interest to every citizen of Thief River Falls last Saturday evening for the purpose of laying plans to present to the city council and the Commercial clubs a proposition for the immediate establishment of a city hospital.

That such an institution has long been a much needed addition to our city no one, who is familiar with the facts, can but agree with. A good hospital with facilities for caring for contagious diseases in addition to the usual run of cases would benefit not only the immediate city but the surrounding territory tributary to Thief River Falls.

At present any one who needs the medical care so hard to obtain except at a hospital must go to Warren or Crookston for treatment. With the present number of rail-road and mill men making this city their home they ought by all means have the benefits of hospital care in cases of accidents which are always liable.

The Commercial club will consider the proposition Friday evening June 23d, and it is to be hoped that every member of the club will be present to boost for a permanent hospital for Thief River Falls.

HOLT.

The walking dredge is working fast towards Holt and will be here in a few days.

The families of Bjerks, Dovre and C. Larson visited with C. Hinze's last Sunday.

Tina and Nettie Hegle left for their home near Lisbon, N. Dak., last Wednesday.

Dan Nelson got badly burned by gasoline which caught fire last week, but is improving at present.

S. Kolden has been hustling around the country selling cream separators while the grass grows and the milk flows.

The Holt Merchantile Co., will move their store goods into their new store the last part of this week.

Last week C. H. Gunheim went away and brought back a bride and Saturday evening they got up a surprise party on them, presenting them with a nice side-board. The evening was spent hopping around in his big new store.

Ole Hlum of Grygla was a business caller here the first of the week.

Gold Watch Stolen

Tuesday afternoon between one and three o'clock a gold watch was stolen from the pocket of a coat lying on the safe in the Iverson Hardware store. The coat and watch both belonged to Carl Strand of Park River, N. Dak., who is visiting at the Iverson home. The watch was a 17 jewel Illinois movement and the case a 25 year, 16 size. Attached to the watch was a double chain and locket. Certain parties had been observed in close proximity to the coat on the safe and were haled to the police station. But they proved persistent "deniers." However, the police ordered them to go home and get the watch and to deliver it to the owner. Nothing came of it all Wednesday but on Thursday morning the watch was found tucked in between the screen-door and the door of the store. There it lay when Mr. Iverson came down to work.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to our kind neighbors and friends for their timely sympathy and assistance in our late sorrow.

Frank Burggraf
and family.

Brakeman to be Buried Here

Brakeman C. Willis working for the Soo line was killed at Federal Dam Tuesday morning. He was on top of a freight car when the rails spread, precipitating the car into the ditch. He tried to save himself by jumping but was too late and was caught under the car and crashed. He was a member of the B. L. T. and about 35 years old. His relatives, not yet located, reside near Harvey, N. Dak. The funeral will be held at the Presbyterian church in this city at 1:30 to-day under the auspices of the rail-road men.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

About thirty young ladies enjoyed a very pleasant evening Tuesday at the home of Miss O. N. Olson. Mrs. Olson, Miss Millie Aaspelind and Miss Clara Granum were hostesses.

The affair was a parcel shower for Miss Mable Jacobson whose engagement to Mr. Otto Gullingsrud has been announced and whose marriage will take place some time this summer.

The rooms were very prettily decorated with red hearts and arrows and each guest was the recipient of a red carnation. A dainty luncheon was served, and a most enjoyable time had by all present.

Miss Jacobson received many pretty gifts which will be both useful and ornamental in her new home.

R. F. D. No. 1.

Anna Rust returned home last Thursday after finishing a two months term of school near Mavie.

Sophia Monsebroten came home from town Thursday.

Charlie Johnson was out for a walk last Thursday evening.

The "big time" out at the tail end last Saturday evening came off pretty slim. Only one (1) girl being present.

A crowd of young folks spent Sunday evening at Johnson's swinging and singing in the same old way.

A nice looking young couple got lost and consequences were: feeling bad the next day.

The linemen while working on the telephone line last Monday were honored with a visit from a rich and nice looking widow, who gave them a pressing invitation, which they were unable to accept, but if in need of a kiss they were reminded time and again of where they could get it.

Mr. and Mrs. Monsebroten were to town Monday.

Emma Aus was home for a short visit the first part of the week.

Mrs. I. Aaseby and Mrs. A. O. Buringsrud of Thief River Falls are out in the country picking strawberries now days.

The members of the Norden Congregation were busy clearing the church lot Tuesday. They will meet again for further improvements next Tuesday.

Oline and Anna Rust attended the "Saeterdalstevnet" in Thief River Falls Wednesday.

Too Late For Last Week.

A reception was given at Nora's Sunday.

Oline Rust visited with Emma Rodegaard Sunday.

Some of the few young folks left in the country were gathered Sunday evening and quite a lively time was had in our own way.

C. E. Aas was to town with cream Monday.

K. Kunseth lost a valuable mare in foaling.

Dr. Teal was around here on business Tuesday.

SAW MILL OPENS MONDAY

Everything Is In Readness and Logs are Now Approaching Thief River Falls.

The present prospects are that the saw mill will again be running full blast next Monday. The recent rains have raised the water in the small creeks running into Red Lake so that logs can now be floated into the big lake. The steam-boats have already started with their cargos for the outlets. The water in Red Lake River has raised enough to suppose that logs can be driven without extra difficulty.

Just as soon as it is possible to get the men together the mill will be running full force, with two crews, the same as it has always been. The failure of the mill to start as usual this spring has caused considerable inconvience to residents and business men of Thief River Falls. It is hoped that the present bright prospects will materialize and that we will soon be enjoying the added prosperity which a first class saw mill brings to a city.

New Garage

The people of Thief River will soon be enjoying the benefits of an up-to-date garage. The building is being erected by Lars Backe and D. B. Backe, and is located on the corner south of the court house.

The walls will be concrete stucco on steel lath, and the floor will be concrete. The foundation is 44 feet by 70 feet. This amount of floor space will give ample room for a large number of cars and for the necessary auxiliaries.

ED. ROLFE RETURNS.

Ed. Rolfe returned the first of the week from a trip to Florida of several weeks duration. He had gone with the intention of looking over Florida lands as a proposition for profitable investment and was so well pleased with all he saw that he has returned the poorer by quite a few dollars and, so he says, the richer by ten acres of the best kind of Florida land.

NO STATE AID TO COUNTIES.

In the anticipation of the certain passage by the Wisconsin legislature of the Younman's bill allowing counties to erect tuberculosis hospitals and giving $3.00 a week per patient of state aid, Fond du Lac and Douglas counties have already made appropriations of $10,000 each for this purpose. The Wisconsin State Tuberculosis Association affirms that six other counties undoubtedly will take similar action this year.

In this state we have had permissive legislation for counties for sometime, but the failure of the late legislature to enact Senator Hanson's state aid amendment will probably result in no action being taken under the county tuberculosis hospital act for two years.

The legislature in its wisdom (?) thought that the counties didn't need any aid for tuberculosis hospitals (or perhaps it considered the whole anti-tuberculosis movement as a fad.) In any case as a result Minnesota will be in the list of "backward states" in the matter of the prevention of tuberculosis for another two years.

Mrs. Hughes and Miss Eva Golla of St. Hilaire are spending the week with relatives in the city and tomorrow will leave for Bemidji. After a week's visit with Mrs. Alec Uhres there they will proceed to Ft. Francis, Canada where they will make their future home.

HENRY HOMER HOBBS.

Famous Left Tackle of Yale, '09, Who Eloped With Miss Andrus.

DAUGHTER ANGERS ANDRUS

"Richest Congressman" Disconsolate Over Elopement.

New York, June 9.—John E. Andrus, "the wealthiest man in congress," is disconsolate over the elopement of his favorite daughter, Miss Helen Whittier Andrus, with Henry Homer Hobbs, best known to the world as left tackle, Yale, '09, and at present "aisle manager" for a department store in Springfield, Mass.

When the new Mrs. Hobbs called up her father to say "Homer and I are married and we are starting on our honeymoon," the congressman slammed the receiver up on the hook without saying a word.

The elopement was the culmination of a romance which began at a junior "prom" three years ago, when Miss Andrus went to Yale as the guest of her brother, guard in the same eleven with Hobbs and star hammer thrower.

TO AVOID LOSSES BY DEPRECIATION

Witness Says Output of Lumber Was Cut by Agreement.

Kansas City, June 13.—At the behest of the Southern Lumber Manufacturers' association the Long-Bell Lumber company, which controls thousands of acres of timber land, curtailed its yellow pine output 33 1-3 per cent during six months of 1904. So testified R. A. Long, president of the company, at a hearing of the state's ouster suit against the alleged lumber trust here.

This curtailment, the witness asserted, was not effected with the purpose of raising the price of lumber, but to avoid losses by depreciation and needless insurance and other expenses. At that time, said Mr. Long, there was an oversupply of yellow pine on the market.

Mr. Long also admitted that the association appointed a price list committee and adopted its reports at an annual and semi-annual meeting. The use of this price list by dealers was not mandatory, averred Mr. Long, but was for their guidance in making sales.

Incidentally Mr. Long asserted that if the public would cease its "prosecution and persecution of the lumber trade" and permit its dealers to act together 20 per cent of the timber that now goes to waste would be saved.

"If the manufacturers of lumber dared to act together they could produce conditions that would conserve about 20 per cent of the lumber of the forests that is now going to waste.

"By reason of this agitation the prices of lumber are so demoralized and the dealers are operating so much at cross purposes that about 20 per cent of the logs are left in the forests to decay and become unproductive."

RENAMES STEPHENSON PARK

Wisconsin Assembly Balks at Junior Senator's Name.

Madison, Wis., June 13.—The assembly passed the bill changing the name of Stephenson park, in Door county, to Peninsula park.

The passage of the bill is a slap at the junior senator, who is said to have contributed $25,000 for the purchase of the park on condition that his name be used.

Post's Suit Dismissed.

St. Louis, June 13.—Suit instituted by C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Mich., against the American Federation of Labor and the Bucks Stove and Range company, in which he sought to prevent a closed shop agreement and asked $750,000 damages, was dismissed by Federal Judge Dyer. The court acted on a demurrer in which the defendants contended the superior court had no jurisdiction.

BONES FOUND IN THE RUINS

Feared Bachelor Settler Was Cremated in His Cabin.

Duluth, June 13.—The cabin of Otto Holt, a bachelor settler residing three miles from Carlton, was destroyed by fire and the charred remains of a man supposed to have been Holt were found in the ruins. The barrel of a rifle, the stock burned off, lay near the body.

One theory is that Holt was murdered and the cabin fired to hide the crime.

The authorities of Carlton county are investigating. The discovery was made by fishermen and the logs of the house were still burning, indicating that the tragedy was of recent occurrence.

Dentist Robbed of $600 in Gold.

Yankton, S. D., June 13.—The office safe of Dr. B. N. Bouton, dentist, was robbed of $600 in gold some time in the last few days during his absence. There is no clew to the thieves.

The Art of Conversation.

"Tell me," pleaded the artless maid, "wherein lies the secret of the art of conversation?"

The sage affected the attitude he was wont to assume when in the act of imparting wisdom and said:

"My child, listen."

"I am listening," breathlessly she answered.

"Well, my child," he rejoined, "that is the art of conversing agreeably."

Wasted Sympathy.

A kindly old lady who attended a performance at the Haymarket theater in London was much impressed by the singing of a nightingale and a lark, which forms an interesting feature of the performance. In fact, she was so much impressed that she sent an agent of the Society For the Protection of Animals to see if the birds were properly fed and cared for. He found that both nightingale and lark were purely mechanical, in appearance only a small wooden box and key to wind the machinery.

Britain's Roman Walls.

Agricola's walls were built about the year 80 to defend Britain from the Picts and Scots. The first extended from the Tyne to the Solway Firth (eighty miles), the second from the Firth of Forth, near Edinburgh, to the Firth of Clyde, near Dumbarton (thirty-six miles). The former wall was renewed and strengthened by the Emperor Hadrian about the year 120 and by Severus about 208. Tourists to England and Scotland may still see many remains of these ancient walls, particularly of the southern one. In many places the foundations are still intact, with here and there a piece of the wall itself, evidencing the faithfulness with which they were built.—Exchange.

Confidence.

Confidence may be defined as the feeling we experience just before we proceed to make a mistake.—Puck.

The "Radiant Boy" Ghost.

An interesting house of commons ghost is the "radiant boy." This child ghost has been many times seen and heard. Its complexion is of the colorless purity of Chinese white, a halo of silver sparkles about its head during its peregrinations, and its eyes gleam in their sockets like bright electric lamps. It is evidently in agony, for the palms of its hands are stiff and turned downward, and as it paces from room to room it gives utterance to moans of anguish and never lifts its gaze from the floor. So far as can be ascertained this particular ghost has no pre-spectral history, and why it should have chosen the house for its haunt is a mystery.—London Mail.

A CHARMING WOMAN

is one who is lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But it is hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to woman who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

WORK WILL SOON START

after you take Dr. King's New Life and you'll quickly enjoy their fine results. Constipation and indigestion vanish and fine appetite returns. They regulate stomach, liver and bowels and impart new strength and energy to the whole system. Try them. Only 25c at all druggists.

DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The annual district convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held here June 21, and 22nd, in the new Swedish Lutheran church on Horace avenue. Many outside people from this part of the state are expected to be present at this convention to take part in its deliberations.

Features of this convention will be a silver medal contest and a general literary temperance program of speeches, songs, readings, etc., the complete program of which will be announced later.

A regular meeting of the local union was held Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Quist in Porters addition and steps taken to entertain the convention in an appropriate manner.

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by all druggists.

VERIFY IT

The Proof Is In Thief River Falls Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Thief River Falls citizen is in itself strong proof for Thief River Falls people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Thief River Falls citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. James Rogers, 522 N. Main St., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case in 1907 has been permanent. It is a pleasure for me to again recommend this remedy. I suffered intensely from backache and there was much pain and soreness through my loins. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I felt languid and devoid of strength. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Curtis' Drug Store, proved their merit by disposing of these troubles in a short time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Change of Clothing Found Near Place of Robbery.

AUTHORITIES ASSERT HOAX

Deposed Cashier of Minnesota University Identifies Hat as Similar to One Worn by His Assailant—Nearly $5,000 Found in University Vault Alleged Not to Have Been There Last Week—Professor Denies Receiving Check From Book Company.

Minneapolis, June 13.—A complete change of clothing was found near where Joseph D. Bren, deposed cashier of the state university, said he was robbed of $13,800 on a bypath of the university June 2. Trousers, shirt, coat and a black slouch hat were found in various places about fifty feet from the scene of the robbery lying on the edge of the bank in the shrubbery and bushes.

The hat was identified by Mr. Bren as similar to the one worn by his assailant and previously described by him as such. Henry Morris, the photographer in the pathology building, who saw three men lying on the path near the scene of the reported holdup, also testified the hat as being like that worn by the roughest looking of the three men.

It has been suggested by those behind the investigation of the robbery that if the clothing belonged to one of the robbers they had been worn to the bypath, where they were changed for other apparel. It was suggested, however, that the robber would not be likely to stop near the scene of the robbery to make so complete a change in clothing in the shrubbery. Some of those who saw the clothes expressed the opinion that it was a hoax.

Developments in the Bren case were the finding of $4,950 in the strong box in the university vault which is alleged not to have been there last week when examined by Deputy examiner Frank Stacy and the announcement by the attorneys for Mr. Bren that the $9,000 in certificates for deposit in the Northwestern National bank, which Mr. Stacy said last week had disappeared, were in the possession of Stacy, who had deposited them at the Minnesota Loan and Trust company and had given Bren a receipt for them.

President George E. Vincent, when it was reported to him that a special grand jury might be called to investigate and probe the whole university, said that such a thing would be welcome.

The university professor whose name is said to appear on a check from a book concern of which the county attorney has a photograph, which, it is said, was paid the professor for swinging a book contract, denied that he had ever received such a check of money in his life for influencing a contract. "I know nothing of such a check," he said. "I never received a check and I do not believe there is such a check in existence."

WINNIPEG TRAIN DITCHED

Winnipeg, Man., June 13.—While speeding southward at thirty-five miles an hour the Duluth Flyer from Winnipeg, on the Canadian Northern, jumped the rails and piled into the ditch at Lavalle, Ont.

Engineer W. T. Bennett of Rainy River was hurled through the air fifty feet, sustaining serious injuries to his leg. The fireman escaped miraculously.

The locomotive jumped the track at the switch to the siding and after plowing over the ties for a distance of 150 feet was thrown, a mass of twisted steel and wreckage, in a shallow ditch.

Three baggage cars which were following were smashed and splintered. Baggage was scattered everywhere. Forty persons were injured.

ABDUL HAMID IS SICK MAN

Deposed Sultan, Suffering From Kidney Disease, Said to Be Insane.

Sofia, June 12.—The ex-sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid, is in a critical condition. He is suffering great agony from kidney disease and has frequent fainting fits.

It was with the utmost difficulty that he was revived after one of these collapses.

Rumor declares that Abdul Hamid has attempted to commit suicide by throwing himself from a window, but that he was prevented by his women. Doctors say he is insane.

KANSAS SALOON SMASHER DEAD

Carrie Nation Succumbs to an Attack of Paresis.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 10.—Carrie Nation, the Kansas saloon smasher, died here. Paresis was the cause of death. For several months Mrs. Nation had been in poor health and on Jan. 22 she entered the local sanitarium in which she died, hoping there to recover from a nervous breakdown.

Mrs. Carrie Nation was born in Kentucky in 1846. Her maiden name was Carrie Moore and as a girl, it is said, she was absolutely fearless. In her early life she married a man addicted to intoxicants, which created in her an intense aversion to the saloon. When he died she determined to devote her life to the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Later she moved to Kansas and married David Nation, who sympathized with her temperance principles.

Mrs. Nation's first saloon smashing was done in the barroom of the Carey hotel at Wichita, Dec. 27, 1900. She was arrested and remained in jail several days before she was released on bond.

In the next three months Mrs. Nation surprised the "jointists" in various Kansas towns, appearing unheralded and leaving a trail of ruined barroom fixtures wherever she went. Many "jointists" became terror stricken when the militant temperance advocate appeared in their neighborhood and locked their places and fled before the hatchet could get into action.

Looking Out For No. 1.

Sydney had been given some discarded millinery with which to amuse herself. She trimmed a marvelous looking hat and so arranged it that a long red ostrich plume hung straight down from the front of the brim over her baby face.

"Come here, Sydney," said her mother. "Let me tack that feather back out of your eyes."

"Oh, no, mother. I want it that way so I can see it myself. Most always only other people can see the feathers on my hats."—Judge.

SENATE PASSES ELECTIONS BILL

Adopts Bristow Amendment for Federal Supervision.

HOUSE MAY NOT FALL IN LINE

Said Lower Branch Will Not Accept Change Made by the Upper House of Congress.

Washington, June 13.—The senate, by a vote of 64 to 24, passed the resolution amending the Constitution to provide for the election of senators by direct popular vote. The Bristow amendment, giving to the federal government supervision of such elections, was adopted. The vote was 44 to 44 and the vice president cast the deciding ballot.

The resolution for a constitutional amendment has passed the house and now will go back to that body for concurrence in the Bristow amendment.

The amended resolution now goes into conference between the senate and house and some senators predicted that the house would refuse to accept it.

Adoption of the Bristow amendment, which omitted the house provision transferring supervision of senatorial elections from congress to the state legislatures, was made possible by Mr. Clarke of Arkansas casting the only Democratic vote for the proposition. The tie on that ballot would have been prevented if his vote had been cast with his party, with whom he later voted on adoption of the resolution.

On this first ballot five Republicans, Messrs. Borah, Gronna, La Follette, Poindexter and Works, all progressives, voted against the provision.

On the resolution as amended the vote, 64 to 24, was six more than the necessary two-thirds majority.

Sixteen Republican Negatives.

Of the twenty-four negative votes eight were cast by Democrats and sixteen by Republicans.

The debate soon drifted into a political affair. Democratic senators criticised Senator Bristow's change of attitude. In the last session the Kansan senator voted against an amendment offered by Senator Sutherland of Utah which would have had the same effect as his own provision of this session.

Mr. Bristow said that in both instances his attitude had been dictated by his desire to do that which most certainly would insure the success of the popular election resolution.

Mr. Davis of Arkansas, referring by name to Senators Cummins, Clapp and La Follette, declared "the insurgent crowd never have been sincere on any subject they have brought before the country."

The chair called Mr. Davis to order. Mr. Cummins denied Mr. Davis' statement.

Mr. Bacon aroused feeling by declaring that great interests had been bringing enormous pressure to bear to defeat the resolution and Senators Works, Guggenheim and Cummins refuted the allegation. Mr. Bacon explained that he was imputing no impropriety to any member.

SEVERE ELECTRICAL STORM

Three Persons Killed and Others Hurt at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 13.—Three persons were killed, several seriously injured, wires prostrated, trees uprooted and buildings damaged by an electrical storm which visited this city and vicinity.

At Allentown the cyclonic winds prostrated live wires which fell on a frame house with corrugated iron lining. As David S. H. Gackenbach, aged thirty years, and Hannibal J. Dotterer, aged twenty-four years, were leaving the building they touched the metal and were instantly killed. John Wagner, aged forty years, was killed trying to rescue the men. Miss Carrie Alexander was badly shocked.

BALDWIN WORKS CRIPPLED

Eight Thousand Men Do Not Report for Work.

Philadelphia, June 13.—The attempt of the management of the Baldwin locomotive works, where a strike began last week, to resume work in all departments, met with only partial success. It is estimated that only 2,000 men out of 10,000 reported for work. The departments closed are the boiler, flange, paint and flue shops. The machine shop is working almost normal.

The union leaders directing the strike express hope that an amicable adjustment of differences will soon be reached.

Woman Burned to Death.

Detroit, June 13.—Mrs. Bertha Lothamer, aged sixty, was burned to a crisp in a fire which destroyed her home. The aged woman had all but reached safety when she was overcome as her body was found within a few feet of the door.

The Mother of the World.

Marriage is the mother of the world and preserves kingdoms and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their king, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues and promotes the interest of mankind and is that state of good things in which God hath designed the present constitution of the world.—Jeremy Taylor.

W. E. D. STOKES.

Wealthy New Yorker Shot in Apartments of Young Women.

STOKES' WOUNDS NOT DANGEROUS

Millionaire New Yorker Expected to Recover.

New York, June 9.—Held without bail to await the recovery of William E. D. Stokes, millionaire hotel owner and sportsman, who is in Roosevelt hospital with three bullet wounds in his legs, Lillian Graham, aged twenty-two, actress, and Ethel Conrad, aged eighteen, artist, reiterated that they shot Stokes in their apartments at the Varuna to save their own lives.

This Stokes denies, asserting that he was lured to their apartment by the girls, who tried to blackmail him out of $25,000.

After a night in a cell the two girls, both of whom are decidedly prepossessing, were arraigned in court charged with first degree assault and held until Stokes is able to appear.

Both girls, while nervous and troubled, insisted they shot in self-defense, and Miss Graham exhibited what she alleged were marks of Stokes' fingers on her throat.

Stokes, who recently married Miss Helen Elwood, a wealthy Denver musician, was said at Roosevelt hospital to be resting comfortably. His wife and son by his first marriage, W. E. D. Stokes, Jr., were with him.

FAVORS ROOT AMENDMENT

Senate Finance Committee Adopts Change in Pact.

Washington, June 9.—The Canadian reciprocity bill was acted upon by the senate finance committee and will be reported Tuesday without recommendation. The Root amendment to the print paper and wood pulp provision was adopted by the committee by a vote of 8 to 6.

An attempt to authorize an unfavorable report resulted in a tie vote and another tie marked the effort to report without recommendation before that result was accomplished.

The vote on the measure was a surprise to members of the senate. It had been generally reported that the finance committee would shift responsibility to the senate, leaving the real fight to be waged on the floor. At the last moment the opposition in the committee seemed to solidify.

STRIKE RIOT AT CLEVELAND

One Man Shot and Several Seriously Injured When Police Charge.

Cleveland, June 10.—One hundred policemen, summoned to the scene of a riot between striking garment workers and sympathizers and nonunion workmen, charged on the rioters and in the fight which followed one man was shot and at least a half dozen seriously injured. Scores suffered battered heads and body bruises. It was the first violence of the strike.

About six hundred men and women gathered in front of Prints, Biederman & Co.'s branch factory as the nonunion workmen were about to leave the building. A brick hurled into the crowd by an unknown person started the riot. When the police arrived the strikers and nonunion men were hurling bricks, clubs and stones. Windows in nearby stores were smashed.

SCORES DROWN IN THE AMUR

Steamer Passengers Leap Into River When Boat Catches Fire.

Blagovieshtchensk, Asiatic Russia, June 10.—The Amur river steamer Muravieff Amurski was destroyed by fire. The passengers jumped into the river and scores of persons were drowned.

A Prophecy That Failed.

The old Emperor William used to tell a story against himself which well serves to illustrate that most gratuitous form of error, prophecy. When the emperor was only king of Prussia he saw one day among his troops an untidy looking lieutenant. "Who is that man?" he asked. "An officer," he was told, "who has just left the Danish service and joined the Prussian." "That man will never get on in the army," said the monarch, and he used to add in telling the story, "The man was Moltke, and my judgment of him gives you the measure of my insight."

SIXTY-THREE DIE IN EARTHQUAKE

Seventy-five Others Injured in Mexican Tremor.

PROPERTY LOSS NOT LARGE

Mexico City, June 8.—Sixty-three killed, seventy-five wounded, property loss $100,000.

These are the net results of the earthquake which rent the capital and injected a note of tragedy into what was expected to be a day of rejoicing.

When the work of searching the ruins is completed it is possible that the list of dead will be lengthened somewhat, as hiding here and there throughout the city there doubtless are many wounded who, with traditional fear of the authorities and government hospitals, are anxious to evade discovery.

The property loss is but an estimate and is based upon calculations made by owners and contractors. Little of the loss is covered by insurance.

According to the meteorological observatory the greatest intensity was reached at the end of the first minute, but the instruments continued to record the shocks for fourteen minutes more. It was of a vacillatory character, but almost free from trepidatory motion.

More than half of the dead accounted for were soldiers. They were caught beneath the falling walls of the artillery barracks in San Cosma, a locality near the Mexican Central station.

Cheap Houses Collapse.

In none of the advices received at police headquarters is the mention of the death of any person of prominence. The victims were those whose homes were in cheaply built houses, shacks in most cases whose walls had little power of resistance.

The fury of the shock was spent in the northwestern and western part of the city. The most damage done was in that quarter known as Santa Maria, although cracks in the pavement and walls toppled over serve to mark its course as far to the south as Colonia Roma, a district inhabited largely by Americans.

The water mains of the city were practically uninjured and the light and power company suffered little inconvenience in operations.

Two of the capital's old churches and the national palace are buildings which show the effects of the shock. Long cracks appeared in all of them and in the palace a keystone in one of the arches was loosened and thrown almost entirely out of its place. Three schools sustained considerable damage, but in none was there loss of life.

DEATH LIST IS INCREASING

Mexico City, June 9.—Croaking and tossing its way from coast to coast through Mexico, the earthquake brought death to at least 150 persons, according to authentic counts. The area of the earth shock's destruction is rectangular, with its northern boundary less than fifty miles from the capital and a southern line cutting across the lower part of Guerrero state.

The number of casualties, as compiled by the police in Mexico City, is sixty-three. Forty-nine corpses have been taken out of the ruins of Ocotlan, Jalisco. It never will be known how many perished in villages in remote parts of the quake zone.

Tonala, in Jalisco state, was wiped out to all outward appearances, but the score of deaths there cannot be accurately obtained.

Not many persons were killed in the city of Colima, but a considerable amount of damage was done. The cathedral is so badly damaged that a slight shock might cause its collapse and the tower of another church was toppled on the roof.

The volcano Colima has displayed greater activity during the last forty-eight hours, but the chief meteorological observatory at the capital is authority for the statement that this had nothing to do with the earthquake.

TRUST IS NOT IN CONTROL

Judge Gary Says Steel Business Is About Equally Divided.

Washington, June 9.—Judge Elbert H. Gary undertook before the house steel trust investigating committee to show that the United States Steel corporation, of which he is the head, does not now control as large a percentage of the steel business of the United States as it did on the day of its formation.

He insisted that as against a 60 per cent control of the domestic business in 1901 the corporation at the present time is able to direct only 50 per cent of the domestic output. Of export business, however, Mr. Gary said the steel corporation controlled about 90 per cent.

The Insult of Irony.

Irony is an insult conveyed in the form of a compliment, placing its victim naked on a bed of briers and bristles, thinly covered with rose leaves; adorning his brow with a crown of gold, which burns into his brain; teasing and fretting and riddling him through and through with incessant discharges of hot shot from a masked battery; laying bare the most sensitive and shrinking nerves of his mind and then blandly touching them with ice or smilingly pricking them with needles.—E. P. Whipple.

The Holmburg law, passed by the legislature of Minnesota at its last session, apparently places it within the power of every fairly well-populated township to maintain a graded school "as good as any in town." Such a school is created by consolidating a number of districts and uniting their resources for the support of one first-class school, which supersedes from one to four or more of the little one-room schools; children living at a distance being transported in special wagons to and from school. As an inducement to such consolidation, the Holmburg law provides State aid to the amount of from $750 to $1500 a year, in addition to the amount regularly appointed from the state school fund. It also provides for a contribution from the State not exceeding $15.00 or one-fourth of the cost toward the erection of a consolidated school building.

THE HOUSE FLY.

This fly, called "Typhoid Fly" on account of its being known as a carrier of typhoid germs, is one of the filthiest insects with which we have to contend. It also carries the germs of tuberculosis and other diseases and is a menace to the health of the family. It breeds in fresh horse-manure and other filth, hence, when the stable is near the house, flies are apt to be more numerous. Use screens on the windows; resort to the use of sticky fly paper; keep garbage-pails and privy vaults securely closed; if possible, keep stable manure covered. Some farmer's wives hang sticky fly paper sticky side out, on the outside of their screen doors, at the top; which, in warm weather, catches flies which gather there. Flies are attracted, and can be killed by the following solution: Place in a room two teaspoonfuls of formaldehyde (formalin) in a pint of water. Flies drink this and shortly die. This not only kills the fly, but serves to disinfect the insect after death. Intestinal discharges from patients suffering from typhoid, or any other fever, should be sterilized before being emptied into sewer or cesspool.

ON WITH RECALL OF THE JUDICIARY!

You see clearly that it's up to the courts to make your laws, don't you? The United States supreme court in the Standard Oil case leaves it to the inferior courts to say what trust is operating in "unreasonable" or in "reasonable" restraint of trade, crushing competition "unreasonable" or "reasonably," holding you by the throat, as a consumer, 'unreasonably' or "reasonably."

When we come to remember that the trust sought to put this power into the anti-trust law when that law was created, and that it was omitted because it was thought to be dangerous, a blind man can see that the supreme court has simply enacted a law that was repudiated by the supposedly constituted law-making branch of the government. In other words, when we get a congress that refuses to enact bad legislation, the courts can and will do it.

Moreover, these supreme law making judges are appointed for life. You don't appoint them and you can't recall them, and yet they make your laws.

Make no mistake, you are absolutely powerless. Whenever you shall be robbed by a trust or not is a matter wholly for the courts to decide, no matter what laws your law-makers in congress or other bodies enact.

We again say, "make a constitution for men," and in the making be sure not to leave the law-making power in the hands of a branch of the government that can defeat and defy all other branches.—St. Paul Daily News.

GERMANTOWN

School in district number 76 closed last Thursday after an eight months term, with H. O. Berve as teacher. 47 scholars were enrolled; 44 entitled to apportionment. One was excused by the board. One moved away and one started this spring. As a whole the term was a success. Children made good headway and all liked to go, and if it was not for the mumps quite a few would have had the 160 days full.

A whirlwind passed through here last Sunday night. Broken trees and tipped buildings showed the path of the storm nearly all the way. Home stead shantys in the swamps were blown over. Some of them smashed to kindlingwood.

The ball club will make arrangements for a 4th of July celebration.

John Klapyunbach from Lilley Co., is up for a visit with his brother Ed.

The effect of the ditches can be seen now, witer disappears as fast as it comes, tho we suppose at the lower end it will be the other way, as neither one of the ditches is completed at the outlet.

We have learned that the P. Flo, farm as well as the farm north of it, have been sold.

FURNISHED ROOMS:—For rent 417 Knight Av. N. tf

For pure, wholesome fun, for laughter that will not be followed by the slightest tinge of regret for having brought your mother, sister or sweetheart to see it, is "The Flower of the Ranch," the Howard musical success coming to the Auditorium on Monday, July 10th. Its sparkling comedy, its overflowing mirth, its pretty costumes and its excellent cast have combined to make it the most talked of play of the season. The marvelous little "Broilers" who do the wonderful dances which bring the audiences to their feet with such swiftness and dash, still work with the same enthusiasm that has made these girls a revelation to the theatregoers who heretofore have been accustomed to the bored looking chorus girl. The musical numbers "Just Say You Care," "Worried," "What's The Use of Dreaming," "The Pajama" and the Nightie," "The Same Old Story," "California" and "The Days of '49" receive encore after encore.

A bright and breezy musical comedy coming to the Auditorium, is Joseph E. Howard's greatest success, "The Flower of the Ranch." In writing this charming musical play he seemed to scorn the tropical lands and impossible situations dear to the average lover of comic opera, and turned to the far West for a setting, the result being a piece which has delighted metropolitan audiences for fifty weeks at a time and is meeting with equal success "on the road."

Howard has contributed music to more than a score of the most successful attractions, including "The Time, the Place and the Girl," "The Girl Question," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "The Golden Girl," "The Prince of Tonight," etc. An excellent company of forty present this latest success with elaborate stage settings and effects.

Miss Mabel Simonson entertained

We note that the Excel reporter number two is quite a hand at composition and hope that she withstood the strain required in writing the last weeks report. We certainly are pleased to learn that the lost couple has been found and that their looks were improved from the stroll something they certainly ought to be thankful for. I should think you would be proud of having the title of "school ma'am" when you are really entitled to a vacation after such a hard years work. As to honor connected with the title "school ma'am", I see no more in that title than any other. "All work is noble." It does not matter whether we are "school ma'ams" or not as long as we live a useful life and live to please our Maker. What does it matter to us how much is expected of a "school ma'am." As much is expected of others. The title "school ma'am" does not appeal to us more than that of "servant;" "hired man" or any other name which may classify people as to their work. Anyone who fills his or her place in life is worthy of the highest estimation of their friends. Remember that your thoughts lead to actions so it is well to have them pure.

Whenever it is announced that one of the "Howard" musical comedies is a coming attraction, it causes much local comment as the theatregoer of to-day fully realizes that it will be a real treat from a musical standpoint. Mr. Howard is without a doubt becoming the greatest musical writer of the age; in the past two or three years he has written the music to no less than a dozen of our most successful light operas. Among those which were the most successful were "The District Leader," "The Time, the Place and the Girl." "The Girl Question," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "A Prince of Tonight," "The Golden Girl," "The Goddess of Liberty," and the sensation of them all, "The Flower of the Ranch" This delightful comedy will be seen in this city on Monday, July 10th, at Auditorium.

The entire production will be seen in this city as it was produced for Mr. Howard two years ago when it ran for 150 nights in New York City and six months in Chicago, at the Garrick Theatre. Aside from its success in the dramatic and musical line, it is a play that holds the entire audience from the rise of the curtain with interesting stage settings of ranch life in the golden hills of California.

JUDGMENT SALE
IN DISTRICT COURT

Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired, are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D. 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said day to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

W. J. LaBree,
Sheriff of Pennington County, Minnesota.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

DISEASE PREVENTION.

A protest is registered in a statement given out today by the National Association for the study and prevention of Tuberculosis against the existing conditions in Congress which require measures concerning public health to be referred to a committee on commerce. At the same time, a plea was made for a new Committee on Public Health in the House of Representatives, similar to the one now existing in the Senate.

The National Association in its statement supports the Committee of One Hundred on National Health in its assertion that under the present division of committees, owing to the large number of measures before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, public health matters do not receive the attention they deserve. The statement says that hogs, cows, and steel rails receive much more attention than that most vital of all matters, public health and the prevention of disease. At the present time, the anti-tuberculosis workers declare, no committee in the House has any direct responsibility for health legislation. It is therefore suggested that a new committee be formed, similar to the one in the Senate.

The National Association is appealing to its 510 affiliated associations in all parts of the United States to support the movement for the formation of such a committee in the House.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES.

(Too late for last week.)

Quite a number of papers were turned in as a result of the last state High School examinations held, May 26th to June 1st. We expect to see many credits returned, credits that will show the thorough work of the examinees.

Graduation exercises from the eight grade in our common schools will, we hope, be a part of our regular school work in the future.

Some weeks ago Miss Clara Backe held very successful graduation exercises in the Copp school, district number 210. Three pupils graduated on this occasion. I am sorry, I was detained from attending these exercises.

Another very successful school term was closed on June 3rd. The North Star school. Dist. No. 25, closed with excellent school entertainment and graduation exercises on the evening of June 3rd. It is a State Aid school, also, and Miss Katie B. Dahl, the teacher. That teacher and pupils had done good work was evidenced by the excellent rendering of the program which contained many choice selections of quite difficult pieces. This is a live school as one would judge from the enterst and enthusiasm manifested by the large audience. Two students graduated namely, Harris Anoff Smith and Ruth Judeda Christensen.

Harris Smith read a good essay on the subject: "Why is Bird Protection Plant Protection?" Miss Ruth Christensen gave the Valedictory. Both scholars did well and reflect credit upon the work done in this school. Among the other numbers on the program was a solo by Miss Hilma Erickson, a scholar in the same school, who sang two numbers.

From the city were present, Prof. Hay, Lars Backe and Clara Backe. Miss Backe sang a solo that was heartily received by the large audience; Supt. Hay gave one of his interesting speeches for country boys and girls. It was full of practical suggestions and advice. Few boys and girls, I should think, will come to town from this district to live as the Prof. pictured country life so interestingly that city life will loose its charm. He must have lost sight of the magnificent class graduated the previous evening in the Lincoln building.

School district number 154 will have its graduation exercises on Friday of this week. Prof. Otto E. Olson has been in charge of this school, and a very interesting program is anticipated.

Graduation will also be held in district number 133. This is a joint district, and Berthelde Peterson has had charge of the school work for the year. We may have more to say about these exercises later.

Let me again call attention of our teachers to the fact that the Teachers' Training School will open Monday, June 26th. Those of the teachers that are lacking in some one or more of the subjects should make it a point to be present so as to ensure a successful examination in August. We need too, competent, trained teachers for all our schools and the Board of Trustees for any school will readily appreciate the qualification of the teacher employed. Earnest conscientious efforts in the preparation for the occasion will be appreciated and bring back to the teacher that confidence in her work which begets inspiration and ease and creates satisfaction. Make preparation to take in the whole school, find out your own requirements and plan to meet your wants, so as to make this school the most fruitful ever attended.

Respectfully submitted,
E. A. MOSTUE,
Co. Supt.

RESOLUTION.

At an adjourned meeting of the City Council held June 7th, 1911. Alderman Jens P. Jensen, seconded by Alderman J. C. Berg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, By the City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, that

WHEREAS the excellence and efficiency of our Fire Department has been estabilshed by statistics showing the loss in this city paid by Insurance Companies during the years of 1907-1908-1909 to be a total of only $5,772.45 and that said Insurance Companies during the same time collected $62,970.81 in premiums, and

WHEREAS our small force of 16 firemen has recently been weakened by the resignation of three members, and now inexperienced members have been substituted for them, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That to maintain the efficiency of the said Fire Department that each member of said fire department is hereby allowed the sum of $12.50 for special practice during the next 60 days under direction of the Chief of said department.

Down They Go In Price!

Out they go in vast Quantities!

THE E. & E. CO'S $22,500 STOCK

rapidly being depleted by the present terrific selling. Throngs of people are taking advantage of the extremely low prices now prevailing in all departments: This is positively the greatest sale of high-class Clothing, Shoes, etc., ever held in Pennington county. FROM THE OPENING OF THE DOORS SATURDAY, JUNE 10TH until the present writing, the greatest volume of business ever transacted in Thief River Falls during a similar period has transpired. The crowds keep coming, swiftly the news of the startling values to be found here is being spread by those who have already bought. Extreme circumstances cause the most remarkable sale that has ever been opened to the people of this vicinity. Never again will such an opportunity present itself. Wise people will lay in supplies for several seasons to come. Buy now for future use. MONEY SAVED IS MONEY EARNED. Never before have prices been so mercilessly slashed---never were values demoralized so utterly, so unsparingly. No table or counter has been spared. . . . .

Each Day That Passes Brings the End Nearer.....This Great Bargain Picnic Will Soon Be A Thing of the Past.

A wreck of values to appall you--Sacrifice is no name for this fearful massacre. Profits are annihilated and cost lost sight of. Our only object is sell out at least half the stock at once dumping out what's left at 60c, 70c and 80c on the dollar. Tomorrow again this monster price cutting campaign continues with unabated fury and still greater reductions. Unheard of bargains in every department. Lot after lot at prices to amaze you. You are face to face with the sacrifice of the century, for the very life has been cut out of the prices. Be with the crowds when the doors swing open tomorrow morning.

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE!

A Never-to-Be-Forgotten slaughter and merciless sacrifice of Clothing, Hats, Shoes, Trunks and Suit Cases. Necessity demands the absolute and positive reduction of this stock, all the Clothing, Hats, Shoes, Etc., in the house dumped into piles and marked at the most sensational prices. Cost is not considered. Be sure and attend this sale where $1.00 buys $2.00, $3.00 and even $4.00 worth. It's an unparalleled saving opportunity. READ ON!

NORDLANDSLAGET CONVENES HERE

Holds a Two-Day Reunion in This City. Resolution of Thanks Passed.

Last Friday and Saturday the "Nordlandslaget" held sway in this city. They came here from various parts of Minnesota and Dakotas to this reunion, but originally they all came from the same province in Norway. These reunions have only been held these later years and would seem very nice and sociable affairs which are apt to stay with us for some time.

They held their meetings in the spacious Auditorium and their programs consisted of speeches, songs, music and business. At noon on Saturday the convention was through save for a banquet which was then served in the cool basement of the Zion church. A sumptuous repast was spread and covers laid for the entire convention. Mingled with the delicacies of the tables was the overflowing wit of the toasts, President I. A. Johansen of Spicer, Minn., acting as toastmaster. Sentiment was unanimous that a most enjoyable convention had been held and the visitors all expressed themselves as highly pleased with the hospitality extended to them by our city and its people.

This had previously been brought up and officially acted upon in the adoption of the following resolution:

June 17th, 1911.

The "Nordlandslaget" of America, assembled in session at your beautiful City, wish to extend to your Mayor, the honorable Mr. T. P. Hamre and to your citizens in general our heartiest thanks and appreciation for the warm welcome and abundant hospitality bestowed upon us; also our thanks to the "Brage" Male Chorus for their grand singing; to the local Lodge of "Sons of Norway" for their beautiful decorations; to Dr. and Mrs. Bjerkhoel for their inspiring music. May your city and its people continue in welfare and prosperity.

I. A. JOHNANSON,
President.
JULIUS B. BANHMANN,
Secretary.

Married

Ole T. Bratland and Miss Tilda Vraa were united in marriage in this city last Tuesday, June 20, 1911, by Municipal Judge J. M. Bishop.

Married

Jalmar Oleson of Roseau county and Miss Anna Carolina Gryte of Manitoba, Canada, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony in this city last Wednesday evening at the parsonage of the Free Lutheran church. Rev. A. L. Larson pronounced the ceremony in the presence of H. L. Gryte and Miss Mary Olson.

Married

James S. Ramsey and Miss Sophie Rensla, both of Erie, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony last Monday, in the presence of Elling Ramsey and Mary Rensla. The ceremony took place at the Free Lutheran parsonage, A. L. Larson tying the knot that made the two one for life. The contracting parties are young respected people and the Press desires to join their many friends in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous journey through life together.

Blood Poisoning.

Louis Anderson of Strandquist, Minn., is in town undergoing treatment for blood poison, which, statting from a wart in his left hand, began to affect the whole member. He came down for preliminary treatment last Sunday, but had to return Tuesday for more extended operations on his hand and arm. The doctor believes now that they have the malady under control and that it is only a matter of time till Mr. Anderson will be completely restored.

M. W. Birmingham, who has taken up a claim a few miles north east of Germantown, left from here for St. Paul Wednesday night, where he expects to work in the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway yards this summer. Next spring he proposes to go onto his farm in earnest. Mr. Birmingham is an agricultural enthusiast.

Soo Line Buys Chicago Property

The Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie road has bought valuable and extensive freight terminal property in Chicago, extending several blocks south from Twelfth street, between Clinton and Canal streets. This property cost millions of dollars and will be improved with freight tracks and a freight house. It will be the freight home of the Soo line in the heart of the city, and is believed to be one of the most strategic positions for a freight yard obtainable in Chicago.

This purchase follows closely on acquisition of 180 acres in North Minneapolis by the Soo, reported in The Journal Sunday.

"We have bought the property referred to in Chicago," said President E. Pennington of the Soo line today. "The company will put in freight tracks there and will build a freight-house in the most convenient place. These terminals will be reached over the Baltimore & Ohio or the Central Terminal Railway company Belt line, which is the same thing."

We in this city are largely served by the Soo line and when they take steps to increase their facilities for handling their traffic it touches our interests, to some extent at least.

THE PRESIDENT AND SENATE ON RECIPROCITY

By the time this issue reaches our readers, the reciprocity bill will have been reported out of committee and will probably be in debate in the Senate. The initial fight will be made against the introduction of the amendment by Senator Root of New York, which stipulates that the schedule on the admission of Canadian paper and pulp into the United States shall not go into operation until the Canadian terms to American made paper exported to Canada. The fairness of the Root proposition is so obvious that it is astounding that President Taft, or any other American, would object to it, but we have long since ceased to expect the reciprocity question, now pending, to be decided on its merits. It is to be decided only by the power of the "big steam roller" and by political advantage, and nothing else. Not only the American farmers but the American paper mills are to receive no consideration on the part of the administration in the way of protection to American industry, or even in the maintainance of equal justice between Americans and Canadians, if only President Taft can force this measure through Congress, Senator Knute Nelson's amendments, putting a duty on grains will also lead to a strong fight and will be supported by all Northwestern Senators.

Until recently, we have assumed that the President was sincere, though misled. We are forced to conclude now that he is not even sincere, judging by the rank mis-statement which he made in his speech at Chicago, June 3. He is bound to pass the bill at any cost, and so he has even started out upon a compaign of misrepresentation. He misrepresents the source of the opposition to the bill and belittles that opposition without any justification whatever. In his Chicago speech he declared that the prime opposition came from those who own and control the lumber supply and those who are engaged in the manufacture of print paper. The idea that the lumber interests were more concerned than the agricultural interests, is preposterous, in view of the actual schedule of the proposed treaty. This schedule does not affect the lumber interests, except as to rough lumber, spars and shingles. The rough lumber is used only for large heavy constructon, such as for wharfs and railroad bridges. It is to be let in for the benefit of the interest in railroad construction, just as the whole bill is framed, apparently, to build up the great railroad systems, particularly the Great Northern. The farmers do not use heavy squared timbers, and so are not affected by the reductions in rough lumber to amount to anything, and the trade on such heavy timber does not affect the general lumber business very seriously. Hence the President's talk about the lumber interests being the leading opposition is simply setting up a straw man to knock it over.

The print paper manufacturers are opposing the bill, of course, just as any other class of manufacturers, singled out for free trade competition of a serious nature which would greatly cripple their industry and enterprise, would oppose the measure, but everybody who is frank and who has studied the situation knows that the chief opposition comes directly from the agricultural interests.

And yet, the President has the audacity to say in his speech, "And the second class opposed to the treaty are those who claim to represent the farmers and agricultural interests of the country." He also says: "The only real importation of agricultural products that we may expect from Cana-

SANGERFEST NOW ON

Greatest Musical Event in City's History. Three Days Revelling in Inspiriting Song.

After six months of preparation and planning, of hustling and advertising on the part of the local men in charge of the "stevne," the great musical event in the history of Thief River Falls is at hand. The city is ready; all the necessary details have been attended to and as far as the preparations are concerned, the course of the Sangarfest will proceed smoothly and without a hitch. It is now up to the public. Musically the "Stevne" is bound to be successful. The makeup of the association and the various choruses comprising it; the high standard of the soloists, one of them at least internationally known; the well trained orchestra of 30 pieces, with players from the Symphony Orchestras of Minneapolis and Duluth, and particularly the unquestioned merit of the music and songs to be produced—all insure in a preeminent degree, the successful outcome of the concerts, musically considered.

Will the public of Thief River Falls respond? Will the people back up an undertaking of this kind? The "stevne" is not a privtae enterprise calculated to benefit any private interests. It is a public affair one that will be of incalculable benefit to the city and the public. The Sangerfest is a public enterprise, of which our city may greatly be proud; we have, however, no doubt but that the public of this community will gladly assist in the undertaking. We have sufficient faith to believe that the people will take advantage of the opportunity to hear the music that is invariably presented at the great Sangarfest of the large cities of Europe and America, moreover music that everyone can understand and appreciate.

We have heard some people in the city state that they do not care to attend because the songs will be sung in the Scandinavian language, and consequently will not be understood by them. Let it be understood that a great portion of the songs will be in English; and no one ought to remain away in the belief that the music will not be understood and appreciated—besides music is a universal language, it speaks from heart to heart, from soul to soul, and will make its appeal irrespective of language.

The prices of the tickets are low in view of the scale and expense of the undertaking, and when compared with the prices charged at similar events in other cities must be considered very reasonable. Tickets should be secured at once; they can be had at Bjerkhoel's Drug Store and from the ticket committee, members of which are now around selling them.

May Be Blind.

August Johnson living near Mud Lake in Marshall county came down from Middle River Wednesday to have an eye treated, which he had injured while grubbing on his homestead. He consulted Drs. Mellby and Swedenburg and they declared that his case was so serious that he must at once see some specialist in the Twin City for the eye, they thot, must be removed to save the other. But the poor man had no money, so a list was started about town and enough gotten together so he could take the Soo flyer that same day for St. Paul where he was to see Dr. Bockman. Mr. Johnson suffered the injury some days ago, and his wife with seven children came direct from Christiania, Norway, to join him on his homestead the very next day after the accident. He met his family in Middle River and took them home. Instead he should have come down then for medical aid, but he thought the eye would recover. In this he was mistaken, for as the days went by, it only grew worse till finally he must set out for Thief River Falls. He came with the aforementioned result only to discover that he had come too late to save the injured eye.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Johnson will escape the loss of the other eye too, as that is always most pitiful, but more especially so in a case like this where a large family is totally dependant upon him.

Citizens here rang true when appealed to for help for the unfortunate —and help was abundant.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire herewith to express my humble best heartfelt and grateful thanks for the ready help extended to me so that I might go without delay to St. Paul and try to save at least one of my eyes. How miserable I would be without my sight and how much my family must suffer in that event no one can imagine, and I am more grateful to you, kind friends, for trying to help me than words can tell. God bless you.

(Signed) August Johnson.

New Real-Estate Blood

Mr. C. W. McDaniel, formerly of Osakis, Minn., has sold his home at that place and moved his family to Thief River Falls where they will occupy the Mrs. G. Olson house on Atlantic Ave., north. His real estate office is in the Bakke Bro's. building on Third St.

Mr. McDaniel has had his eye on Thief River Falls for some time. He thinks that this city has an exceedingly bright future before it, and that the land men have a vast work before them in getting the country settled with the right class of people. He has had seven years experience in the real estate business and comes into our midst highly recommended in regard to character and business ability. Thief River Falls is to be his permanent home. We welcome him.

Summer School.

From June 26 to July 28 there will be in session at the Red Lake Falls High School a Teachers' Training School and a Normal Training School for the benefit of the teachers of Red Lake and Pennington counties.

Since this is a joint session for the two counties, Supt. E. A. Mostue advises that the teachers of Pennington attend at Red Lake Falls this summer. Next summer a joint session will be held at Thief River Falls.

In the Teachers' Training School emphasis will be given to the problem of how to teach school as well as to thorough reviews of the First and Second grade subjects. Single and double work will be offered in as many First Grade subjects as there is a sufficient call for.

Further information furnished by county superintendent H. F. Anderson.

In the Normal Training Department the work covered will bear directly upon rural school teaching. It will be made up of two parts, recitations and practice teaching. The class work will be in the common school branches, Reading, Literature, English Grammar, Arithmetic, Geography, Spelling, Composition, Penmanship, as well as in Agriculture.

The following well known teachers and superintendents will constitute the faculty for the Summer Training School:

J. A. Sederstrom, Supt. of Schools, Sleepy Eye, Conductor; L. V. Koos, Red Lake Falls; Edith B. Whitney, St. Cloud; Elizabeth Burbank, Fergus Falls; H. F. Anderson, County Superintendent [illegible]

Injured in a Runaway Accident

Mrs. Martin Anderson of this city, was riding home yesterday afternoon, when her horses became frightened by an automobile and Mrs. Anderson was thrown from the rig and had her ankle and leg broken, besides sustaining several minor injuries.

* * * GERMANTOWN * * *

Dredge No. 12 C. is moving along fast, but the water comes still faster. A few farms are flooded already. Two branch ditches were opened last week, sending the water rather fast.

Three teams, farmers from Crookston came up here last week looking over the country. A few of them had taken claims near Mud Lake this spring. They were somewhat surprised to see so much water but we told them when the ditches were completed they would be surprised how fast it would disappear.

Our townfathers let some road work last week, some of the roads are in fearful condition and we think road-overseers should look more after those built already, than figuring on building new ones.

Mrs. C. Bettin left last week accompanied by Dora Dau for Larimore, N. Dak., for a visit with relatives.

In Seterdals Congregation at Thorwick, the 25-27.

In Rindal's Congregation near Strip, the 28-30.

Gilbert A. Benson of Marion Jct., S. Dak., passed thru our city Thursday bound for his newly bought farms on the reservation. He says much of South Kakota is quite dry this year and all eyes out there are fixed on Northern Minnesota [illegible]

White Ribboners' Convention.

Least in numbers, perhaps, of the conventions recently convened here, yet greatest in purpose, determination works and faith was that of the Womens Christian Temperance Union held here Wednesday and Thursday this week. They gathered in the Presbyterian church, beginning Wednesday morning and ending last night. The neighboring Locals represented as disclosed by the roll-call, were those of Ada, Argyle, Euclid, Fertile, Hendrum, Middle River, Thief River Falls and Warren.

Wednesday morning was taken up with organizing arrangements. Wednesday afternoon brought reports from the unions represented; a talk on the official organs by Mrs. Lillian Marsh of Argyle; an address by Dr. F. H. Gambell on The Relation of Church Officials toward the Tobacco and Cigarette Habit; "Effect of the Cigarette on the growing boy" by Esther Ballard of Warren, an address giving the latest scientific research on this question. Then followed an address on "How to Teach Purity to Children," by Dist. Supt. of Purity Work Mrs. Sophie Gullickson of Fertile.

Wednesday evening the exercises were as follows:

Devotion, led by Rev. Boyden; Piano Solo by Miss Effie McLaird of Rochester. Address of Welcome by Mrs. B. Christianson, and response by Mrs. Bayrell.

SILVER MEDAL CONTEST

No. 1. Mrs. Julia Rollis of T. R. Falls.
No. 2 Mrs. Mary E. Daniels, Argyle
Vocal Solo, Geo. Purvis, Argyle
No. 3 Mrs. Mary Christensen, T. R. Falls.
No. 4 Mrs. Alene Bayrell.
Vocal Solo, Miss Thomas, Newfolden.
No. 5 Mrs. Julia Erickson, T. R. Falls.
No. 6 Mrs. Lucy Chapin, Euclid.
Vocal Solo, Geo. Purvis.
Reitation, Miss Purvis of Argyle
Awarding of Medal to No. 4 by Dr. F. H. Gambell.

Thursday morning was taken up with reports from the Dist. Sec'y., Treasurer and Superintendent, and election of officers. The following were chosen:

Mrs. Lucy Chapin, of Euclid, Pres.; Mrs. Ellen Crawford, of Ada, Vice Pres.; Miss Esther Ballard of Warren, Sec.; Mrs. Mary Andrews of Ada, Treas.

Then followed an address by Miss McLaird of Rochester on "What can White Ribbon Influence Do in the Home?

Then an Open discussion on "Conuty Option or State-wide Prohibition as a means toward the overthrow of the legalized liquor traffic."

Miss McLaird voiced the noontide prayer.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. LaDue of Fertile had charge of the evangelistic hour.

Miss McLaird tied the white ribbon on 5 little babes that were offered. This was followed by a vocal solo by Geo. Purvis of Argyle. Next a paper in favor of Womens Suffrage was read by Mrs. S. H. Sharbach; and one against it by Mrs. Andrews of Ada; both followed by open discussion.

Miss McLaird spoke on the work to be accomplished before the next convention; also on the significance of the badge, why and when it should be worn.

Thursday evening was taken up mainly by an address of Miss Effie McLaird in which she riddled the arguments of the Liquor men found in their organ, the North Star Bulletin.

Withal it was a convention of work, devotion, consecration and will long leave its mark on our community.

Fine Lunch

Anyone enjoying a fine lunch will do well to patronize the Ladies of the Maccabees Friday and Saturday of this week.

Lunch served in the building next door to Sharbach's general store.

Be sure to visit the Ladies of the Maccabees both Friday and Saturday Sandwiches, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cake served.

The Annual Convention of the Fergus Falls District, Epworth League was held at Detroit on Friday, Saturday and Sunday last. About 120 delegates gathered, the program was one of unusual interest and profit. Among other interesting features was a game of base-ball between the preachers and the boys. The latter were the victors. J. B. Smith and Misses Mattie Posten, Kathryn Dunn and Helen Elder represented the local chapter.

Mrs. Higgins and Miss Ione are visiting at Andy Smith's in the city this week.

"INDIANS" LOSE FAST GAME

First Two Innings Disastrous For Thief River. Crookston Wins 3 to 0.

Last Sunday the Thief River "Indians" autoed to Crookston and crossed bats with the fast Crookston cubs. The game was big league style thruout, and with the exception of the first two innings neither team had much on the other.

Johnstone started things in the first by getting a hit on the first ball pitched, but he was doomed to die at second. Again in the sixth, Christy, first man up, got a two-bagger and Thief River hopes ran high. However, their prospects were shattered when a little later the umpire called Christy out on a close decision at second.

Crookston got two runs in the first inning, when Barrette scored on Nelson's two-bagger and Nelson scored on a passed ball. In the second round Peterson got a two-bagger and scored when Johnstone dropped Torgerson's fly to center field. After this McKeig loosened up and with better support held the Cubs scoreless.

Both Sisler and McKeig pitched fine ball. McKeig was the unluckier in that the errors behind him allowed two runs.

The score by inning:

Crookston 2 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 x-3 7 4
T. R. Falls 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0-0 5 2

Special Train Sunday

Next Sunday, June 25, the Crookston Cubs will come by special train to play a return game with the Thief River 'Indians,' at the Fair Grounds. Every one is enthusiastic about the coming game on account of the close, fast game played last Sunday. A large force of Crookstonites headed by their band will march to the Fair Grounds. The local band will be out, and there's no question but that there will be swarms of local fans to help keep the athmosphere in a well mixed state.

An Outing

A party of young folks from our city, consisting of Ernst and Bertha Bessler, Elsie and Esther Adolphs, and August Crown, drove out Sunday to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ortloff in Black River where they were served a most appetiing dinner. In the afternoon they continued on to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson, living on the Hoppe farm, where a merry crowd of young people gathered for the evening to play games and visit. Reports are that a most enjoyable time was had.

Another Convention Secured

The next annual convention of the Lutheran Free church will be held in Thief River Falls sometime next June Rev. A. L. Larson, pastor of the Lutheran Free church of this place returned from their annual convention Monday, held this year at Willmar, Minn., It was through his efforts that the next convention was secured for our city. North Minneapolis was also in the race. On the gala day there were about 2,000 people present at the Willmar convention and there is no good reason why there should not be as many in attendance here next year. There will be about 500 or 600 accredited delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada, besides other visitors, speakers, and laymen. The sessions last the better part of a week.

With four conventions held here this month and another secured, we are plainly on the way to merit the title: "City of conventions." Let the good work go on.

Th. Vallacher increased the force in his tailorshop by another man last Friday morning whose name is Gust Bjornson and who came from Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Aakhus of Minneapolis and two daughters of Gonvik, Minn., were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. M. Bothun's home last week.

Jim Nomeland of Grygla was in the city here the first of the week after a load of merchandise for the Grygla Co-operative store.

The Silverton ladies aid will have their auction sale at the place of T. K. Rynestad on the 4th day of July. Everybody invited to be present.

Gust Severson who worked at the Bemidji saw mill for a month, where he suffered an accident which cost him one eye, came home last Friday.

Bernhard Dallas of Grygla was a business caller here the first of the week.

Rev. and Mrs. Barnett of Badger, were the guests of Rev. J. B. Smith on Monday night. The young couple were married at Varndale on Thursday June 16th and were on their way to Badger where Mr. Barnett has charge of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Geo. Jarman and son, Thad, went to Detroit Saturday for an outing. Mr. Jarman last week leased a fine summer cottage on the lake shore at that place. Mr. Jarman himself spent Sunday there, but he sure missed it wehn he did not stay there over Monday, too.

VERIFY IT

The Proof Is In Thief River Falls Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Thief River Falls citizen is in itself strong proof for Thief River Falls people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Thief River Falls citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. James Rogers, 522 N. Main St., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case in 1907 has been permanent. It is a pleasure for me to again recommend this remedy. I suffered intensely from backache and there was much pain and soreness through my loins. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I felt languid and devoid of strength. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Curtis' Drug Store, proved their merit by disposing of these troubles in a short time."

WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE

It was a long and bloody battle for life that waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and run-down. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began, three weeks ago, to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim". For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, la grippe, asthma, hay fever or throat or lung trouble it's supreme. 50c & 1.00. Trail bottle free. Guaranteed by alll Druggists.

A Critical Shave.

John Hays Hammond once paid $5 for a shave, and he did it at a time when he was not worth much money. He was married in a small town in Maryland and arrived there the morning before the ceremony after a dash across the continent. One of the things he carried with him into the town was a thick but unornamental growth of whiskers, and one thing he did not have was a razor.

His search for a barber resulted in the discovery of the only one in town, an old negro who had been imbibing too freely for several days. As a result of intemperance the tonsorial artist was shaking like an aspen leaf in a gale.

"Look here!" said Hammond. "You are going to shave me. If you so much as make a nick in my face I'll cut your throat! If you don't cut me I'll give you $5."

The barber, after much effort, agony and tremor, finished the shave successfully. But the strain was too great for him. Just as his hand closed on the five dollar note he fainted away.—New York Tribune.

In a French churchyard is a monument having an epitaph of which the following is a translation: "Here lies Jean Pinto, the Spanish vocalist. Icebergs.

Detectives Say It Contained More Nitroglycerin.

THREATS HAVE BEEN MADE

That There Were Three Robbers Implicated in the Puposky Affair Is the Theory Now Advanced—Wounded Robber Unable to Complete His Confession Owing to Weakness.

Bemidji, Minn., June 20.—While Dr. D. T. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, was in Bemidji conferring with his attorney, Judge Marshall A. Spooner, in an attempt to shatter assertions that he is the head of a crowd of criminals, detectives in Cass Lake were busy tracing a safe which they believe contains nitroglycerin and a full kit of burglar tools. This safe, the detectives say, was shipped the same day Dr. Dumas was placed under arrest. It was put in a Great Northern box car, but detectives refuse to name its destination.

On top of this comes the information that there were three men who took an active part in the Puposky robbery and that the third robber succeeded in getting the wounded Mike Davis into a buggy near Puposky, driving twelve miles to Turtle River, a small village on the Minnesota and International railroad, and that from there the two robbers made their escape.

Still another development is the story by the Pinkerton men of an alleged telephone conversation which Dr. Dumas is supposed to have had with at least two men at Superior, Wis. Dr. Dumas is said to have talked from Bemidji and he told the man at the other end of the line on Thursday that the "transaction" had been postponed until Friday night.

The detectives also tell of threats made against them by members of the robber crowd. These threats are that certain death awaits the traitor who revealed their Puposky plans, and that others will suffer unless the present activity ceases.

Dr. Dumas refuses to comment regarding the check found on him by Chief of Police Wring at Hibbing when arrested last Saturday. This check was signed by R. E. Smyth, who owns the building which was to have been robbed and burned at Puposky.

The detectives declare that when Dr. Dumas learned that the Smyth building had been for sale at Puposky for some time and had not been sold, he made the proposition to burn it for the insurance money, and that he would see that the building was destroyed for $300 and that the $200 check was part payment, and that he was to receive $100 in cash. It is presumed that Smyth was working in harmony with the detectives, as it is known that the $100 was in marked bills.

Promised arrests of business men in Bemidji and Cass Lake, which were expected to be made, have been postponed, probably until after the sworn statement of Fred Hunter, now serving a seven-year term in Stillwater, has been obtained.

Behan in Serious Condition.

In the county jail here, Billy Behan, the captured Puposky robber, is in a serious condition as the result of wounds received from duck shot in the battle Saturday morning in Puposky, and the confession which he started to give to the officers had to be postponed. He became so weak and his wounds so painful that Dr. Earl H. Marcum removed several shots from the bandit's legs. His recovery is by no means certain and this caused the officers to attempt to hasten his full confession, which it is understood he had promised to make.

NEW YELLOWSTONE GEYSER

Livingston, Mont., June 20.—A large new geyser erupted in Norris Geyser basin in Yellowstone National park according to dispatches received here. The new geyser has been named the Harvard in honor of the delegation of Harvard alumni, who arrived in Yellowstone park on the same day the geyser was discovered, from the Twin City. The geyser plays to a height of more than 100 feet and is said to be very beautiful.

Rome, June 20.—All reports concerning the pope's ill health are without foundation. Since the last slight symptoms of the gout from which he suffered recently disappeared the pope has been quite well, the exceptional coolness of the season being chiefly responsible for this.

Coal Miners Are Rescued.

Lethbridge, Alta., June 20.—Fire broke out in the Galt Coal company's No. 3 mine and spread rapidly, entombing Superintendent Livingstone and twenty men, who were finally rescued in an unconscious state by a crowd of companions.

Some young divinity students were trying to drag Bishop Wilberforce into a discussion as to which was the best road to heaven.

EXPLORATION OF MAINE DELAYED

Hulk of Wrecked Battleship Filled With Tarlike Mud.

UPPER WORKS ARE EXPOSED

Water in Cofferdam Stands at Ten Feet Below Normal, but Percolation Is Increasing Depth.

Havana, June 18.—"No further developments of importance in connection with the uncovering of the wreck of the battleship Maine are probable within the next ten or twelve days," said General W. H. Bixby following the complete circumnavigation of the wreck in a launch by the board of American officers who are supervising the work. A minute examination was made of all portions of the ship now exposed to view.

This survey convinced the board that before further exploration is possible it will be necessary to remove masses of mud, aggregating hundreds of tons, on the spar deck and almost completely filling the interior spaces of the ill fated vessel. The greater portions of the mud is a tenacious, tarlike mass, extremely difficult of disintegration and removal and completely prevents any satisfactory examination being made.

In many places the mud is five to six feet deep and can only be removed by the use of streams of water projected by the most powerful pumps.

Ten Feet of Water Removed.

The water level in the cofferdam now stands at ten feet below normal, which is somewhat higher than Saturday, owing to a cessation of pumping and consequent slight percolation of water. This leakage will necessitate the caulking of some sections of the cofferdam.

The board has been much embarrassed by the enormous number of visitors to the wreck who are drawn there mainly through curiosity and interfere seriously with the workmen and it is probable that access to the cofferdam will be prohibited to all except newspaper correspondents.

The principal result of the investigation of the wreck was the discovery that the deterioration of the steel structure is so great as gravely to imperil the project of placing bulkheads in and floating out the rear sections of the Maine. It is impossible, however, to determine positively whether this can be done until the water is further lowered, which probably will be a week hence.

AFFECTS SIX HUNDRED ROADS

Suspension of Increases in Single Package Charges.

Washington, June 20.—Advances in the minimum charge for the transportation of freight in single packages and in small lots proposed by the railways in classification territory, to become effective July 1, were suspended by the interstate commerce commission until Oct. 28 next. The suspension affects approximately 600 roads.

The tariffs filed on behalf of the roads provide for a minimum charge of 35 cents for each package practically irrespective of weight and distance. An investigation into the tariffs will be made by the commission.

FIRE LOSS IS VERY HEAVY

Special Guards Are Placed on Duty In St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 18.—Special police guards were placed about the mills remaining in the manufacturing district following the destruction by fire of five plants in twenty-four hours.

The total loss is $1,250,000 and the owners believe both fires were incendiary.

The William G. Freye Manufacturing company's sash and door factory was destroyed with a loss of $250,000.

This plant was three blocks from the scene of a $1,000,000 fire a few hours earlier.

MORMON LEADER SUMMONED

Asked to Testify at Sugar Trust Investigation.

Washington, June 16.—Despite earnest protests from Senator Smoot (Rep., Utah) the Hardwick sugar trust investigating committee ordered Joseph F. Smith, the Mormon apostle, to appear before it and testify.

Hardwick said he was opposed to excusing Smith, because the Mormon leader was a big factor in the organization of the Utah-Idaho Sugar company.

Bakery Concerns Combine.

New York, June 16.—Twenty-one big baking companies in cities dotting the East and South from Boston to St. Louis and New Orleans have thrown their lot together, merging under the name of the General Baking company, with a total capital of $20,000,000 in stock and $5,000,000 in bonds. The new chain of bakeries will be operated in fifteen cities.

Points About a Good Horse.

There are some points which are valuable in horses of every description. The head should be proportionately large and well set on. The lower jawbones should be sufficiently far apart to enable the head to form an angle with the neck, which gives it free motion and a graceful carriage and prevents it bearing too heavily on the hand. The eye should be large, a little prominent and the eyelid fine and thin. The ear should be small and erect and quick in motion. The lop ear indicates [illegible]

SENATOR SAVES WIFE'S LIFE

Luke Lea of Tennessee Gives Up Blood for His Dying Spouse.

Washington, June 20.—United States Senator Luke Lee of Tennessee, to save the life of his stricken wife, sacrificed a quart of his blood at Georgetown hospital and hope for Mrs. Lea's recovery which had almost been abandoned, is practically assured.

Mrs. Lea's condition became alarming Sunday after an operation the day before. Her strength, because of lack of blood, was gone, and vitality was fast ebbing away. Senator Lee demanded that a transfusion operation be performed.

After the operation Senator Lea fell to the floor in a faint. He was immediately placed in bed, and is making splendid recovery of his strength.

SAYS HE WAS KNIFED IN THREE CAMPAIGNS

Bryan Writes Sensational Article in His Commoner.

Lincoln, Neb., June 16.—In a sensational reply to men who have accused him of trying to be dictator W. J. Bryan bids defiance to Democrats who are criticising him and intimates they are the same men, who, he says, have been treacherous in the past.

His declaration, which will appear in the forthcoming issue of his Commoner, goes back to the time when he was a candidate for president, when he declares, through three campaigns, he was knifed by Democrats claiming to be his friends, even committeemen being in league against him and giving comfort to the opposition. The Commoner will say in part:

"Mr. Bryan's body, politically speaking, is scarred over by knives that have been wielded by the representatives of the plutocracy inside of the Democratic party and outside. He has made three campaigns and in every one of them he has had to meet treachery within the party as well as be assailed from without. He has had to conduct his campaigns through committeemen, some of whom were in league with the opposition and in secret correspondence with the enemy. He has had to meet false and malicious misrepresentation on the part of the papers subsidized by predatory interests."

RAIN IN MISSISSIPPI VALLEY

Crops Saved in Seven States by Timely Rains.

St. Louis, June 20.—Rain saved the crops of seven states in the Mississippi valley.

From showers in some sections to a heavy, steady downpour in others, the rain was general throughout Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Oklahoma got its most thorough soaking in years and the rain in that state was accompanied by a heavy wind and lightning.

POSTAL BANKS ARE POPULAR

Deposits Expected to Reach $1,000,000 Mark by July 1.

Washington, June 20.—A statement issued by Postmaster General Hitchcock shows that a total of $390,666 was deposited in the first forty-eight postal savings banks in the five months of their operation.

The reports received from the depositories are so encouraging that the prediction is made that by July 1 deposits will have reached $1,000,000.

REHEARING MOTION DENIED

Beef Barons Will Face Trial for Violation of Anti-Trust Law.

Chicago, June 20.—Judge George A. Carpenter in the United States district court denied a motion of J. Ogden Armour and nine other Chicago packers for a rehearing of their motion to quash indictments charging violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. This means the packers must stand trial.

When Cricket Playing Was a Crime.

Until a century and a half ago our great national pastime in fact figured in the statute book as a crime. The game was declared illegal in the time of Edward IV., owing to its having become so popular as to interfere with archery, the then sport of kings. The law against it was vigorously enforced, and every person convicted of playing the game was fined £10 or sent to prison. It was not until the formation of the famous Hambledon club in 17[illegible]

WOULD WRECK ENTIRE TARIFF

Northwestern Senators Threaten to Support Democrats.

MOVEMENT LED BY DIXON

Republican Opposition to Reciprocity Would Join Movement to Lower Duties on Manufactures.

Washington, June 20.—Republican opposition to the Canadian reciprocity bill in the senate reached the stage of open revolt. Led by Senator Dixon of Montana, who again failed in his demand for an explanation or a speech in favor of the bill from some of the Republican leaders who champion the measure, the Republican opponents declared that, if the bill passed, many Republicans would join the Democrats in an attempt to lower the duties on all manufactured products.

"When the corner stone is pulled out of the system of protective tariff," said Senator Dixon, "when the farmers' products are thrown into a free market while his purchases continue to be protected, there are many good protectionists in the Republican ranks here who will vote to have the duties pulled down on iron and steel, chemicals, cotton and many other things."

Other Northwestern Republicans signified by their approval of the Montana senator's words that the passage of the reciprocity bill, which, it is admitted, will have a majority of the votes in the senate, will be attended with a fight that threatens to throw open the whole tariff subject.

"We want to make one killing," declared Senator Crawford of South Dakota. "We find the senators from Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine, states that have always reaped the greatest harvest of protection, advocating this measure to put on the free list every single article raised in the Northwest. I want to deal with this matter in its entirety. If Pennsylvania, Mississippi and Massachusetts have joined hands in a new political propaganda, it is time for the rest of the country to strike out on a new tack."

M'CUMBER ASSAILS MEASURE

Declares Reciprocity Will Injure the American Farmer.

Washington, June 15.—Senator McCumber of North Dakota opposed the reciprocity agreement in the senate on the ground that it would injure the American farmer.

"I believe this treaty," said Senator McCumber, "if enacted into law, would not only postpone for many years the consummation of a hope indulged by the farmers of the country, a hope held out to them by every speaker and writer who sought to secure and hold their votes for the protective policy of the country, but that its logical result would be to destroy the policy itself. I must, therefore, either repudiate all I have advocated for years or oppose the consummation of this agreement."

ROOT AMENDMENT MAY FAIL

House Leader Believes It Will Not Pass Senate.

Washington, June 15.—After a conference with President Taft at the White House Majority Leader Underwood of the house declared he thought the Root amendment to the Canadian reciprocity bill would not be adopted by the senate.

"If it should be," he added, "there would be a serious hitch between the house and senate, as the Democrats in the house are pledged against it."

The president also had a conference on the reciprocity bill with Senators Penrose and Smoot. They said the Root amendment was not discussed.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS OCCUR

Disturbance Felt in San Jose, Seattle and Denver.

San Francisco, June 16.—Earthquake shocks were recorded by a number of seismographs throughout the West. At Santa Clara college, San Jose, Cal., the record began at 6:28 a. m. The seat of the disturbance appeared to be a considerable distance away in the ocean floor.

At Seattle the sharp disturbance began at 4 p. m., lasting five minutes, followed by tremors for two hours.

The shock was also noted at Denver, Colo.

CASE OF CHOLERA ON BOARD

Liner Reaches New York With Passenger Ill of Disease.

New York, June 15.—The Italian liner Europa, from Italian ports, arrived with a case of cholera on board.

Like the Berlin, which arrived Tuesday, she had a single case among the steerage passengers.

The Europa's seven first cabin passengers were detained on board.

KNOWLEDGE.

Bloomington, Ill., June 16.—After serving the McLean County Coal Mine as president a quarter of a century, Adlai E. Scott, his daughter-in-law, who is president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was elected his succeccor.

SILVER WEDDING DREW BIG CROWD

President and Wife Receive on White House Lawn.

Washington, June 20.—The silver wedding celebration of the president and Mrs. Taft, the second that has been held in the White House, came to an end with the reception on the White House lawn. Invitations had been sent to close to 12,000 persons, and while the official count of those who shook hands with the president was not given out, it was estimated that at least 5,000 persons were present.

Never in the history of the nation probably has such a function been held in Washington. The diplomatic corps, the United States supreme court, the senate and house of representatives, the departments of the government, the men who are high in political affairs of the country, the army, the navy and every walk in life almost were represented.

Possibly 15,000 people crowded about the iron fence that surrounds the grounds and looked longingly at the electric display, the splashing fountain and the gay throng within.

Two Picnickers Drowned.

Freeport, Ill., June 20.—Joseph Morrison and John Flynn, members of a picnic party, were drowned in the Pecatonic river near here.

Bobby Burns and the Mayor.

On one occasion, arriving at Carlisle on horseback, Bobby Burns is said to have turned his steed out to grass for awhile, and the animal strayed on to a meadow belonging to the corporation and got impounded. Although the horse was given up to him, the poet retaliated upon the mayor, whose tenure of office was to expire on the very morrow of the incident, as follows:

Was e'er puir poet sae befitted?
The maister drunk, the horse committed!
Puir harmless beast, tak' thee nae care;
Thou'lt be a horse when he's nae mair.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1911.

The way those automobile racers risk their lives is perfectly killing.

There is still a lot or room at the bottom of strawberry boxes for some real good berries.

It is indeed humorous to notice that the people who work the hardest complain least about the heat and vice versa.

Thief River Falls looks more citified than ever with the boys in their uniforms delivering mail at every door.

Last week there seemed to be a question whether or not one was a Saeterdahl or a Sangerfest. Today everybody is a Sangerfest

Tawney in an address to the bankers at Bemidji the first of the week said he was opposed to the initiative and referendum and recall. He also said Senator Nelson would be safe if the election of United States Senators were by popular vote. Of course, Tawney is always wrong.

With Central Chicago torn by dynamite, the treasurer of the state university at Minneapolis an absconder, Mayor Dumas of Cass Lake the head of a Yeggman gang, County Attorney Funkley of Beltrami county resigning because he will not prosecute certain cases an investigation of municipal affairs in our city naturally seems rather tame.

The Progressive Republican League of Minnesota has endorsed the Hon. Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin as their candidate for President in the next campaign. If any republican can fill the next Presidential Chair it ought to be LaFollette.

One of three things seem imperative. We must elect men to congress and legislature who are willing and able to pass laws that are constitutional; we must give our state and national constitutions more elasticity; or we will be obliged to fire without trial both state and United States Supreme Courts

That's a fine—smelling stagnant pool a few steps north of the G. N. depot—a fine ad for our city these convention days, and the mosquitoes it will breed ere it dries up may number into the billions. Give it a few gallons of kerosene if nothing more. ED.

The city dailies make much of the fact that Sen. Knute Nelson has changed his views on the wheat tariff since two years ago. We would suggest to them that a wise man changes his mind when facts confront him, but a fool—never.

THE OPIUM TRADE

When Congress made a law in 1909 by which anyone who imports smoking opium can be fined $5,000 and imprisoned two years, many people had the comfortable feeling that one curse had been driven from our shores.

But on June 7, the New York police after poking around the ship Roseric at a Brooklyn wharf, found $1,000 worth of opium hidden in the bunks. Evidently there is work yet to be done

The Chinese government is going to the bottom of the thing in its effort to stop the cultivation of the variety of poppy that produces opium. This is just as much of a proposition as if we tried to close up every distillery and brewery in the United States. There is one poppy farm in Hong Kong alone that yields $600,000 a year net profit.

We regard the Chinese race as unworthy to walk our streets and inhabit American homes, and yet they have shown the temper of their national life by absolutely stopping the cultivation of the poppy in 11 out of 18 provinces.

The use of opium is more harmful to the American temperament than it ever was to the Chinese, producing among us a sort of delirium tremens.

While the opium habit gains no great hold in America outside of the larger cities, it is seen in every town in the United States in the persons of the victims of morphia, which is obtained from opium. Says someone of this curse, "At first you seem enclosed in a silky film protecting you from the rough contacts of life, but rend it, you find it is of steel."

THE BIG COLLEGE ROWING EVENTS.

The rule of the trainer and the coach is now operative in all its tensely drastic autocracy at New London and Poughkeepsie, in preparation for the great Yale-Harvard race of June 30, and for the meeting June 27 of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, in which Wisconsin, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Syracuse, and Columbia compete.

Three Cornell freshmen who ate some ice cream have learned the last week something about college crew training of which of which they were previously in ignorance.

The intensity with which the college boy throws himself into the work in winning these races is typical of American temperament.

An athlete of one of the Oxford, Eng., colleges thus puts the English spirit in rowing: "We prefer to be beaten as gentlemen amateurs, who row for the sport of it, rather than as highly specialized pupils of a hired trainer."

The losers after an Oxford race talk something like this: "Bully race, wasn't it? We were awfully ragged. But we'll forget all about it at the jolly dinner to-night."

The losers in an American college return with their little universe in ruins at their black disgrace, sobbing like hurt children, almost in hysteria, as the result of the highstrung training of the several weeks previous, sometimes announcing that they are going to quit college.

THE NEW OCEAN MONSTERS AND SEA SICKNESS.

The landing in New York June 21 of the Olympic, a ship 882 feet in length, and 175 feet from her keel to the top of her funnels, brings to our shores one of the marvels of the age. It becomes of personal interest to a good many people who do not care about its scientific aspects, from the fact that the big ships of this type practically banish the danger of seasickness.

The number of people who travel in Europe, is about half what it would be, could one get there by rail. The other half are made permanently land lubbers by the terrors of this malady.

If anyone can raise the price, for a first or second cabin trip by one of the new large ships, let him never waste a moment's thought on sea-sickness. Under all oridinary conditions, you will be more likely to get sea-sick on your own piazza from winging in the hammock.

Many people have previously been out in some fishing boat on the ocean or lakes, where their little craft would tip up at an angle about 50 times more unsettling than the angle at which an ocean liner can be lifted by the waves. Or they were out in some coast steamship where there is no ventilation other than the door from their stateroom to a stuffy hall.

Recollecting the distressing symptoms following such an experience, when they set out for a wrestle with old ocean they are actually seasick before they leave the wharf.

In a modern ocean liner, the powerful motors drive into every stateroom a steady current of life-giving sea air, whose tonic tingle makes you forget everything except your desire for dinner time.

As compared with travel about about our own country, it need not be particularly expensive to go to Europe. The man on $1,000 salary so hates the notion that he can not do everything a millionaire can do, that most of our people insist on knocking elbows with the millionaries in the first cabin, or we won't go at all.

Meanwhile servants and other hard working people who were born in Europe, journey back and forth, not infrequently to kiss the old sod, travelling second and third cabin with the thrifty conservation of resources that is characteristic of the narrower means of Europe.

The Fez.

Can any one explain the popularity of the fez in the hot and dazzling east? asks the London Standard. The brimless woolen covering of red, which derives its name from the Moroccan city, is neither cool nor shady. Nor is the warm looking headgear a native product, for the fezzes of Fez are now few compared with the numbers exported from Germany to the lands of Islam. Perhaps the explanation of the fez's vogue lies in the sacred reputation of the city of sunless streets itself. For 1,000 years it has lived in the odor of sanctity and of wisdom, and as it has clothed the mind of the young Mussulman it still claims to clothe the head.

A Great Old Man.

One Henry Jenkins died in England Dec. 6, 1670, at the alleged age of 169 years. He is said to have been a fisherman for 140 years. Though he could neither read nor write, his reach of memory was such that he would calmly give evidence in court in matters on which his memory went back 120 and 140 years. As a boy he is said to have taken a horse load of arrows to Northallerton to be forwarded north in time for the battle of Flodden. At the age of 100 years he used to swim a wide stream in Yorkshire with ease. He lived until four years after the great fire of London, was poor all his life, but subsisted cheerfully by thatching and salmon fishing.

The King's Way.

It was characteristic of the late King Edward VII. that he never showed too much or too little courtesy, but just enough to maintain his reputation of being the most gracious gentleman of Europe. Some years ago, according to the author of "The People's King," his majesty visited Aberdeen and knighted the lord provost. At the luncheon which followed the king sat next to Mrs. Lyon, the wife of the lord provost, and noticed on the table the card denoting her place.

"I must alter this," the king said, smiling on the lady.

With his pencil he effaced the word Mrs. and in its place substituted Lady and graciously handed the card to her newly made ladyship.

Oak Trees.

To extend the life of one really fine old oak tree who would not willingly cut down whole groups of other trees? How infinitely greater is the incentive when one considers a group of [illegible] oaks, lofty, wide spreading, ruggedly picturesque, with vigor unimpaired and grandeur increasing for centuries. Nursery grown oaks frequently transplanted and properly pruned are not difficult to establish. Their rapidity of growth is really on an average with that of finest other trees. They should be pruned severely before planting.

ECONOMY IN FEEDING.

One of the most important problems of the farmer is to feed his animals economically. He must provide the nutrients the animals need, and must supply these needs with feeds that are palatable. As a rule, farm-grown feeds, with the exception of alfalfa and clover, are lacking in protein; that is, there is not a large enough proportion of protein to carbohydrates to form a balanced ration. If one is feeding fodder corn, timothy or slough hay as a main part of the roughage, he must make up the shortage in protein by grain feeds containing a relatively large proportion of protein. The grain feeds commonly used for this purpose are bran, middlings and oil meal. These feeds must be purchased, and as a rule they cost more per pound of nutrients contained than do such farm feeds as corn or barley.

If one can so arrange his farm operations that at least half of the roughage fed will be either clover or alfalfa hay, the protein provided in the roughage will be sufficient to enable him to use farm-grown feeds, as corn or barley, for the main portion of the grain ration. Clover can be grown more cheaply than timothy or fodder corn. Hence, it is the part of wisdom to make every effort to have clover for at least a portion of the roughage.

Careful feeding experiments show that when feeds are fed in a balanced ration, the digestible nutrients containd in grain feeds are worth about as follows: carbohydrates, 1c per pound; fat, 2c per pound; protein, 4c per pound. Comparing feeds on this basis, when bran is worth $20 per ton, we find that corn is worth $22.66 per ton. Bran can now be purchased at about $20 per ton, while on the farm corn is worth at present about $15 per ton. Thus, if we use corn, we get over $22 worth of feed for $15; while if we use bran, we get $20 worth of feed for $20. This makes plain the advantage of feeding as large a proportion of corn as is consistent with the requirements of the animal.

Feeding experiments have shown also that the nutrients in well-cured roughage are about 60 per cent as valuable as nutrients in grain. On this basis, when bran is worth $20 per ton, clover hay is worth $8.88 per ton. As it costs but $3.59 to produce a ton of clover hay on the average farm, it is seen that 40c will produce as much food value in clover hay as can be purchased in bran for $1. These facts indicate the value of making the ration as largely of corn and clover hay as possible.—A. D. Wilson, Extension Division.

Sunday in Old Scotland.

Looking out of the window used to be an indictable offense on the Sabbath, the London Chronicle says. In 1709 the kirk session of Edinburgh, "taking into consideration that the Lord's day is profaned by people standing in the streets, vaguing in the fields and gardens, as also by idly gazing out of windows, it is ordered that each session take its turn to watch the streets on Sabbath and to visit each suspected house in each parish by elders and deacons with beadle and officers and after sermon, when the day is long, to pass through the streets and to reprove such as transgress and inform on such as do not refrain."

SANITATION IN THE FARM HOME.

"Living in the country" should of rights, be the panacea against all diseases arising from impure air, impure water and adulterated or unfit food. But, population considered, there would appear to be little difference in the extent to which such diseases prevail in country or city. As says a contemporary:

"Every case of tuberculosis, city or country, proves that with pure air 40 miles deep over our heads we have chosen to breath impure air. Every case of typhoid fever—and we cannot deny that the farm home has them—proves that the drainage from stables or outbuildings has somehow gotten into the well, or that our worst enemy, the common housefly, has washed his dirty feet in our food. Every case of diphtheria proves that filth is not far off."

Lack of ventilation in sleeping and living rooms—a superstitious dread of cold air—is probably responsible for a large majority of the cases of tuberculosis occurring on the farms. People who sleep practically out of doors—that is, with windows wide open—seldom contract tuberculosis So long as the bed is warm, it matters little how cold the room is. The artic traveler, ensconsed in a fur sleeping-bag, and with no canopy but the stars, takes his rest under almost ideal conditions. The Eskimos never have consumption until brought south and compelled to live in houses like ours.

Typhoid fever will never originate on a farm if the water-supply is kept pure. Such purity is assured by the "driven well" sunk deep enough to be secure against the contamination of surface drainage. And it often happens that such a well is cheaper than a dug well, the security of which against seepage from barns and outhouses is always a matter of doubt unless tests have proven that the drift of contaminated under-surface waters is away from and not toward the well.

As for the house-fly, the protection of the house by screens over doors and windows, and the quick removal to the fields of the manure heaps, in which it breeds, will add not only to the healthfulness but to the general comfort of the home.—C. R. Barns, University Farm.

da of any considerable amount, will consist of wheat, barley, rye, and oats. The world's price of these four cereals is fixed abroad where the the surplus from the producing countries is disposed of, and is little affected by the place from which the supply is derived. Canadian wheat nets perhaps 10c less a bushel to the producer, than wheat grown in the Dakotas or in Minnesota, due to the fact that the cost of exporting that wheat and warehousing it at Liverpool is considerably greater than the cost to the Dakota farmer of disposing of his wheat to the millers of Minneapolis, or sending it abroad. If now the duty is to be taken off wheat and the Canadian wheat can come to the millers of Minneapolis and other places at this end, it will be made into flour because the capacity of the American mills is thirty-three per cent greater than is needed to mill the wheat of this country. Canadian wheat can be imported and ground into flour without materially reducing the demand for, or price of American wheat, and the surplus will be sent abroad as flour. The price of Canadian wheat will doubtless be increased a few cents by access to the market nearer at hand, but the access to the market nearer at hand will not reduce the price of his wheat to the American farmer for the reasons stated."

Out of his own mouth, the President condemns his own logic by mis-statement of tangible facts. He persists in arguing that the price of the four cereals even for the American farmer is fixed in Liverpool, or, in his own words, is the "world's price." It has been repeatedly pointed out that America has ceased, since 1908 or 1909 to be an exporter of wheat, to any material extent. We do not export our standard grades of wheat. We have not exported any Northern hard wheat for many years, even long before 1908. Out of our total wheat exports which are about 50,000,000 or 60,000,000 bushels a year half of the amount is macaroni i. e. durum wheat, which, to the American miller is not wheat at all. That is, it is not thought of when he talks wheat, and yet it bears the name of wheat, but it is not considered in the making of flour for bread, and is not ground in America to any extent. We raise about 30,000,000 bushels of macaroni wheat and ship it mostly to Italy. The other 30,000,000 bushels which we export, consists of the low grade soft wheat, exported because there is no demand for such grade in America. Hence, neither the macaroni wheat nor the other wheat exported has any effect upon the price of our standard grades of wheat, which find full American demand for every bushel, and the market for our wheat is not "fixed in Liverpool," most emphatically, nor anywhere else, outside of America The President acknowledges that the price south of the Canadian boundary averages 10c a bushel more than it does north of the boundary. If Liverpool fixes the price, would it not be natural that the English market would give preference in fixing the price for its Canadian colonists, at least as high as it does for the American competitor of Canada? Why should England fix the price in America higher than in Canada, if it fixes it at all? The President ought to know better by this time, after all of these months of discussion.

For the year ending June 30, 1910, our total exports of wheat amounted to only 46,679,876 bushels and of wheat flour, 9,040,987 barrels, and as above stated, this consisted of 30,000,000 bushels of macaroni wheat, and the balance the lowest grades of soft wheat and flour—and not a bushel of our standard spring wheat of the Northwest.

The Preident says that the price of barley is "fixed abroad." It would be interesting to have him explain, how, in view of that fact the government statistics do not show that we have shipped a bushel of barley either in or out of America. We have neither imported it nor exported it. Every bushel that is raised is consumed right here at home. The same is true of rye Nor do we export oats, and practically the only oats that we import comes from Canada for seed oats which does not affect the regular market for oats.

The President gives away his case when he acknowledges that the reason why the price of wheat in Canada is 10c less than in the United States, is that the cost of exporting that wheat and warehousing it and marketing it at Liverpool, is considerably greater than the cost to the Dakota farmer in disposing of his wheat to the millers of Minneapolis. In other words, just as we have contended all the time, the reason why American wheat is higher at Minneapolis than the same grades bring in Winnipeg, is because of the home market here, and we want that home market saved for the American farmers

The President is concerned because the American milling capacity is thirty-three per cent greater than is needed to mill the wheat of this country. Well, who made it greater? The wheat crop of this country never was greater than it is now. What business had the millers to build thirty-three percent greater capacity than was any need of if such is the case, and then to ask the Government to sacrifice the farmers of America, in order to import Canadian wheat to keep their mills going?

He says: "Canadian wheat can be imported and ground into flour and the surplus sent abroad as flour." He shuts his eyes to the fact that there is a law now for doing that thing in bond and it has proved of no avail so long as the flour had to be sent abroad. There is a law permitting American millers to bring in Canadian wheat under bond and send it abroad as flour, without affecting the American market for American wheat, or for flour made from American wheat, but the millers have not taken advantage of that privilege of grinding Canadian wheat in bond for export and they will not take advantage of it. If they grind Canadian wheat, it will be to throw the flour upon the American market as well as send it abroad. It will increase the supply without increasing the demand, and the maxim of trade is that that condition reduces price; it will reduce the price of wheat, but since the reciprocity bill leaves fifty cents a barrel protection on flour, the price of flour remains in the control of the American millers and without competition from Canadian millers they will keep up the price of flour so the consumer will get none of the reduction in cost.

But what is the use of arguing against such sophisms as President Taft offers? His statements are not in line with either market conditions or present laws, and he certainly ought to know it. Hence, we do not believe his statements are based upon his candid judgment, but that they are made simply to throw dust into the eyes of the public.

He talks about the advantage to American farmers through the by-products of bran and shorts from the flour mills if we grind Canadian wheat in Minneapolis and Buffalo. He does not recognize the fact that freight rates are so adjusted that bran and shorts can be shipped from Minneapolis to Europe now more cheaply than they can now be shipped from Minneapolis to Fargo. This is not a question of local access to oversupply of bran and shorts; it is a question of railroad rates.

The ultimate result of this measure would be to curtail wheat raising in Minnesota and the Dakotas and expand it in the Canadian Northwest, and when that is accomplished, the Canadians will be quick to see their advantage of building mills closer to the wheat fields than Minneapolis, will then be, and while it would be a temporary advantage to the American millers, the far-sighted millers recognize that ultimately they will be killing the "goose that lays the golden egg," by damaging wheat farming in America and building it up in Canada. A bet was made between grain sportsmen in Winnipeg last week of $5,000.00 against $2,000.00 that the Canadian wheat crop this year will amount to 200,000,000 bushels. It had already amounted in previous years to as much as 166,000,000 bushels, and only one-seventeenth of the available wheat land is yet under cultivation.

The President makes a great point in his effort to show that the farmers are not opposed to reciprocity, by claiming that the National Grange opposition was artificial. An effort was made in the Senate Finance Committee, by Senator Stone and other free traders of the committee, to break down the farmers' opposition, by attacking the sincerity of the National Grange opposition, and the President takes the same course of fighting.

He says: "The employment of a New York City firm to prepare the National Grange circulars is significant, because this same firm is looking for financial assistance in the campaign they are carrying on in behalf of farmers against reciprocity, not only to the Grange, but also to the gentlemen interested in lumber, in the manufacture of print paper, and in other manufactures."

Well, is there anything unnatural or suspicious in that? The firm in qustion makes a business of preparing circulars and handling campaigns of just that nature; that is its sole business, and for years the National Grange organization has made more or less use of its services in anything affecting legislation. That does not mean that that firm could not also be employed by other interests whose cause was common in this case, of desiring to defeat reciprocity. Because reciprocity will injure paper trade is that an argument that it will not injure farmers also? Because it will injure lumber mills in America, does that prove that the farmers are not concerned about their own interests? And because the lumber mills and the paper mills employ experts to manage the details of their campaign is there any argument in the pointing of the finger of scorn at the farmers for using those same experts? Does that prove that the farmers are not sincere? Such attack upon the farmers' sincerity is unworthy even of an intelligent demagogue.

But, aside from the National Grange the farmers' opposition is not expressed exclusively by the Grange, nor even mainly by the Grange. With only one or two exceptions, every farm paper in America is fighting reciprocity in behalf of its readers. The Northwestern Agriculturist began the fight weeks before the Grange was heard from. The Northwestern Agriculturist petition signed by 35,000 Northwestern farmers, had nothing whatever to do with the Grange. We first copied the Grange petition, but the farmers of the Northwest failed to sign the Grange petition, for the Grange has comparatively little influence in the Northwest. A month later, we published our own petition, and then, when it was apparent to our readers that they did not have to be Grangers in order to sign the North western Agriculturist petition, the signatures began coming in by the hundreds and by the thousands, and our petition which we carried to Washington in a great roll as big as a bass drum, contained more signatures, many times over, than the combined petitions of all the Granges of America.

Now why does the President single out the National Grange and attack the farmers of America on the ground that the National Grange is not sincere? Even if it is not sincere (which is untrue), the farmers of America have been heard from, and the President's course proves his own hypocrisy and demagogy. His brother, Henry W. Taft, the attorney of the Steel Trust, could throw light on President Taft's reason for demanding the passage of the bill which will give the greatest boom to Steel Trust trade and its stock that any monopoly has ever known. Brother Henry is a Caucasian, but he is the "nigger in the woodpile."—Northwestern Agriculturist.

FOR ORGANIZING THE SUGAR TRUST

Witness Says Havemeyer Received $10,000,000.

TWO COMMITTEES AT WORK

Second House Body Inquiring Into Underweighing Frauds, One of the Convicted Dock Superintendents Describing the Schemes Used for Cheating the Government Out of Duties.

Washington, June 20.—With two separate committees of the house delving into the history and operations of the American Sugar Refining company and other sugar corporations there were brought out surprising tales of riches made overnight, and sordid stories of alleged frauds against the government.

The special "sugar trust" investigating committee continued its inquiry into the formation and workings of the big sugar corporations, having before it as a witness James H. Post, president of the National Sugar Refining company of New Jersey.

The committee on expenditures in the treasury department began work on another angle of the investigation, that of the recent weighing frauds at the port of New York, questioning Oliver Spitzer, one of the American's dock superintendents, who was convicted, and later pardoned by the president.

Havemeyer Well Rewarded.

Mr. Post told how H. O. Havemeyer had been rewarded for forming the National Sugar Refining company of New Jersey by stock in the refinery worth $10,000,000, stock which since had earned in dividends $2,500,000 more. Mr. Post insisted that the $10,000,000 did not represent only a promoter's profit. Pressed for some explanation of what it did represent, he finally answered:

"Well, there were three refineries put together."

Asked how Mr. Havemeyer got possession of the stock, the witness laconically replied:

"I sent it to him a few days after I received it."

Spitzer told the committee on expenditures in the treasury department the entire history of the sugar weighing frauds, describing dishonest weighing schemes as far back as 1885.

UNABLE TO LIVE TOGETHER

Two Wives of Kansas Man Quarrel After Brief Acquaintance.

Pittsburg, Kan., June 20.—The two wives of Peter O. Sharp have quarrelled.

Each claims she is the legal wife and demands that the other go away.

Peter Sharp lost his first wife, Anna Catherine, in Chicago during the big fire forty years ago and believed she had been killed.

At last, however, she found him through the pension office and came here from her home in California.

Sharp, believing his wife was dead, had married again.

At first it seemed the two wives would be good comrades. Anna Catherine is seventy and wife No. 2 is fifty. But now they are quarrelling.

"Anna Catherine isn't the wife I lost forty years ago. She had a sweet disposition then," said Sharp. "Now she is a crank and is trying to get rid of Louise. I'm going to build Anna Catherine a house by herself. I won't give up Louise."

AFFECTS SIX HUNDRED ROADS

Suspension of Increases In Single Package Charges.

Washington, June 20.—Advances in the minimum charge for the transportation of freight in single packages and in small lots proposed by the railways in classification territory, to become effective July 1, were suspended by the interstate commerce commission until Oct. 28 next. The suspension affects approximately 600 roads.

The tariffs filed on behalf of the roads provide for a minimum charge of 25 cents for each package practically irrespective of weight and distance. An investigation into the tariffs will be made by the commission.

Canoe Trip Fatal to Three.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., June 20.—Lela and Lena Stewart, sisters, sixteen and fourteen years old, and Fred Hall, fourteen years old, were drowned when their canoe capsized in Spring brook, a branch of Grand river, in this city. There were no witnesses of the accident and the first known of it was when the girl's canoe was found floating bottom up on the stream.

Big Fees for St. Paul Lawyers.

Washington, June 20.—Three St. Paul lawyers, Frank B. Kellogg, C. A. Severance and Pierce Butler, have, since March, 1909, received in the aggregate the sum of $87,154 for special services performed for the department of justice.

ABE'S CONVERSION

By ELMER TROOP SAWYER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I was a student in the University of ——, one evening, desiring to send a note to a young girl who lived some distance back of the college buildings, I asked Abe, the sweep, who took care of my room, to take it for me.

"I'm in a hurry for a reply to this, Abe," I said. "Go straight back over the campus and through the grounds beyond, and it won't take you half an hour to go and come."

"Yes, sah!" replied Abe, and, taking the note, he departed.

I waited an hour for him, at the end of which time he came in panting.

"Were you kept waiting, Abe?" I asked.

"No, sah. I wasn't kep' waitin'."

"Then why were you gone so long?"

"I didn't go the way yo' told me to go, sah."

"Why not?"

"I nebber go dat way, sah. I had a bad sperience on dat route once."

"Experience! What kind of an experience?"

"I don't mind tellin' you about it if yo' won't tell any ob de students. Dey don't b'leibe nothin' about hants, and dey laugh at me. But I tell you, sah, dere hants on dat road, and dey get inside de statutes in de park and raise de debbil."

"Get into the statues?"

"Yes, sah. I'm gwine to tole yo' about one ob 'em. He make me a good man, though. I own up to dat. But I hain't got conscience enough to go that way any mo' nohow.

"I war de wickedest man anywhar. I war a liar and a thief and everything that was bad. Yo' know Professor Barnacle? He was student den. His fader had chickens. All us niggers lub chickens and watermillions. When de broilers git plenty big I used to steal 'em, and when de chickens war big and de watermillions war ripe I used to go home past the Barnacle place, and I take a chicken under one arm, with ma finger pressed on its throat to keep it from squawkin', and under de udder arm I had a watermillion.

"When I'd committed these depredations lots ob times Mr. Barnacle he says to me, 'Abe, what yo' stealin' our chickens fo'?' 'Go 'long,' I says; 'I hain't got no use fo' yo' chickens.' 'Well, Abe, all I hab to say is dat I heard a clatter in de chicken house one night and went out to see what was de matter. I saw somethin' dark walkin' away and follered it. I saw it go into yo' house.'

"'Fo' Gawd, Mr. Barnacle, I hain't teched chicken meat in a year. I's too poor to buy 'em, and I's too honest to steal 'em.'

"'Abe,' he said, 'yo're sacrilegious.'

"I larfed when he said dis, fo' I wasn't convicted ob sin, as de minister says, but I got convicted sho' enough mighty quick arter dat. De watermillions war gittin' ripe, and one night, passin' de Barnacle place, I tuk a big watermillion under my arm, and I thought how good fried chicken would taste fo' breakfast. Den I went into de chicken house to git one ob 'em. Dere war so much squawkin' dat I lit out fo' awhile and hid in de bushes. I saw somebody come out ob de house and look around, den go away. I waited fo' awhile; den I sneaked in, got ma chicken and went off towards ma cabin.

"I war passin' de statute ob General Somebody or odder who fit fo' dis state in de rebelution when de statute called out:

"'Halt thar, you Abe!'

"I stood still as I could fo' de shakin' ob ma legs.

"'Drap de chicken,' says de statute.

"'I hain't got no chicken.'

"De right arm ob de statute raised and frowed somepin at me. I heard it splosh on de groun'. I reckon it was an egg.

"I was so skeered at seein' de statute frow somepin dat I le' go de neck ob de chicken, and it began to squawk.

"'You say yo' hainit got no chicken, eh?' says de statute.

"I didn't say nothin' to dis.

"'Drap de chicken and de watermillion,' says de statute.

"I dropped 'em bofe, and de chicken went off squawkin'.

"'Abe,' says he statute, 'I'm a hant what tuk up inside dis statute fo' to convict yo' ob chicken and watermillion stealin', and I'm gwine to stop yo' doin' it.'

"'How you gwine to do dat?' I says.

"'I'm gwine to kill yo'.

"Dat statute he just lifted up his arm ag'in and fired a pistol, and de ball sung right up above ma head.

"'Fo' Gawd, Mr. Hant,' I says. 'I promise not to steal chickens or watermillions no mo' if yo'll spa' ma life.'

"'Abe,' said the hant, 'yo' not only a thief; yo' a liar. How I gwine know yo' keep yo' promise?'

"'I hope I may die ef I ever do.'

"'Waal, Abe, I'll let yo' off dis time, but if yo' eber steal or lie ag'in I'll come out ob dis statute and pummel yo' to deaf. Now yo' kin go on.'"

I told Abe he was quite excusable for taking a roundabout route.

When I saw Professor Barnacle again I told him the story. He smiled and said that he was the hant behind the statue.

MERCHANT OF FINE CLOTHES KORSTADS CLOTHING AND SHOES

Diana of Ephesus.

Ephesus was one of the twelve Ionic cities of Asia Minor and was situated in Lydia, near the mouth of the river Caystrus. According to Strabo, it was founded by Androclus, son of Codrus. It ultimately came into possession of the Romans, and in the time of Augustus it was the greatest place of trade of all the cities of Asia west of the Taurus. St. Paul resided there three years, but the destruction of its great temple by the Goths in 260 A. D. gave it a blow from which it never recovered. This was the famous temple of Diana. Near the western extremity of the town are still to be seen some massive structures, which have since 1868 been carefully excavated. It is now certain that these stand on the famous temple site.

A Famous Windmill.

Nantucket possesses what is believed to be the oldest windmill for grinding grain in actual operation in America. Nathan Wilbur, a Nantucket sailor, who had seen the busy windmills of Holland as he sailed abroad, built it out of timbers of wrecked ships in 1746. There has never been a day in all the 165 years since that time when the mill has not been busy. There is always a wind to turn its outstretched wings.

What He Would Pay to Hear.

"Clemens," said a friend to Mark Twain some years ago, "wouldn't you like to go and hear Ingersoll on Moses this evening?"

"No," replied the humorist; "I wouldn't give 10 cents to hear Ingersoll on Moses, but I would give $10 to hear Moses on Ingersoll."

A Triumph of Ratiocination.

Damocles saw the sword suspended by the hair.

"Since it can't cut the hair, I judge your wife has been sharpening her pencil," he remarked to the king.—New York Sun.

The Poet's Spur.

"This is a great poem. You must have been thinking of something inspiring when you wrote it."

"I was. I was thinking of the installment man."—Pittsburg Post.

Jellyfish.

The bay of Naples abounds in medusae or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as "noctiluca" (night lanterns) by the natives.

A Little Risky.

Suppose your wife—it is a wild supposition, of course, but let us just imagine it for once—set up her own judgment against yours in some vital matter. Try this way out of the difficulty. Say to her:

"My dear, you know that my judgment is above criticism, for I had the inspired wisdom to select you from among the many, but you, on the other hand, cannot place absolute reliance upon your judgment if, after accepting me, you find yourself wavering as to your confidence in my ability to direct our ways."

You will readily see that a wife in wisdom cannot protest against such a diplomatic assertion of domestic leadership.

The Missionary a Puzzle.

To the untutored Chinaman the presence of the missionary is a puzzle. They simply cannot imagine human beings exiling themselves from their native land for the love of men on the other side of the globe. So they frame sundry theories to explain the thing to themselves. One theory is that the missionaries are secret political agents bent on gaining an influence over the Chinese and then swaying them to the advantage of their respective governments. Only of late have the natives come to realize that the strangers are not sent by their governments, but by religious groups. According to another theory, China is so excellent and renowned that the red haired barbarians come to live there for the mere pleasure of it. As for their self denying works of benevolence, these are supposed to be prompted by the desire to acquire merit.—Century.

His Fortune.

"Who is that handsome young man standing over there?" inquired an old gentleman of a rich old lady at a party.

"That's my son-in-law. He's a very brilliant young man: made a large fortune by the law."

"Indeed!" said the old gentleman. "How's that?"

"The law made him my daughter's husband."—London Answers.

) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action, and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st, day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said da to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D., 1911.

W. J. LaBree,
Sheriff of Pennington.
County, Minnesota.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

FURNISHED ROOMS:—For rent 417 Knight Av. N. tf

For pure, wholesome fun, for laughter that will not be followed by the slightest tinge of regret for having brought your mother, sister or sweetheart to see it, is "The Flower of the Ranch," the Howard musical success coming to the Auditorium on Monday, July 10th. Its sparkling comedy, its overflowing mirth, its pretty costumes and its excellent cast have combined to make it the most talked of play of the season. The marvelous little "Broilers" who do the wonderful dances which bring the audiences to their feet with such swiftness and dash, still work with the same enthusiasm that has made these girls a revelation to the theatregoers who heretofore have been accustomed to the bored looking chorus girl. The musical numbers "Just Say You Care," "Worried," "What's The Use of Dreaming," "The Pajama and the Nightie," "The Same Old Story," "California" and "The Days of '49" receive encore after encore.

THAT GOLD MINE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

"Abner Day, you are an old fool! You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

Abner Day, farmer, had heard these words hundreds of times in the fifteen years since he had married the Widow Winters, and his reply had always been the same:

"Waal, some folks are born that way and can't help it."

On a portion of Abner's farm was a range of hills. It was a limestone ridge, but there was a legend that gold had been found there years before—a nugget of gold as big as a teacup. That legend never died. When other news was scarce it was brought to the front, and it was generally believed in. Abner's grandfather had meant to open the hills some day in search of other nuggets. So had his father. So had he. The trouble was to find time. There were plowing and dragging and planting and hoeing and reaping, and he never got a day to himself.

The widow began to poke at him as soon as married, but it did no good. She would go on to tell how many tons of gold were probably hidden away in those hills and how, if dug out, they could have the clock cleaned, a new door to the shed and the cellar stairs repaired.

"I'll get around to it some day, Sarah," he would reply.

"But why not tomorrow?"

"Mebbe I can."

But he didn't. His farm work interfered. As he finished his morning meal the wife would say:

"Now, Abner, that gold mine today. You can dig half a ton of it as well as not, and we need new flatirons and a washboard."

"Yes, I know."

As the day passed and he sat down to supper she would ask:

"Dig any gold today, Abner?"

"Nope. I had other things to see to."

Of course the gold mine legend was gossip for many miles around. Once a month at least some one came along and wanted to dig on shares. They would see the wife first and she would readily agree. All she wanted was that a lawyer should draw up the agreement so that it would hold water. She had been cheated by a lightning rod man once and she didn't propose to be anybody's victim again. She kept a corner of the cellar cleaned out to store the gold in, but it was never used. The stranger would go down into the field and talk with Abner and after he had winded himself he would hear the farmer say:

"These taters has got to be hoed, and you come around some other time."

"But don't you want to be a rich man?"

"It would be kinder nice."

"You could go to Europe."

"Yaas."

"You could build a fine house and have your carriage and servants."

"I see."

"Perhaps you'd be elected governor."

"Shoo."

"And I'll have a lawyer draw up the contract and bring it here tomorrow to be signed. Digging will begin at once. Within a week"—

"Yes, I know, but these taters"—

It was always so, and when Abner scuffed up to the house at sundown it was to find his wife in the sulks or in tears, and she generally ended up with:

"And if you don't go to digging the first thing in the morning I will."

Think of it—fifteen years of poking and not a hole made in the hillside! The ex-widow must have been a patient, determined woman to stand it. But stand it she did. She would conquer or die. One day after her many disappointments she fell ill. The doctor pronounced it typhoid fever, and she became a very sick woman. At times when she was out of her head she would babble about that gold mine. At length, to prevent further worry, the M. D. advised Abner to go to digging and ease the mind of the patient.

"But I've got to plow out corn tomorrow," was protested.

"Never mind your corn. You get a couple of men and open those hills or you'll soon be a widower."

"Do you think it'll be safe to have several tons of gold around?"

"Quite so. When I call again I want to see you at work."

In a lucid interval the patient was told that digging was to begin. She was very ill, but she braced up enough to say:

"Tell Abner that if he finds any old plow points or wagon tires mixed up with the gold to throw 'em one side. He's an awfully careless man."

Abner and his hired man dug and dug and dug. They dug here and they dug there, and people came for ten miles around to see them throw out shovels of gold. But there was no gold. There was neither gold nor silver nor copper nor iron. There was limestone, but nothing else—nothing but a petrified hickory ax handle. When this was found the patient had passed the crisis of her fever and was mending. Abner was permitted to go to her bedside and exhibit his find.

"What is it?" she asked.

"A petrified ax handle."

"Didn't you find the petrified ax blade to go with it?"

"Nope."

"But why not?"

"Didn't dig long enough, I guess."

"Abner Day, you are an old fool! You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

NIPPED IN THE BUD

The Story of a Mexican Revolution

By JOHN GALLAGHER, JR.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The Mexican army was assembled on the plain outside the capital for maneuvers. Captain Fernand Cardoza had just come into his tent from battalion drill when a messenger summoned him to the president's tent. Cardoza obeyed the order immediately.

"Captain," said his excellency, having satisfied himself that there was no one about to hear him, "I have received information of a plot to carry these troops over to General Jose Furtado, depose me and make him president in my stead. I have another force, loyal to me, thirty miles from here, which if present would turn the scales in my favor. I have ordered these troops to march at once, but it will be impossible for them to get here before tomorrow night. I am desirous not only of delay, but of concealing my knowledge of the plot from my enemies. You I know I can trust to aid me, and I have an especial matter for you to attend to."

Cardoza stood without reply. He was bound in honor to the president, but one thing stood in his way—he loved the daughter of the man who was plotting to control Mexico.

"Are you heart and soul for me?" asked the president, eying the captain.

"I am."

"Very well. Just before daybreak a signal will be given for the troops encamped here for certain brigades hostile to me to rise. A force will be sent to my tent to dispatch me, while others proclaim Furtado president. I wish you to prevent the signal being given. A cannon is to be left loaded without the guard line of the Third brigade with a primer in the vent. Some one at the first gray light of dawn will pull the lanyard. I wish you to prevent that signal gun being fired. Conceal yourself near by and dispatch silently whoever attempts it."

"Your excellency's order shall be obeyed."

Captain Cardoza that night emerged from his tent, passed beyond the guards and, making a detour, came upon the rear of the Third brigade. There on a small natural mound a cannon mingled with the gloom. Cardoza lay down in some bushes beside the piece and waited. It was with difficulty that he could keep awake. Indeed, shortly after midnight he fell asleep, but he slept lightly, so that a slight stirring of bushes on the other side of the gun awakened him and he started up.

The moon had risen and shone on the cannon and a figure standing by it. No man stood there, but a woman, and, though the moon was waning, it gave enough light to enable Cardoza to see her face distinctly. He recognized Marina Furtado, the daughter of the man who was conspiring to be president.

"Marina!" he gasped.

She started.

"Fernand! Is that you?"

"You are not going to fire that gun?"

"I am."

"One moment. I wish to speak with you."

He sprang toward her, and she seized the lanyard. He stood holding a knife above her head.

"For heaven's sake, don't pull that cord. At the slightest movement I shall bring the knife down upon you."

"You, Fernand! You would kill the girl you love and who loves you!"

"Honor compels me. I am pledged to prevent you."

"And my pledge to my father obliges me. He would trust no other."

"Fire at your peril!"

She looked into his face and saw by the light of the moon that his resolution was taken.

"I thought you loved me?" she said.

"I do, but I love my honor more."

The two stood gazing at one another. Slowly the arm that held the lanyard sank, and the cord dropped from her hand. Then her lover took her in his arms, and she fainted on his breast.

When she recovered they formed a plan. He was to return to the president and report that no man had attempted to fire the signal gun. She was to return to her father and tell him [illegible]

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

At 6 o'clock in the morning Captain Cardoza entered the president's tent. He found the head of the republic pale and anxious. He had not slept during the night.

"Well?" asked his excellency.

"You are, of course, aware that the gun was not fired. Perhaps the information you received was false—perhaps was intended to injure General Furtado."

"I cannot think so."

At this moment General Furtado rode up to the president's tent, dismounted and entered.

"I have understood, your excellency," he said, "that I am accused of conspiracy against the government."

"I have been informed to that effect."

"I will not deny that there is dissatisfaction as to some of your recent acts. If you will satisfy your people in this respect I can control the army in your favor and will do so."

"State them."

General Furtado left the president his ardent supporter, and the revolution had been nipped in the bud. But it was the lovers who had made the change. Captain Cardoza had prevented the signal from being given, and Marina had won her father over to the plan of action he had adopted.

TO CURE SORE BUNIONS
Treatment Marvelously Quick for This and All Foot Troubles.

"Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water; soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give desired results.) Repeat this each night until cure is permanent." All pain and inflammation is drawn out instantly and the bunion soon is reduced to normal size. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off and will stay off. Sore, tender feet and smelly, sweaty feet need but a few treatments. A twenty-five cent package of Calocide is usually sufficient to put the worst feet in fine condition. Calocide is no longer confined to only the doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. This will prove a welcome item to persons who have been vainly trying to cure their foot troubles with ineffective tablets and foot powders.

HIS MANLY BEAUTY

By WALTER EMMONS BROOKS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

At twenty-two I lived in a city and in a rear room. Back of the house were yards just deep enough for clotheslines and then the rears of other houses.

One day while looking out of my window I saw a girl sitting pensively at a window of a house across the yards. She was doing something with her hands which I inferred to be knitting, though it was done beneath the sill, so that I could not be sure. She was looking down pensively, but whether her eyes were bent on her work I could not tell. I was struck with her regular features and, above all, with an expression of sadness that seemed inappropriate to a young face.

It doesn't require much to set a young man's fancy flying, though by this I do not mean to belittle the picture to which I have referred. I saw her about the same time every day and fell to dreaming about her. The fuel of love is imagination. A youngster is attracted to a girl not for what she is, but for what his fancy paints her. And girls are still more apt to endow a man with noble qualities and love him for them.

It was in the summer time, and when I came home from business every day at 6 it was still very light, and every day at that hour I saw the girl opposite, sitting in the same position. Since I stood right up before my own window it was impossible that she should not have been aware of my presence there. Occasionally she would turn her face outward, but I could not see that her eyes ever rested upon me. But I remembered that a pure girl would not gaze upon a stranger—certainly not when he was looking at her.

Every day on entering my room after my return from business I dressed for the evening, making myself appear as attractive as possible, then threw open the shutters with as much clatter as possible that I might attract the attention of the girl opposite. Hearing the sound, she would turn her face in my direction, but only momentarily and without any look of recognition. This I put down to her native modesty and purity. But I remembered that there was a young man opposite, and it occurred to me that if she considered that young man especially good looking she might fall in love with him, for this was not only my theoretical basis of love at that time, but I saw no other way of attracting her.

I spent some time discovering the young lady's name, then wrote her a note couched in as manly and respectful terms as I knew how. I had no thought of making headway by what I wrote, but I must open communication, and in doing so I wished to give the girl an opinion of me commensurate with the admiration, if any, that she had for my personal appearance.

To make a long story short, I received a courteous reply to my note, the young lady stating that, though she could not consent to a correspondence with a stranger, in case I could find means of making myself known to her through a mutual friend or otherwise, should my position and character prove satisfactory, she would be happy to have me call upon her.

The day I received this note I spent some time before my mirror wondering that the girl should have found such attractiveness in it as to call forth so favorable a reply. I set my wits to work to discover some mutual friend to introduce me; but, having recently come to the city a stranger, I knew very few people. Finally I wrote another note to the girl I admired, stating the case and asking permission to furnish references.

To this I received a reply that she would not receive calls for a few weeks, but if after the expiration of that time I was of the same mind she would be happy to receive me.

Those weeks were the longest of my life. From Sunday to Sunday seemed like from month to month. After three Sundays had passed I dispatched a note asking if I might be permitted to call. I received a reply giving the desired permission that day week.

When after the sending up of my card Miss Markley came into the room where I awaited her what I especially noticed was that she looked at me as though she had never seen me before and was curious to know what sort of a looking fellow I was. Having received me with a fair amount of cordiality, we seated ourselves, and she said:

"I will explain why I put you off so long. It was necessary. I had learned who you are, and the delay was not because the report I had of you, for it was very flattering. The truth is that I was born blind. Until a couple of weeks ago I had never seen any object. It was recently decided by several oculists in counsel that an operation should be performed on my eyes with a view to opening up a world to me. That operation has been eminently successful. You have mentioned in your notes having seen me at my window. I have never seen you till this moment."

That was the last of reliance upon my manly beauty to win a sweetheart. I married Miss Markley, but I won her not by my good looks, for she says that I am rather homely than handsome.

"You'd never accuse Miss Million of having her fortune in her face?" "Never. It's plainly in her figure."

BLIGHT IN THE ORCHARDS.

What tuberculosis or yellow fever is among human beings, what hog-cholera or glanders among animals, that the so-called "fire-blight," "apple-blight" or "pear-blight" is among the trees of the orchard. Originating in a bacillus invisible to the naked eye; so contagious that it may be borne to the orchard by insects from an infected plant half a mile away or on the bright steel of a pruning-knife which seems as clean as it is bright, this destroyer adds mystery to the deadly effectiveness of its attacks; and the discouraged fruitgrower is made to feel that he is dealing with a foe whose operations border on the domain of the supernatural.

But the organism which produces blight has been recognized, its habits defined, and some means have been found, more or less effective, of staying its ravages. Its name is Bacillus amylovorus. Its guilt is proved by the fact that it is found in large numbers in freshly-blighted twigs. From such twigs the bacteria have been taken and grown in laboratory cultures. Suitable healthy wood, incoluated with these cultures, quickly manifested the bacteria in abundance.

Moisture favors their growth; dryness is fatal to them. They therefore thrive in moist, warm weather; but freezing does not harm them. They are as active as ever after being kept frozen for long periods. Their main points of attack are the inner bark and growing layer of the tree's trunk and limbs. The dead blossoms, leaves and branches seen on infected trees are the result of a stoppage of the upward flow of life-giving sap. The disease travels downward from the point of infection, at the rate of from two or three inches to a foot a day—the faster and further in succulent, sappy shoots.

The upward mounting of the sap from the roots, in the warm days of spring, furnishes the starchy, sugary substances for which the bacteria, having found lodgment on the tree, have been waiting. Now they, grow, and multiply rapidly. The pressure of the sap stream causes the sap to ooze out at the disease margins. Thence the sap may often be seen running down the branch or trunk, a sweet, slimy, sticky substance, swimming with virulent bacteria. Lured by this, even that friend of humanity, the bee, becomes an agent for the spread of blight to other plants and trees.

Horticulturists are endeavoring with more or less success, to bring into existence a class of fruit-trees which will not be susceptible to the attacks of blight. Duchess apples, for instance are counted freer from the trouble than Wealthy, and Kieffer pears than Bartlett. Here lies the secret of the first line of defense against the foe: Plant non-susceptible varieties.

A second line of defense consists in the adoption of cultural methods inimical to the blight. These, unfortunately are also inimical to the best growth of the tree. They consist in annual pruning, small in amount, and preferably done in the growing season; of a limitation of fertilization; and of limited cultivation of the ground—confined, perhaps, to only a middle strip between the trees.

The third line is the extermination of infected parts of trees, or even of a whole tree, as a measure of protection to others. Wherever blight has found a foothold, every tree and shrub of the home family should be examined for its presence; and, if found, that part should be ruthlessly cut out and burned, as quickly as observed. Repeated inspection should be made at different seasons, and not a single case allowed to escape.

In pruning out- cut back of any perceptible injury, at least 6 inches. If on the trunk, remove the bark for the distance named, and scrape and burn the surface; or treat it with a strong solution of copper sulphate or corrosive sublimate. The tools used in cutting out blight should never be carried from one tree to another without disinfection in formaldhyde or carbolic acid solution.

The above are the most efficacious means at present known for checking the attacks of blight. The suggestions here offered are condensed from a longer article, in the Minnesota Farm Review, by K. [illegible] of the Extension Division.—C. R. B.

A GRIM VISITOR

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I was sitting in a restaurant in Naples with several American friends talking about the cholera.

"This cholera business is merely a scare," said one. "Besides, why fear death? We must all die some time."

"That for death!" said young Thornton, snapping his fingers. "I'm going to live to be a hundred."

A singular looking fellow came into the restaurant and sat down at an adjoining table. I could not make out that he was of any especial age; he might have been thirty or fifty or a hundred and fifty. Yet there was something about him that made him look prematurely aged. His eyes were set very deep in his head and glistened like those of a wild animal in the dark. He was so thin that one could almost see the junctions of the bones of his face, and his clothes hung about him in huge folds. He had evidently heard Thornton's boast, for he fixed his eyes on him in a way that made my blood run cold. Other of the younger members of the party who sat with their backs to the newcomer perpetrated jokes about death. Every word on that subject seemed to excite the stranger's ire until he was lashed into a fury.

"My friends," he said presently, "you who condemn death do not realize what you are talking about. You should have seen such sights as I have seen. Were any of you in a battle?"

We all stared at the stranger, tongue tied. No one of us claimed to have seen anything of war.

"I was at the battle of Gravelotte," he said, "and advanced with an attacking party of Prussians. If you had seen that white pall that I threw over the faces of those who were struck you would not laugh at death."

"You threw over their faces?" I asked, puzzled.

"Then at New Orleans," the man went on without noticing my remark, "you should have seen the British coming up in perfect formation against the Kentucky hunters. Here, there, everywhere the redcoats sank down in their tracks"—

"Do you refer to the battle of New Orleans, sir?" interrupted one of our party.

"Yes, sir. I do. But battles are nothing. Take the great plague that swept London. Two men were walking before me on Cheapside. I touched one by way of attracting his attention. He paled and sank down in his tracks. A party were drinking in an ale house without the town limits. As I looked at one of them he threw up his hands, with a groan. I went out into the street and saw the people burning barrels of tar. I laughed at them."

"Do you mean, sir," I asked, "that you were in London at that time?"

"My friend, where have I not been when men and women and children were struck down by this something you call death? In the days of ancient Rome whole communities of Gauls who rebelled against the Roman authority were butchered. They had been; they were not."

It was evident to most of us that the man was a lunatic. But we did not communicate the thought to one another. Each of us was spellbound no less by his strange talk than his weird personality.

"But even these stricken barbarians, so far as numbers are concerned, were but few in comparison with those this thing you sometimes call the reaper has cut down at one time. There have been portions of the earth that have sunk into the sea swallowing up a hundred times the number of the greatest butchery."

"When?" I asked.

"When? What knowledge have you of the little planet on which you live beyond a few thousand years? The time of which I speak was forgotten 10,000 years ago."

"Tell us," I asked, "your nationality. You speak English as if you are Anglo-Saxon."

"English! I speak every living and every dead language. I am a citizen of the world. I am always busy. At this moment I am resting preparatory to a great work."

"When did you come to Naples?"

"Yesterday at noon."

We all shuddered. At 12 o'clock the day before the first cholera patient had died.

"Will you remain long?"

"My stays no human being knows. I go into a place, do what work I find for me to do there and go elsewhere. Then I stop often by the wayside. During my journey here I stopped at a cottage. There was one less in the family when I left. On entering this city I made several calls before resting from my journey. But I must be going. I am pleased to have met you gentlemen."

He rose, and as he did so I thought I heard a grating, rattling sound under his long cloak. Paying no further attention to any of us except Thornton, whose remark he had heard on entering and which had started him on his grewsome talk, the stranger as he passed him stopped and offered his hand. Thornton looked up at him in terror, withholding his hand, but the maniac kept his eyes fixed on him, and slowly the hand was lifted and drawn toward the man whose own was outstretched. The moment Thornton's was clasped a change came over his face.

The stranger passed out.

That very night Thornton died of cholera.

The Girl Whom Nobody Knew

By EDWARD D. ROGERS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Where did you meet your wife, Campbell?" I asked.

He smiled.

"Evidently," I added, "you met her in some singular way."

"Not at all. It is not any peculiarity of my meeting with her, but the multiplicity of my meetings before I was even introduced to her."

"Explain."

"I was one evening at a dance that followed a dinner at the house of a friend, there being many more at the dance than at the dinner. While dancing I saw a girl sitting by herself, not having any attention whatever. I was surprised, for I was very much struck with her appearance. 'I shall get her out of that,' I remarked inwardly. 'she's not a girl for a wallflower.' And, being acquainted with almost every one in the room, I asked one after another to introduce me. Not a person I applied to had any acquaintance with her. Every time I spoke to any one on the subject I was obliged to point her out, and it was not long before she noticed what I was about. She smiled, and every time she smiled I set off to find a new person to introduce me. Finally, after leaving the room in search of another possible go-between, on my return the lady was gone.

"I didn't even know her name. When I spoke to the host about her I could not even describe her sufficiently for him to recognize her by my description. He said she must be from out of town or a newcomer. In an eastern city, those in the swim are cold to those not in it, and sometimes the most desirable persons to know are left to themselves.

"This girl whom nobody knew and my unsuccessful attempt to be introduced to her interested me. Possibly it was this attempt and failure that kept her in my mind. At any rate, I could not forget her. My endeavor was a compliment to her, and I was quite sure it would put me on a pleasant footing with her if I could find her.

"One day I was driving my automobile down an avenue when I met another machine, on the back seat of which sat the girl whom nobody knew. There was an amused smile on her face as we shot by each other. I determined to turn and follow her that I might see where she lived or, at any rate, get some clew to her identity. I slowed up and brought my auto about; then started back [illegible] speed to overtake the other car and came so near that, happening to turn her head, she saw me.

"At that moment a policeman who had been chasing me overtook me and called on me to stop. Not daring to disobey the mandate of an officer of the law, I was obliged to come to a halt. The girl I had been following saw the whole thing and laughed. The policeman took me to the station, and I paid a fine for speeding.

"Mad is the only word that describes my feelings. What could I do? I had lost my chance and might never have another.

"But I did. One day I was on a train. It was summer time, and every window was open. We came to a stop at a station. I was reading a newspaper. A train coming from the opposite direction steamed up to the station and stopped, the two trains remaining side by side for several minutes. Then I heard the other train begin to move. Looking up from my paper, there in a window directly opposite mine, slowly moving away from me, with an amused smile on her face—indeed, mischief in her eye—was the girl whom nobody knew.

"As soon as she had passed out of sight, snatching my belongings, I arose and ran out on the platform, intending to board her train, but she was in the last car. I saw it pulled away with accelerating rapidity. Nevertheless I ran after it and as I did so saw the girl that nobody knew with her head out of the window laughing at me. For a few minutes I gained on the train, then it pulled away from me and I gave up the race.

"Again I was plunged in the depths of despair, or, rather, I was all nervished up at these misadventures, and somehow I seemed to be coming under a spell. Every time I saw that amused smile it threw me into a worse condition than before. I was simply being tantalized to madness. Singular, wasn't it?"

"Very."

"It was about six months after this that my friend Jimmy Dutton was married. We had been chums for years, and nothing would do but that I must be his best man. He made an engagement with me to take me to call on the young lady who was to be his bride's maid of honor. We called the evening before the wedding, but the young lady, Miss Pemberton, sent down word that she was sick in bed trying to brace herself up to be able to officiate the next day. This rendered it impossible for us to meet till just before the ceremony.

"The next day the groom, attended by his supports, I leading, marched down one aisle of the church, while the bride marched down another. When we all met at the chancel who do you suppose I met face to face as the maid of honor?

"The girl whom nobody knew!" [illegible]

CAUSES 95 P[illegible]ENT [illegible] DISEASES.

Advice Co[illegible] Stomach Troubles and [illegible] Remedy Them.

Do not [illegible]t indigestion which leads to al[illegible] of ills and complications. An [illegible]ent doctor once said that ninety-five per cent of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store.

WARS.

Wherever there is war there must be injustice on one side or on both. There have been wars which were little more than trials of strength between friendly nations and in which the injustice was not to each other, but to the God who gave them life. But in a malignant war there is injustice of ignobler kind at once to God and man which must be stemmed for both their sakes.—John Ruskin.

Looking and Seeing.

There is much in knowing how to see sights. The discreet and skillful person when confronted with a variety of attractions will carefully select those that are for him the best and then will devise means to see them with the least wear and tear. But there are excitable people who set out to see everything, [illegible] out, see only half of anything [illegible]

The "Ear of Dionysius."

A cunningly constructed prison cavern, consisting of a large chamber connected with one of smaller dimensions situated near Syracuse, Italy, has gone into legendary history with the title of the "Ear of Dionysius." The smaller chamber was unknown to the prisoners kept in this underground dungeon, and the tyrant by whose name it is known had a habit of secreting himself there to listen to the conversation of the convicts, who were mostly political offenders. An ingenious device constructed at the smaller end of the larger chamber transmitted the sounds through the partition, thus enabling the suspicious ruler to hear even the whispered conversations of his "suspects."

The River of Life.

Love is the river of life in this world. Think not that ye know it who stand at the little tinkling rill, the first small fountain. Not until you have gone through the rocky gorges and not lost the stream; not until you have gone through the meadow and the stream has widened and deepened until fleets could ride on its bosom; not until beyond the meadow you have come to the unfathomable ocean and poured your treasure into its depths; not until then can you know what love is.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Graceful Correction.

"Our literary contributor," says the editor of the Spiketown Blizzard, "is kicking because we printed it 'Throne of Candor' last week when he wrote it 'Thane of Cawdor.' If he wants to use obscure language like that he's got to write it plain enough so anybody can read the words without having to guess at them. We done the best we could with it."—Chicago Tribune.

Watched.

"No, Herbert," whispered the maid; "you mustn't put your arm around me. We are watched."

Herbert looked around the dimly lighted parlor.

"Oh, yes," he smiled; "I see there's a rubber plant at the other end of the room."

"Sh! There's another one that you don't see. Johnny's hiding there."—Chicago Tribune.

VOL. XXII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1911. NO 44

SANGERFEST SUCCESSFUL

Tnousands Attend, and Enjoy Great Musical Celebration.

The Red River Valley Scandinavian Singers' Association, which held its annual "Sangerfest" in this city last Friday, Saturday and Sunday proved a great event. A goodly quota of singers were on hand from all the large towns in and adjoining the Red River Valley. The grand chorus, when gathered on the stage, numbered over 150 voices. Seven cities were represented by Choirs: Fargo, Moorhead, Fergus Falls, Devils Lake, Grand Forks, Crookston and Thief River Falls.

After preliminary greeting Friday's program opened with a grand parade at 5 o'clock, participated in by all the choruses, soloists and band as well as by citizens in carriages and automobiles and was led by Grand Marshal Backe.

The evening's concert drew a large crowd and, assisted by the orchestra a fine program was rendered and all went home well satisfied.

Saturday forenoon was spent in giving visitors automobile tours about the city and adjoining country.

Saturday afternoon at four o'cock the annual business meeting of the association was held in the commercial Club rooms, and there the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

Pres.—Syver Serumgaard, Devils Lake, N. Dak.; V. Pres.—Dr. Kjelland, Fargo, N. D.; Sec'y.—Ole Holm, Devils Lake, N. D.; Treas.—H. P. Halvorson, Fargo, N. D.; Director-in Chief—P. A. Rudd, Fargo, N. D.; Ass't. Director—Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, T. R. Falls.

The following resolutions were adopted by the visiting guests:

An Appreciation

Before leaving your beautiful city, after having spent with you three days of unalloyed pleasure, we feel it an imperative duty to express in this formal manner a sincere and hearty "thank you."

We want to thank you Mr. Mayor for the unconditional surrender of the city into our hands. Our fondest hope will ever be that we return it even better than we found it.

We want to thank you citizens for the cordial welcome you have extended to us and the courtesy shown us while guests among you.

We want to thank you ladies for the attention given us as well as our lady friends who came to spend a holiday with us.

We want to thank you boys and girls for the civility and respect paid to every one of your visitors.

We want to thank you owners of automobiles and homes placed at our disposal and the many acts of real hospitality shown us in every conceivable way.

We want to thank the Commercial club, the Antlers club, the Auditorium Company and the Light Company for turning over to our use every thing in their possession and for looking after the smallest detail for our convenience.

And we want to thank you 'Brage' who made this meeting possible. You and your wives and daughters and sisters and cousins who have worked early and late and brought to a complete arrangement everything conceivable for our comfort, entertainment and enjoyment.

We leave you with "three cheers and a tiger" for Thief River Falls and with an earnest wish that it will some day be our fortune to in some measure reciprocate.

United Scandinavian Singers of the Red River Valley.

The concert Saturday evening was a grand affair. The attendance was good but not any better than the concert. Solos by Ralf Hammer and Mrs. G. Halvorson were exquisite renditions of classic music. Ralf Hammer as soloist together with the grand chorus supported by the orchestra reached the climax of the concert in several selections between which it would be difficult to judge as to which was the better. It is safe to say that everyone there got their money's worth, and if they failed in that it was their fault and no fault of the concert. It takes some study of music and interest in it to be able to fully appreciate it.

After the concert came the banquet at Morzark rink, where all enjoyed themselves with might and main until 3 o'clock in the morning. Judge Grindeland of Warren acted as toastmaster and witty and worthy were the responses [illegible] singing. There is nothing but praise by all in attendance.

Sunday was spent picnicing in the P. Moylan grove east of North bridge and a very fine time is reported by all. The visitors especially were greatly impressed with the munificent hospitality showed upon them by the local chorus.

Fargo gets the Grand Sangerfest of all the choirs in the American Association of which this is a part next year, and two years hence the Sangerfest of this Red River Valley Scandinavian Singers' Association will be held in Devils Lake, N. D.

Must Have Mail Boxes

Yesterday the new city mail carriers inspected their respective routes to see who had put up mail boxes. Department rulings require all to put up boxes,—business places as well as residences. The inspector will now be around in a few days, it is thought, to see how generally this has been complied with. If we are "found wanting" too much Uncle Sam may give us a dose of our own dillatory tactics. If mail boxes are found in position, service will commence at once; the boys are only waiting for their knapsacks. Let each of us do his part.

Do You Want a Parcels Post?

George Hoyt Allen of Clinton, N. Y., a manufacturer who writes piquant booklets advertising his wares, has written a pamphlet with the above title, which he sells at 1 cent apiece to those who will distribute them where they will do the most good. There isn't a word of advertising in it, but there is a lot of hard sense, vividly expressed, about the express business and the parcels post, and on the back is a form for a letter to your congressman, which it would be a good idea for every voter to write and sign and send. Here is the letter:

My Dear Congressman:

I want a parcels post. I wish you'd vote for any bill favoring it, and if there's no bill before the house to give us a parcels post, introduce one in just such a ringing speech as you gave us during the campaign that elected you to congress.

Respectively yours.

Where the stamp goes is this inscription: "Stick a 1-cent stamp here, sign your name across end, address to your congressman and mail. If his name and address have slipped your mind get them from the postmaster. HE KNOWS."

The pamphlet begins thus: "From all these years of muck-raking chase after the nigger in the woodpile; from the din of popping popguns and booming big guns; from demagogic balderdash and reverberating detonations of Websterian think-tanks we emerge, serene, colossal, grand, unique—THE ONLY CIVILIZED NATION ON EARTH WITHOUT A PARCELS POST."

Mr. Allen tells why he has written this booklet and wants to sell it for less than it cost him to print it: "I've been coughing up to the express companies from three to five times more than they are entitled to—have you? We want a parcels post. It's our right. Every time I go to New York and see jaded, crowded horses dragging U. S. mail wagons around, while the express companies' splendid automobiles go whizzing by delivering their packages, handling the profitable end of what should be parcels post business, I hang my head in shame at the spectacle."

The express companies, an offshoot of the railroad business that never should have existed because their business should have been done either by the railroads or by the postoffice, are mere disguises under which the railroad masters disguise their biggest hold-up. The chief stockholders in express companies are railroad men, and the express companies pay 40 to 55 per cent of their earnings to the railroad companies and still pile up enormous dividends on capital that is nearly all water.

Meanwhile, on 40,000 rural routes free mail wagons run daily with absurdly light loads averaging twenty pounds, when for no additional expense they might be carrying 500 pounds and making money for the government instead of losing it $30,000,000 a year. With a parcels post system they will carry full loads and make money.

Meanwhile, too, American citizens are limited to four pounds and charged 16 cents a pound by the postoffice, which will carry eleven pounds for 12 cents a pound to all quarters of the globe except in the United States; while Germany, for instance, carries up to 110 pounds for 2 cents a pound.

Do you want a parcels post? Tell your congressman about it.—Duluth Herald.

THE JUNE BRIDE NO FICTION

Ten Local Marriages to record For The Week Ending Thursday.

LARSEN—ROBINSON

L. G. Larsen, of Thief River Falls, and Miss Frances L. Robinson, of Walshville, North Dakota, were united in marriage last Wednesday morning at the home of the bride's parents'.

The happy couple reached Thief River Wednesday evening and were heartily welcomed. They left Thursday morning for a week's outing in Duluth, after which they will be at home in the Evenson flat.

The bride is one of the most estimable young women of Walshville, and has a host of friends who wish her much happiness. For several years she has been teaching at Ardock where she leaves an exceptionally good record as a teacher and ideal young woman.

The groom is well-known by young men and business men of Thief River Falls. He came here last fall and established headquarters as traveling saesman for the wholesale house of F. A. Patricks and Co., Duluth. During that time he has shown himself to be a man of irreproachable character and worthy of the utmost confidence of the firm which he represents. Here's wishing him and his charming wife a happy wedded life.

ANDERSON—LIAN

Last Saturday, the 25th of June, was eventful at the Free Lutheran parsonage, when Rev. A. L. Larson tied the knots that made four hearts beat like two. The contracting parties were Elmer Anderson and Ella Lian; Edwin Haraldson and Hannah Lian. Each couple had four witnesses respectively as follows: Ole Lian, John Baner, Gina Hestekind and Hilma Erickson; and, Tom Lian, Harold Haroldson, Sophie Urabjaa and Tillie Hestekind [illegible]

The young people who join fortunes for life are well known and highly respected people in this community, and the Press joins with their [illegible] friends in wishing them a happy, prosperous voyage over the more or less troubled matrimonial sea.

HOFF—SWANSON

Wednesday afternoon at St. Hilaire occurred a wedding of more than passing interest inasmuch as both of the contracting parties are among St. Hilaire's most popular young people and well known thruout the county.

Miss Mary Hoff and Dr. Cephas Swanson were married at he home of the bride's parents' Mr. and Mrs. E. [illegible] Hoff, Rev. Alex Sand officiating.

After a most daintly served wedding supper the bride and groom departed for a short wedding trip to various points of Southern Minnesota.

STEWART—CLARK

Mr. Mark L. Stewart and Miss Dora B. Clark were quietly married in the M. E. parsonage on Thursday, June 28th. The groom is the principal of the Middle River public school and is one of the coming men in the profession. The bride graduated from the City high school. The young couple after a wedding tour to Wisconsin will both take positions in the schools at Middle River.

BRATENG—BUGGE

On Monday evening, June 26th, Carl Brateng and Miss Petrine Mary Bugge, both of Town of Numedahl, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's uncle, Chirst Bugge, in this city. Rev. A. L. Larson of the Free Lutheran congregation here officated. The Press joins with their many friends in wishing them a life of bliss, fortune and contentment.

KNUTSON—LARSON

Mr. Soren Knutson and Miss Marie Larson were united in marriage by Rev. J. B. Smith on Thursday afternoon, June 28th. The marriage ceremony was witnessed by a few of the friends of the contracting parties, who returned to their farm home South of Viking immediately after the rites were solemnized.

WAHLBURG—GILL

Saturday afternoon, June 24th at his home Judge Bishop performed the ceremony that united for life Olaf Wahlburg and Christine Gill. They will make their home on the groom's fine farm in the town of Cloverleaf. The Press extends congratulations.

WELCH—WYNKOOP

Wednesday afternoon, June 27th Judge of Probate Wilhelm Michelet united in marriage Miss Elenor Lucile Welch and Mr. Bert Wynkoop, both of whom are Pennington county residents.

STEINER—HOFFMAN

Miss Mary Steiner and Mr. Johan Hoffman, both well known young people of Pennington county were united in the holy bonds of matrimany yesterday afternoon by Judge J. M. Bishop.

Satisfied With Minnesota

Otis Dokken and Gehard Hanson, who formerly worked in the car department of the Soo railroad in this city, got the wanderlust fever and left June 5th for a trip thru Canada. They went partly for an outing and partly to investigate the opportunities for work.

During their extensive trip some of the cities they inspected were Edmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Moose Jaw. They found plenty of chances to work in these cities, but considering the wages paid and the high cost of living they decided that they could do much better right here in Thief River Falls.

One afternoon Otis and Gerhard discovered that luxuries come high in Medicine Hat. They went into an inviting restaurant and ordered straw berries and cream. When they were presented with a bill for 70c they decided at once to start for home. The boys returned last Friday, and feel that they can stay at home for awhile and be contented.

Launch Party

Last evening a number of the city's young people enjoyed a trip up river in John Durbin's launch, the event being in honor of Miss Ione Higgins. Those present were Misses Ione Higgins, Agnes Kelly, Cora Hanson, Agnes Backe, Esther Wilson and Celina Gilbertson and Messrs. Roy Lambert, Thomas Lonson, Ralph Holt, Ed. Hanson, Syverd Nelson and Dave Gustafson.

Save The Hay

The indications are that the hay crop of Minnesota will be short this year. Clover killed out entirely in most sections of the state, and is a very thin crop in many places where it did live through the winter. Timothy, blue grass and other tame grasses were also injured by the drouth of last season, and have recovered slowly this spring. The recent rains have improved the chances somewhat, but there is not time for a full crop to develop. Even the wild meadows on the lowlands are much thinner than usual, and the only conclusion that can be drawn is that all of the hay possible must be saved if the demands for the coming year are to be met.

Special attention should be given to securing in good season any hay that may be available. It is also very important that every bit of hay be well cured, in order that its feeding value may be preserved. A small amount of good-flavored, well-seasoned hay is much more effective in securing large yields of milk, or heavy gains in flesh, than is a large amount of coarse, rough hay that is largely indigestible. Hay cut soon after coming into blossom, cured largely in the cock—thus saving all of the leaves and flavor-giving elements,—and stored in well-protected stacks or in barns will have at least one third greater feeding value than hay over-ripened and poorly cured.

In securing the hay crop more attention than usual should be paid to climatic conditions, securing favorable days for the operation if possible. Clean cutting and raking, picking up of the windrows and cocks in the field, and clean stacking, are all factors in securing the largest amount of hay. While many substitutes for hay can be offered, and some of them are quite acceptable, it is more than likely that a strong market will be found for good hay, and that any surplus can be sold at a profitable price if not needed for feed.

Mrs. S. Waller and small son of Wauban visited with former friends in the city Friday.

WASHINGTON, D. C. LETTER

Wool Revision Bill Passed House Bitter Opposition In Senate to Reciprocity.

Washington, D. C., June 26, 1911.—The Democratic wool revision bill passed the House by a vote 221 to 100, and a motion to recommit made by the Republicans was defeated. On the day that the bill was passed President Taft sent a message to the house saying that it was impossible to transmit certain information regarding the wool schedule because the Tariff Board had not completed its labors. He complimented the work of the Tariff Board. The bill as passed reduces the duties on raw wool to twenty per cent from a present rate of forty-four per cent. Reductions in the manufactures of wool are reduced from an average of about ninety per cent to an average of about forty-two per cent ad valorem. In the final vote the Democratic Members held their forces with the exception of Representative Francis of Ohio, who deserted his party. Berger the Milwaukee socialist, voted for the bill as did Representative Aiken of New York. A large number of progressive Republicans voted for the measure and there were three or four who have heretofore been classed as Regulars who joined the Democrats in the passage of this bill. The Republican Members voting with the Democrats were Representatives Anthony and Campbell of Kansas; Anderson, Lindbergh, Steenerson, Volstad, Davis and Miller, of Minnesota; French, of Idaho; Hougen and Woods of Iowa; Jackson, Madison, Rees, Murdock, and Young of Kansas; Helgeson, of North Dakota; Kent and Stephens, of California; La Follette and Warburton, of Washington; Lenroot, Nelson, and Morse of Wisconsin; Morris and Sloan, of Nebraska; and Wedemeyer of Michigan.

The opposition to Canadian reciprocity in the Senate has brought out bitter denunciation on the part of William Alden Smith of Michigan, and attacks have also been made upon the measure by Senators Crawford, of South Dakota, and Dixon of Montana. The speech of Senator Nelson in which he assailed the policy of the Taft Administration in reference to the Canadian pact, was one of the most forcible arguments against reciprocity that has been heard in the debate. Senator Dixon characterized the measure as one that would pull the "corner stone out from under a system of protective tariff." Mr. Crawford indicated that the New England and eastern states including Pennsylvania, had "joined hands with Mississippi in a new political propoganda." During the discussion, Senators Lodge of Massachusetts, and Brown of Nebraska became involved in a controversy, and the Nebraska Senator stated that he would vote for a reduction on wool and a substantial reduction on duty on woolen goods. Mr Root made a brief explanation of the reason for offering his amendment, which requires Canadian provinces to remove export restrictions before pulp wood and paper are admitted free. He said this was the basis of the original agreement between the two countries, but the provision has been dropped out in the House.

The Democratic wool bill which pass ed the House has furnished the long desired opportunity for effecting an alliance between the Democrats and the progressive Republicans in the Senate. Washington has been thoroughly startled by the new turn in affairs, and it is being predicted that the present session of Congress will dip deeply into the tariff, and general revision is not among the unexpected things. The opponents of the Canadian reciprocity measure have seized upon the wool bill as a means of amending reciprocity in such a way as to defeat the entire Administration program, and thereby invite a veto to the Canadian agreement from President Taft.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections has reported one of the most drastic bills covering the subject of campaign publicity, that has ever appeared in Congress. The Senate bill differs from that of the House, inasmuch as it includes full publicity for all expenses in the primaries as well as in elections.

FIRE LOSSES IN COURT

Attorney Albert Chilgren of Williams passed thru the city Monday on his way to Crookston where he was attorney in some more damage suits against the Canadian Northern R. R. Co., for losses sustained in the forest fires of last summer and fall. Mr. Chilgren has already handled six similar cases and received a favorable decision.

Grand Theatre Opened

Mr. C. W. McQuery, the new owner of the Grand Theatre, opened his theatre with a matinee last Saturday afternoon. The attendance at all the shows has been uniformly good, and the people are now aware of the fact that we have another high class play-house in town.

Mr. McQuery has had considerable experience in the moving picture vaudeville business, and assures us that he will give the public the benefit of the best pictures and highgrade vaudeville. During the summer he will have vaudeville at irregular intervals, but for after September first he has booked regular attractions. Occassionally there will be special picture attractions.

For awhile there will be matinees on Wednesday and Friday afternoons with an admission fee of 5c for children. There will be good music and singing at all times, and an entire change of program every Sunday, Tuesday and Friday.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

The following returns of the High School Board examinations have been received:

Examination held March 20th and 21st.

Dist. No. 37—Mildred Hooper, teacher, Highlanding—Herbert W. Cousin, age 17 years, 3 certificates, Arithmetic, Geography and American History.

Dist. No. 25—Katie B. Dahl, teacher, T. R. Falls—Harris A. Smith age 17, Geography; Ruth J. Christensen, age 16, Geography; Thea Erickson, age 15, Geography.

Dist. No. 165—Miss Emma Jonas, T. R. Falls—Inga E. Becken, Geography.

Second Examination held May 26 to June 1st.

Netteland, age 12, Arithmetic; Anna O. Moe, age 14 Arithmetic; Carl E. Finstad, age 12, Arithmetic.

The work done and results achieved by these scholars should be an encouragment to the pupils of our schools to look ahead and to attain the goal, namely the graduation from the common school at the least waste of time and energy.

Fraternally,
E. A. MOSTUE.

Additional to rural school notes.

The Teacher's Training school opened Monday, last by a goodly number of teachers. Evidently the school is to set a high record mark this year. The teachers have certainly the very best of instructors and facilities conducive of a successful study in those subjects mast essential for the coming coming term in our county. The state is placing before the student teacher the best of instructors and Red Lake Falls, the best of accomodations in every line Let those of our teachers who have not yet enrolled, those that have not taught or have conditionals to make up especially enroll at once and get the full advantage of the school.

Sixteen teachers form Pennington county, a goodly number indeed, enrolled the first day and will be entitled to five weeks. They are:

Peter L. Berken, Germantown.
Harold H. Holms, St. Hilaire
Myles Jackson, St. Hilaire
Myrtle Ruth Blaine, St. Hilaire
Selmer Benson, St. Hilaire
Ida P. Kalland, St. Hilaire
Elisa Hendrickson, St. Hilaire
Emma T. Satre, St. Hilarie
Eric E. Anderson, St. Hilaire
Louise Netteland, St. Hilaire
Minnie Linstad, T. R. Falls
Clara Bakken, T. R. Falls
Lena Lonson, T. R. Falls
Olga Bjorge, T. R. Falls
Martha C. Tanem, T. R. Falls
Ida Ove, T. R. Falls.

Beginning July 10th M. O. Olson will give such instruction in Agriculture and beginning July 17th, Miss Marie Winnegren will give such instruction in house economy as is outlined in the training school bulletin. Both came from the University Farm, St. Anthony Park.

Mr. L. D. Harvey, of the Stout Institute, Menomenie, Mo., will visit the school July 8th.

Sometime during the session of the school Mr. Dinfield of Duluth and E. G. Quigley of College of Education of the University of Minnesota will visit the school.

Respectfully,
E. A. MOSTUE.

CROOKSTON GETS COLD FEET

Sends Bunch of "Innocents" To Be Scalped By Local "Indians"

The Crookston baseball manager evidently has the greatest respect and kindest feeling towards the Thief River baseball team. He was so kind and condescending as to arrange a game with manager Peterson, to be played on the local grounds last Sunday. Crookston was to come by special train with a band of enthusiastic rooters. That was a fine arrangement, and certainly representative of the modern way of doing things among civilized people.

Now what Crookston really did do has suggested to some able minded men that, either there are no baseball enthusiasts in Crookston, or that the manager thinks his team would be slaughtered if they came to Thief River. Such, of course, is not the case. He ought to know that, after the square deal received at Crookston, the local management would be very kindly disposed towards Crookston.

Instead of the first team coming to Thief River, as had been arranged, a bunch of innocent boys was sent to be scalped by the local "Indians." We don't blame the boys, but whoever sent them is certainly on the verge of weak mindedness.

The Slaughter—20 to 5.

At 7 o'clock Sunday evening the slaughter began. The "Innocents" went to bat first and failed to score. They failed to score every other inning, too, except the 4th and 5th, when they ran the bases at will and scored five runs while the locals were resting up from the strenuous exertion of circling the diamond fifteen times. After that there was nothing doing for the "Innocents." The "Indians" recovered their wind in time to get five runs in the sixth, after which the game was called.

Larvier pitched good ball as is shown by the fact that he allowed only sixteen hits. He seemed to be able to hit the bat nearly every time.

Lambert was especially pleased with the offerings, he leading in the hitting with four safe ones. Nason scored five runs in five times at bat. Flynn broke his former record by getting two hits, and Fossum came out of the brush with three hits. Hess got rather dizzy from watching the men run 'round the bases, but he allowed only two hits.

Guarding the Bank of England.

The Bank of England's nightly guard is drawn from the guards stationed in the Tower of London. The custom of providing a little garrison of guards for the Bank of England every night dates back to 1780, the time of the Gordon riots. The troops are made very comfortable in the bank, and the officer in command is provided with a dinner for himself and two friends. Of course an allowance of wine, satisfactory from both points of view, is made. The vaults of the Bank of England would make fine robbing. They frequently contain fifty millions sterling. Several keys are necessary to open the lock to the whitewashed vaults, and each key is in the possession of a different person. The gold lies piled on trucks to facilitate removal or is heaped against the walls in sacks.

Legs That Hear.

One of the strangest and most unexpected of the uses to which we could imagine a leg as being put is that of an organ of hearing. Yet such seems to be one at least of the functions of the fore legs in the cricket. On the outer side of the tibia a small oval space may be seen, in which the strong armature which covers the rest of the body is reduced to a thin and membranous condition, making thus a sort of window or drumhead. Communicating with this, inside the leg, are the ends of a nerve, and it can hardly be doubted, therefore, that he whole apparatus constitutes an auditory organ.

A Curious Boat.

According to a Chinese legend, there lived in Canton 200 years before Christ an artist named Lim Kao Poung, who won an immortal reputation owing to the fact that he was able to fashion out of a bean pod a boat, complete with rudder, sails, mast and all other necessary appurtenances. Moreover, on the exterior of the boat were engraved various maxims by Confucius. For this masterpiece, it is said, the Emperor Tsi Fou paid him 1,000 taels.

A Manager.

"And what right have you to call yourself a manager?" asked the eminent and irate actress after a stormy rehearsal.

"I suppose," was the deferential reply, "it is because I have managed so long to escape with my life."—Washington Star.

What Nothing Is.

If any man thinks that he can conceive well enough how there should be nothing I will engage that what he means by nothing is as much something as anything that he ever thought of in his life, and I believe that if he knew what nothing was it would be intuitively evident to him that it could not be. Absolute nothing is the aggregate of all the contradictions in the world.—Jonathan Edwards.

A Partial Alibi.

"She claims she has a perfect alibi."

"What is her alibi?"

"She says she can prove that at the very time the crime was committed her own little girl was brushing her hair."

"That proves an alibi for her hair, but how about herself?"—Houston Post.

The Weather.

Sunshine is delicious, rain is refreshing, wind braces up, snow is exhilarating; there is really no such thing as bad weather only different kinds of good weather.—John Ruskin.

His Lesson.

"But, you silly boy, if I married you with your means you couldn't even dress me."

"Perhaps with a few lessons I could learn."—Exchange.

A Straightforward Answer.

J. B. Lippincott once ventured to ask Ouida, the novelist, how she came to know so much about clubs, camp life, barracks, gambling houses and other places which are only visited by men. She placed her hands upon her knees and, looking straight at her questioner, said, "It is none of your business."

VERIFY IT

The Proof Is In Thief River Falls Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Thief River Falls citizen is in itself strong proof for Thief River Falls people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Thief River Falls citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. James Rogers, 522 N. Main St, Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case in 1907 has been permanent. It is a pleasure for me to again recommend this remedy. I suffered intensely from backache and there was much pain and soreness through my loins. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I felt languid and devoid of strength. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Curtis' Drug Store, proved their merit by disposing of these troubles in a short time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WORK WILL SOON START

after you take Dr. King's New Life and you'll quickly enjoy their fine results. Constipation and indigestion vanish and fine appetite returns. They regulate stomach, liver and bowels and impart new strength and energy to the whole system. Try them. Only 25c at all druggists.

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by all druggists.

WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE

It was a long and bloody battle for life that waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and run-down. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began, three weeks ago, to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim". For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, la grippe, asthma, hay fever or throat or lung trouble it's supreme. 50c & 1.00. Trail bottle free. Guaranteed by alll Druggists.

Feeding the Brutes.

It costs nearly £5,000 a year to feed the animals at the London zoo.

And how varied is the menu is seen when it is stated that it includes such trifles as horses, goats, bananas, grapes, oranges, apples, turnips, potatoes, bread, fowls' heads, sugar, mice and sparrows. In addition the denizens of the zoo get through in a year 161 loads of hay, 208 loads of straw, 15,000 bundles of tares, 360 bushels of maize, over a ton of rice, 150 bushels of canary seed, nearly 2,000 pints of shrimps and about thirty tons of fish. The zoo is one of London's most favored institutions. Nearly 900,000 people visited it last year.—London Graphic.

Parsley's Peculiar Power.

Dishes containing cold joints are usually decorated with parsley. Is there any particular reason why parsley should be the special herb used for this purpose? Most people would probably say that it was the peculiar beauty of the leaf which gave parsley its claim. No doubt this is the reason why we retain parsley for decorative purposes, but it is believed that the reason of its original adoption is a very different one. Parsley was at one time supposed to be an antidote to poison. This belief is not altogether without foundation, for parsley is even now said to be an excellent remedy for overindulgence in spirituous liquors.—London Answers.

A MODEST MAID

By D. W. SPRINGER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

My friend Mrs. Southwick wrote me to come down to her country place. She said she had an especial reason for asking me, but didn't tell me what it was. So one midsummer morning I took a train to make the visit. On reaching the station—I was not expected till an hour later—not finding a conveyance to meet me, I concluded to leave my baggage at the station and walk. Never having been to Mrs. Southwick's place before, I was obliged to inquire the way and was put on to a short route, at the end of which I could enter the grounds at the rear. On arrival I climbed a fence and walked some three or four hundred yards to a clump of trees, which was so inviting that I concluded to penetrate it.

Right in the middle there was swung a hammock, and in the hammock lay a young girl asleep.

Now, a young girl asleep in a hammock is a pretty sight at any time, but if pretty and in a shaded nook she is tempting. This one was very pretty. There was about her that relaxation artists love to get in their pictures and statuary. There was a slow heaving of her breast. Her mouth was partly open, showing a narrow line of ivory between a pair of pink coral lips.

Well, though the natural consequence of a young man seeing a girl thus defenseless before him is that he cannot resist the temptation to kiss her and get his ears boxed—not for his pains, but his pleasure—I will endeavor to describe what happened. I advanced a step at a time, and with every step forward I took ten backward in my resolution not to dishonestly steal what did not belong to me I reached a point but a yard from the sleeper without waking her. She was slumbering so calmly that for some time I dared not proceed farther for fear of awakening her. Had she slept more soundly I might have been bolder. But while halting I was gradually filling with bravery—or recklessness. As soon as I had gathered enough courage for the purpose I advanced another step or two, halted, then bent down to see how near I could bring my face to hers without wakening her, then touched my lips lightly to hers.

Beyond a slight spasmodic movement she remained the same. Within a single moment I experienced dread and reassurance. The girl slept on, and I, having achieved my purpose, became suddenly conscious of the frightful risk I had run and was seized with a desire to escape the consequences of my offense. I withdrew as stealthily as possible and proceeded to the house.

I was received by Mrs. Southwick with a hearty welcome, and we sat down together on wicker chairs on the piazza. "And now that you are here," she said, "and while we are alone I will give you my reason for inviting you down. I have a wife picked out for you."

"A wife!"

"Yes, a very lovely girl, modest, unassuming, pretty—indeed, everything that is maidenly."

"And all this is for me?"

"Yes, but you must proceed with her very slowly. She is sensitive, pure The least advance before an offer of marriage would undeniably shock her."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed inwardly. "Suppose she should be the girl asleep in the hammock."

"It is this maidenly modesty," continued the go-between, "that is Edith's chief charm. I am sure that alone is enough to make you love her."

"I dare say," I replied, with proper politeness.

When I was presented to Miss Edith Greer I felt the guilt of Judas Iscariot welling up in me. I grew red and pale by turns. I stammered out a few words that didn't mean anything. I sat down before she or Mrs. Southwick had seated herself and jumped up as if I had encountered a tack on the cushion. Meanwhile Miss Greer stood with her eyes bent on the floor as if I were the first young man she had ever met. Mrs. Southwick came to the rescue by inviting us into the dining room for luncheon.

The fact that the young lady displayed no such embarrassment as she might have done had she been sensible of the kiss I had stolen, that she neither appeared shocked nor indignant, brought a return of confidence. I found her rather too unsophisticated; but, as Mrs. Southwick had said, her modesty was her chief charm. As I noticed this I shuddered at the enormity of my offense in pressing those pure lips with mine and gave frequent thanks that the piracy had not been detected.

Mrs. Southwick made the match she intended. The only difficulty in the way was that the young lady was so sweetly innocent that it seemed a sacrilege to me to propose to her. I finally got out a proposition, and, though at first she said she was too young and too inexperienced to trust herself to any man, since she regarded me the soul of honor she would commit herself to my keeping.

The denouement of a love story usually comes with a wedding. In this case it comes at a tin wedding.

"What a modest little thing you were, my dear," I said, "when we were married this day ten years ago!"

"Rats!" she exclaimed. "I was laying in wait for you in that hammock and was wide awake when you kissed me."

Art and Reality.

"I never yet saw a man who talked like the hero of a story," said Mrs. Growcher.

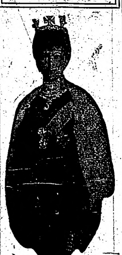
QUEEN MARY.



Wife of George V. in Coronation Robes.

OLYMPIC REACHES NEW YORK

Greatest of Ocean Liners Given Enthusiastic Welcome.

New York, June 22.—Every whistle cord in New York harbor and in the factories and tall buildings along the shores of North river was tied down for several minutes while the Olympic, greatest of all the mammoth transatlantic ferryboats, moved up the bay and into her slip at the White Star docks.

Her passengers crowded her sides and waved their handkerchiefs, while on the bridge stood the proudest man in the world today, her commander, Captain Smith, commodore of the White Star fleet.

RECIPROCITY BILL THROUGH ORDEAL

Root Amendment to Canadian Measure Fails.

Washington, June 27.—The Canadian reciprocity bill emerged from its first ordeal in the senate unscathed. The Root amendment, proposing a modification of the wood pulp and print paper section of the agreement, was defeated after seven hours of debate by an overwhelming vote. The friends of the amendment were so satisfied of its defeat that a roll call on the vote was not demanded.

This leaves the reciprocity measure open to the general fight that is to follow for amendment of important provisions of the Payne tariff law. Senator La Follette announced in a speech opposing the Root amendment that he would give to the senate a chance to pass on general tariff amendments for free paper, free lumber and lumber products and for reductions in many other schedules.

Senator Clapp also announced his intention of offering a free paper amendment later and other senators gave evidence of their purpose to force, from now on, consideration of tariff revision on the widest plane.

ELECTION BILL REJECTED

Amendment to Measure Turned Down by the House.

Washington, June 22.—The house of representatives by a vote of 172 to 112, practically a strict party vote, refused to concur in the Bristow amendment adopted by the senate to the house resolution providing for the direct election of senators.

The Bristow amendment leaves with congress the power to regulate the time and manner of holding these elections, while the resolution passed by the house in the early days of the present session would change the Constitution so that "the times, places and manner of holding elections for senators shall be as prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof."

TWO HUNDRED ARE DEAD

Great Loss of Life as Result of Chilean Cyclone.

Valparaiso, June 27.—The great cyclone which devastated the coast of Chile a few days ago extended from Pisagua on the north to Antofagasta on the south. Torrential rains have followed the hurricane, almost completing the disaster. It is estimated more than 200 persons were killed or injured and immense damage has been done to property of all kinds.

Two Thousand Dock Hands Out.

Amsterdam, Netherlands, June 27.—Two thousand dock hands struck here in sympathy with the striking seamen. Work ceased at all of the ships of the eight largest firms.

CORONATION OF BRITISH RULERS

Pomp and Pageant Mark Ceremony at London.

POPULACE ONLY LUKEWARM

Lack of Genuine Enthusiasm Among the Middle Classes the Subject of General Comment.

London, June 23.—With pomp and pageantry putting to shame the historic splendor of the middle ages, democratic Britain gratified her inborn love of formal show when, amidst the most dazzling scenes recorded in history, she crowned George V. and his wife Mary "king and queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas."

The crown was placed upon George's head at 12:37 p. m. and just fifteen minutes later the crowning of the queen, a much shorter ceremony, had been concluded.

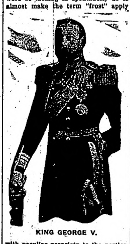
The venerable archbishop of Canterbury, summoning his rapidly waning strength for the climax of the spectacular ceremonial, his hands trembling with emotion, placed the crowns upon the heads of the new rulers, at which the vast audience broke its restraint with a cheer that, waking the echoes amid the time-dimmed rafters of the ancient abbey, was taken up by the throngs without and carried to the ends of the British empire.

Despite the tremendous outpouring of the people, the magnificence of the coronation scene itself and the general excitement, nothing could have been more apparent than that the demonstration, from a popular standpoint, was far short of expectations.

Genuine Enthusiasm Lacking.

The crowds were enormous, but so far short of what the police and soldiers were prepared to handle that the extensive preliminary work appeared actually ridiculous.

Notwithstanding that there were paid cheer leaders along the line of the procession the vocal outbursts were so lacking in spontaneity as to almost make the term "frost" apply with peculiar propriety to the portion of the event in which the middle classes figured.



KING GEORGE V.

The lack of genuine enthusiasm was generally commented upon by loyal Britishers as well as cynical foreigners. Inside the abbey, naturally, where the royalists were gathered, there was enthusiasm enough to suit the most exacting. But wherever the pulse of the common people could be felt it was found to beat feebly.

The stage management was perfect. From first to last there were few hitches and these of the slightest consequence.

FOURTEEN MEN ARE INDICTED

Outcome of Grand Jury Probe of Alleged Lumber Trust.

Chicago, June 24.—Fourteen secretaries of as many retail lumber dealers' association, indicted by a special federal grand jury here for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, constituted a new kind of "trust," according to the United States attorneys who conducted the investigation.

The retail lumber dealers, it was admitted at the close of the investigation, had no incorporation, no capital stock and did not try to control prices and prevent competition among themselves. Instead they had what the attorneys say was a "trust of power" and sought to provide that all lumber should be sold to consumers only through retail dealers and not by wholesalers or manufacturers.

The men, as secretaries of the retail associations, constitute the Lumber Secretaries' Bureau of Information, incorporated in Illinois in 1905 and represent thousands of retailer

HARRIMAN DEAL IS HELD LEGAL

Merger of Pacific Roads Upheld by Court

ARE NOT COMPETING LINES

Court of Appeals Declares Government Failed to Substantiate Charges Made in Complaint.

St. Louis, June 25.—The United States circuit court of the Eighth district filed an opinion that the purchase of the Southern Pacific "did not amount to a direct and substantial restraint of either interstate or international commerce."

The recent decision of the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil case was cited among others by Judge Elmer B. Adams, who wrote the majority opinion. Supreme Court Justice Willis Van Devanter, while a circuit judge of the Eighth district, participated in the hearing, deliberation and conclusion in the case and concurred in the opinion.

Judge William C. Hook filed a dissenting opinion.

"The only question," reads the majority opinion, "was whether the Union Pacific company, extending only from Omaha and Kansas City on the east to Ogden on the west, was a competing line prior to 1901 for transcontinental business with the Southern Pacific company, whose line extended from New York on the east over the sea to New Orleans and thence by rail to San Francisco and Portland on the west.

Conclusions of the Court.

"While the Union Pacific was entirely dependent upon the Southern Pacific for its connection westward, the Southern Pacific was not at all dependent upon the Union Pacific for its connection eastward," read the majority opinion.

"Our conclusion," continued the opinion, "is that all the facts of this case considered in their natural, reasonable and practical aspect and given their appropriate relative significance, do not make the Union Pacific a substantial competitor for transcontinental business with the Southern Pacific in or prior to the year 1901.

"We therefore pass to a consideration of some less important matters relied upon by the government to establish destruction of competition between those companies.

"Certainly the desire to appropriate the trifling business done by the Southern Pacific on the minor lines, or to suppress a competition in traffic which was the aggregate of such small proportions, could not have been the inspiration of the vast outlay involved in the purchase of the Huntington stock. It did not amount to a direct and substantial restraint of either interstate or international commerce."

SLEUTHS TRAIL STAR WITNESS

Sensational Story Told Lorimer Probe Committee.

Washington, June 27.—Shadowed for weeks by detectives instructed to get anything possible against him was the alleged experience of which Clarence S. Funk of Chicago, star witness in the present Lorimer investigation, complained to the senate committee inquiring into the Lorimer election.

The statement produced a sensation, because the name of Edward Hines, who, Funk had testified, had asked him to contribute $10,000 toward $100,000 used to "put Lorimer over at Springfield," was mentioned in connection with the services of the detectives.

Funk declared that four detectives had followed him to Washington and two had watched him during luncheon. One of them, he said, had been compelled to give his name and that of his employer when caught in a tight place. Funk declined to break his word to the detective and reveal his name. He said the employer was not Senator Lorimer.

DEAD NUMBER SEVENTEEN

Fearful Loss of Life Due to Explosion of Boiler.

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—The death list resulting from the explosion of the river packet City of St. Joseph six miles below here has been swelled to seventeen. Two more will die.

In accounting for the crew it was found that eight instead of six negroes lost their lives almost instantly, five being drowned and three scalded to death. Nine more died of their injuries.

Five Thousand Head of Cattle Perish in Flood.

Grand Junction, Colo., June 27.—A reservoir containing 5,000 acres of water burst, causing a property damage of about $100,000. Five thousand cattle were drowned and several bridges were swept away. No lives were lost. Thomas Dwyer saw the break and telephoned warnings to ranchers below. Along the path of the flood for fifteen miles crops were washed out

PINCHOT IN A HAPPY MOOD

Cancellation of Cunningham Claims Shows Fight Was Right.

New York, June 27.—Perhaps nobody in the country was better pleased with the final disposition of the Cunningham claims than Gifford Pinchot, whose own fortunes had pivoted upon them so critically.

"The cancellation of the claims," he said here, "is proof by the administration itself that the fight made against it to prevent coal monopoly in Alaska was necessary and right. This victory insures the cancellation of multitudes of other fraudulent claims in Alaska."

DECIDES ALASKAN COAL LAND CLAIMS

Secretary Fisher Rules Against Cunningham Interests.

Washington, June 27.—The famous Cunningham Alaskan coal land claims, through which it has been alleged that the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate had planned to extend their vast interests in Alaska and to control one of the most valuable coal fields in the world, were finally disallowed by the department of the interior.

Secretary of Interior Walter Fisher, having approved the department's decision, as handed down by Fred Dennett, commissioner of the land office, the last door is believed to have been closed to the Cunningham claimants. The attorneys have threatened an appeal to the United States supreme court, but such appeal can be based only on some point of law involved and not on the findings of fact as announced by the department.

The Cunningham claims have been in the public eye constantly for more than two years past. They brought about the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation by congress and the dismissal from the public service of Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, Louis R. Glavis, a chief of field division in the land office, and several minor officials. Both Pinchot and Glavis were dismissed for insubordination incident to their attacks on former Secretary Ballinger, whom they alleged was favorably disposed toward the claims.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS

By Ruby Kirk McLean

Is the prohibitory law in Kansas a success, that is to say, has the attempt of this progressive state to solve one of the greatest social and governmental problems of to-day terminated favorably? The inhabitants of Kansas are plain, practical, patriotic, very positive, and progressive people. If the enforcement of this law had not contributed toward a higher and better civilization, had not proved a doctrine of self-defense, and a sound economic and business proposition, they would have been prompt to repudiate its deteriorating influence. Prohibition must be judged by results. Does it benefit the state and the individual? In this article I shall confine myself to facts and figures relative to the operation of the prohibitory law in the state of Kansas.

Crime has decreased to a minimum unprecedented in criminal statistics. Since the incipiency of prohibition the population has increased nearly one hundred per cent, while the nummer of convicts has increased only seventeen per cent. Half of our country jails are without a prisoner under conviction. Only seventeen per cent of our prisoners are natives, while reports from the wardens of Joliet and Chester, Ill., show that forty per cent of their convicts are natives of Illinois.

Authenticated, scientific facts prove that our temperance policy for thirty years has resulted in a singular freedom from mental and nervous diseases, and in a lower death rate than any other state or nation on earth. Kansas has fifty-four counties without an idiot, and eighty-seven counties without an insane inmate. With twenty per cent of the population of New York, it has less than ten per cent of its insanity. Fifty-seven of the 105 counties of Kansas have no inmates at their poor farms. Cook County alone has over five times as many paupers as this entire state. The annual death rate in the Sunflower is only seven and one half per cent to every one thousand inhabitants. Reports from the board of health show that with the advance in temperance, original cases of tuberculosis have materially decreased.

Prohibition develops and facilitates educational progress. During the first twenty years of its regime illiteracy was reduced forty-nine per cent. Normal courses have been established in one hundred of the 105 counties. In Kansas City, Kan., the assets of the Board of Education have increased from a valuation of $106,000 to more than one and one fourth million dollars.

A striking instance of the improvement in the private credit of the state is the experience of Kansas City, Kan where, previous to the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law, a garnishment court was in constant operation, levying upon the wages of the laboring man. Within three months after the dispossession of the saloon, the court was abolished and its reestablishment has since been unnecessary.

In regard to public expenses, it may be stated that the general and special service expenses in Wichita are $8.21 per capita; in Springfield, $11.88; and at Chicago, $51.66. Illinois, with only four times the population of Kansas, spends twelve times as much money for the maintenance of police and militia.

During the last ten years, the taxable property of the state has increased $1,200,000,000. Kansas to-day stands second among the states of the Union in property per capita. The census will show that it stands first in home-owning citizens.

Records of the state bank commissioner and the comptroller of the federal treasury show that since complete prohibition became effective in May, 1909, bank deposits have increased $11,000,000. More than $1,000,000 is being spent in one block in Topeka at the present time. Eighteen hundred new houses constructed, $5,000,000 expended in public improvements in one year, an increase in population from 31,000 to 62,000 in three years is the story of the growth and prosperity of Wichita, a typical illustration of the general business conditions of Kansas.

THE GUILTY CORPORATION

The sugar trust, which is now on the carpet before a congressional investigating committee, is one of the blackest and most guilt-stained of corporations. Not content with enormous protection through the tariff, by which it was enabled to levy a prodigious tribute upon the American people, it secretly contrived to steal from the government millions of dollars in duties. Caught, it was forced to disgorge a small part of its stealings. Why it was not forced to disgorge them all and heavy fines boot has not yet been explained.

Naturally, there is much feeling against this guilty corporation which has lied, robbed, bludegeoned competitors and corrupted the processes of government.

Punishment is due somewhere for its misdeeds. Where should that punishment be bestowed?

The corporation can't be sent to jail like any other robber. That is out of the question. Some of its minor employes who acted under directions from "higher up" were sent to jail, but that dosen't satisfy; it seems too much like rank injustice.

The corporation can be fined. That's easy enough; but does it meet the demands of exact justice?

What is the corporation? It is a stock company, whose stock is widely held. Among the stockholders are the usual number of "widows and orphans," in whose behalf pathetic pleas have been made, and the usual number of fat-chopped, pursey magnates.

The acting president of the American Sugar Refining company—which is the sugar trust—told the congressional committee that his company's stock is owned by 19,359 people, of whom 18,000 own 63 per cent of the stock. Ten thousand of these stockholders are women. Most of them have only a few shares—9,500 persons have ten shares or less, and the average holding is less than fifty shares. Among the investors have been "guardians of children, churches, orphan-asylums, hospitals and other philanthropic institutions.

This is the corporation. These are its owners. These are the ones who are punished when the corporation itself is brought to bar for its misdeeds. And the case is typical. All large corporations have similarly scattered ownership, though perhaps the sugar trust stock is more minutely divided than most.

The 19,359 stockholders in the sugar trust are, in fact, the sugar trust. They have shared in the prfits of its brigandry; they have elected the directors who control its policy.

But they can't be sent to jail, nor should they be. Now should they be punished in any other way, by fine [illegible].

These 19,359 stockholders, except a very few, probably had little or nothing to say about the policy of the corporation. They owned stock and they spent the dividends, but they left the management of the corporation to the directors and officers.

And there lies the real guilt, and the real place to impose punishment. You can't send a corporation to jail, and there is no jail big enough to hold its stockholders if they deserved jailing. But you can send the officers of that corporation to jail, and since the guilt is theirs, they are the ones that should go.

"Guilt is personal." The managers of a guilty corporation are the anthors of its guilt, and the punishment should be theirs. A few trust directors put in prison would work wonders in correcting the habits of the great corporations.—Duluth Herald.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MINNESOTA?

Though a majority of the newspapers of the state have fallen in line with enthusiastic aggressiveness in the demand for an extra session to save $2,000,000 to the state by increasing the railroad gross earnings tax immediately, there is an ominous note in some of the responses to the suggestion that is both puzzling and depressing.

A considerable proportion of the newspapers, while approving the increase and admitting the benefit and urgent need of making it as soon as possible, betray the utmost skepticism both as to the governor and the legislature; and if they half right in their very serious imputations, it is high time the electorate of this state did a little earnest communing with itself to find out what the trouble is. For if there is anything wrong with the quality of the material Minnesota has in the governorship and the legislature, the fault lies with the voters and nowhere else.

To the suggestion that Governor Eberhart should call an extra session this winter to enact a law increasing the gross earning tax, many newspapers respond, with a sardonic chuckle: "Eberhart call an extra session to raise railroad taxes? It is to laugh!" So humorously does the idea strike them that we picture them with their tongues in their cheeks, rocking with merriment. But it is no joke, dear contemporaries, if the fact is that Minnesota has a governor who cannot be depended upon when there is an issue between the people and a great special interest.

It is even worse as to the legislature. The aspersions cast upon that body are positively ribald. We hope that nobody outside the state has noticed them. "What, get that bunch together again? Not on your life!" "What can you expect of such a bunch of lobsters as that which disgraced the state last winter?" "That crowd do anything for the people and against a powerful special interest? It's too much to hope for." And so forth.

Tut! Tut! This is no way to be talking about our governor and our legislature! Whatever they are, they are ours. We made them by our votes. If they are good, the credit is ours. If they are bad and unworthy, the fault is ours. If not the best we could do, they are the best we have done, and they are all we have to work with at present.

We must confess that we find this atmosphere of skepticism and derision profoundly depressing. It is true that it isn't so very widespread. Others who seem to feel about the same way regarding the governor and the legislature take a slightly different view of it: "Of course the governor won't want to call a special session, but we'll make him. Of course the legislature will not like to pass a bill making the railroads pay as much taxes as we do, but if it refuses we shall make it so hot for its members that they won't dare come home again."

That's more like it.

But if those are right who express a certainty that there is no hope in the governor or the legislature and let it go at that, do you realize what it means? It means that Minnesota is handicapped by a governor and a legislature that will not do the people's bidding when it touches the affairs of rich and powerful special interests.

If that is the situation in Minnesota it is a thing that every voter should give his earnest thought to.—Duluth Herald.

STUDY THE INSECTS

The appearance of the Thirteenth Report of the State Entomologist of Minnesota—the seventh made by the present occupants of the office. Prof. F. L. Washburn—again suggests, not only the vast importance of the work being done for the State by the Entomologist, but the extreme desirability of more attention, by the farmers, to the study of insect pests. For lack of such study, and for lack of more intelligent obedience to the warnings and suggestions of the Entomologist, the annual loss by these pests has been unquestionably larger by millions than it would have been had his admonitions been generally heeded.

These annual reports present in a readable form, available to any intelligent farmer, the result of a great deal of minute, painstaking scientific investigation. So far from being "dry and unattractive," they take on the quality of fascination to one who ponders long enough the marvels of the world to which they introduce him—a world peopled with creatures so small that many of them are invisible to the naked eye, but collectively holding a power which, but for the balancing endeavors of Nature and Science, would easily make them arbiters of the destiny of nations.

Many a farmer and farming community will find that, through a study of the Report now before us—which can be had on application to Professor Washburn at University Farm—they have in their own hands the determination of the question whether the share of their revenues, yielded up this year to predatory insects, shall be large or small.—C. R. B.

ENSILAGE COMPARED WITH HAY

While it is true that it requires 3 pounds of ensilage to equal 1 pound of hay in feeding value, because of the large amount of moisture contained in the ensilage, it has been shown that from an equal quantity of dry matter more milk was obtained from the ensilage than from corn fodder, corn stover or hay. At the Massachusetts Station it was shown that whenever ensilage replaced a part of the hay ration, there was a reduction in the cost of production. It is fed with good results in both winter and summer.

SAVE THE BIRDS

Almost without exception the birds seen in the garden are, in the long run, very useful in eating injurious insects. The Robin is omnivorous, the Cuckoo eats hairy caterpillars, the Meadow Lark consumes many insects which would prey upon grass land, and the Chipping Sparrow, Scarlet Tanager, Rose-Breasted Grosbeak, House Wren, Cat Bird, Chickadee and other feathered creatures destroy thousands of injurious insects pests when raising their young birds. It, therefore, behoves every boy and every girl, every school teacher, and every citizen to do all they can by precept and example to conserve the birds and give them all possible protection.

Miss Julia Olson of St. Thomas, N. Dak., arrived in this city on Wednesday for a week's visit with her sister, Mrs. Nettie Anderson, who was injured in a run-away last week. Mrs. Anderson is doing very nicely, and we hope for her speedy recovery.

On Sunday last a number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Craik met at their pleasant home to witness the baptism of their infant son. After the rite, which was performed by the Rev. J. B. Smith, a tasty repast was served.

The Ladies Aid society of the M. E. church will be entertained by Mrs. J. B. Smith and Mrs. Posten Sr., at the church next Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock. Lunch will be served. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

Why not spend your Fourth at Mavie? Entertainment for young and old. Ball game, races of all kinds and greased-pig chase. Good bowery, good music; fine display of fire works in the evening. Liberal prizes. Don't forget to fetch your slow horse.

A bright and breezy musical comedy is coming to the Auditorium Monday, July 10th. It is "The Flower of the Ranch," by Joseph E. Howard. In writing this charming musical play Howard seemed to scorn the tropical lands and impossible situations dear to the average lover of comic opera, and turned to the far West for a setting; the result being a piece which has delighted metropolitan audiences for fifty weeks at a time and is meeting with equal success "on the road. An excellent company of forty people present this latest success with elaborate stage settings and effects.

8TH ANNUAL MEETING

The 8th Annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis held last week, June 20th and 21st., was well attended, though the location, Denver is far from the center of anti-tuberculosis activity. The following 7 delegates were present, representing Minnesota: Dr. C. L. Greene, St. Paul; Dr. Archibald McLaren, St. Paul; Dr. H. M. Bracken, Secretary of the State Board of Health; Mrs. Geo. Christian of Minneapolis who endowed Thomas Memorial Hospital for Tuberculosis Patients, in that city; Dr. L. R. Ohlinger of the Walker Sanatorium; Dr. A. F. Kilbourne, Superintendent of the Rochester State Insane Asylum and Christopher Easton, Executive Secretary of the Minnesota Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, St. Paul.

The newly formed Colorado Antituberculosis Association assumed the part of host and royally entertained the delegates, arranging also special trips to the senatoria located in Denver and Colorado Springs.

The sentiment of the meeting expressed in a resolution was decidedly in favor of local, rather than state institutions for moderately advanced cases of tuberculosis. Another resolution called attention to the reality of the danger to humans from bovine tuberculosis and urged the universal use of the tuberculosis test for dairy cattle and when this was impossible pasteurization of the entire milk supply under official supervision.

Other interesting features were the remarkable growth in out door schools for tuberculosis children; the consensus of opinion that relief of the consumptive's family should not be undertaken by the tuberculosis society, but through regular agencies, and the feeling voiced especially by the New York contingent, that where public officials could not be reached in other ways, tuberculosis societies who were into politics to the extent at least of opposing candidates who were hostile to the needed public appropriations.

The National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries met at the same time. The Red Cross as a means of raising funds was especially discussed. The National Association announced it would this season handle the business end of the distribution and sale in place of the American Red Cross which would only lend its name. A triangular design has been adopted to make confusion with postage stamps impossible.

FOUND DEAD.

Tarold Halvorson, a brother of Torgus Halvorson of Torgerson; Gunder Halvorson of Grygla; Julius Halvorson of this city and Ole Halvorson of High Landing, was found dying near High Landing last Tuesday. Deceased set out from Erie westward bound about 3 o'clock. When found he was lying on his face and breathed but once after changing his position. The body was then covered to await a coroner's inquest. Deceased is well kknown here and attended the Saeterdal convention here week before last.

Picturesque and colorful are the three acts of "The Flower of the Ranch," the successful musical comedy which comes to the Auditorium Monday July 10th. The foothills of the Rockies in California is the locale of the play, and the characters are such as one might naturally expect to find among the environment. There are Indians, Mexicans, cowpunchers, ranchmen and little "Flower," an attractive specimen of budding womanhood beloved by everyone. Jack Farnum, the hero of the plausible and spirited story, is a manly young rancher whose property an unprincipled sheriff seeks to , secure with the aid of a Mexican bad man. Little "Flower," whose affection for Jack is undisguised, is instrumental in thwarting the designs of the plotters, of course. The comedy element in the play is constant and keen. "Skivers," a smart and scrappy chore boy, with a penchant for timely rythm and whose nimble feet execute divers eccentric dances, romps gaily through the three-acts with "Flower." "The Flower of the Ranch" is not a "shoot-em up opera" for there is but one shot fired during the action of the play and that is "off stage." It is good, clean, wholesome entertainment of decidedly novel character, and ought to duplicate in this city its great success of last season in the large cities of the east.

When your mind works best
In the whirl of work,
And your heart to its music
keeps time.
When you feel how the lives,
of your fellow-men,
Are mingling with yours,
and mine;
Then do you not some interst feel
In how or when or where,
Your fellow man is earning his bread,
Of the world's work doing
his share?
Oh to feel yourself one of the army,
That is striving that each day,
may count
For something worth while in the battle of life,
Something on which you may mount
Just one step higher to that ideal,
That I, myself, would be,
Just a wee bit more of my life
work done,
That my God hath set for me.

IS TIRED OF TAWNEY.

James A. Tawney has a perfect hatred of all political nostrums, which, to the ex-congressman's mind, are all those measures intended to give the people control of their own government and a fair share of he wealth of the country. The worst political nostrum that ever cursed a country is the Morgan-Guggenheim plutocracy with its crowd of lackeys, or Fridays, in congress and out of it (Tawney is now out) known as standpatters.

If we inquire carefully what it is that the lackeys like, we find it is money and power—the plutocrat's money in the lackey's pocket and the power to serve their masters.

For many years legislation, state and national, has been bought and sold. The lackeys become rich, and the plutocrats exploit the people. By the way, who pays Tawney for perambulating the country and urging a restoration of the old order of things?

The standpat ship is sinking; heroic efforts are being made to save it; the farmers, Jonah—like, are tossed to the free-trade whale, and the lackeys are sent out to deceive the people.

The writer voted the Republican ticket for years, and later the Democratic ticket. Hereafter, out of sheer disgust, he is going to support the Socialistic nostrum, believing that it cannot be more than half as rotten—more than half as vicious—as the Tawney nostrums have been.

[illegible] DISASTERS
Who Cares?

Indpendence Day is coming; day of powder-poisoning and lockjaw; day of hospitals and ambulances; day of mutilation and fire and death. If there is any thing that is sane in the American people it is the growing revolt against our insane manner of celebrating the Fourth of July. It might be called "Incendiaries' Day"; for on that day the fire-fiend runs riot. No man having any public responsibility fails to dread it. No fire department gets through the day, and the nights on both sides of it, without exhaustion. It is doubtful if on some fifth of July an entire city may not complancently burn itself up in the faces of firemen and fire horses too exhausted by silly firecracker fires the day before to cope with it. The fire-fighting apparatus of our cities and towns is so overtaxed by the numberless calls which begin on the evening of July 3d that response to possible summons for help by neighboring towns or cities is impossible. What fire chief would dare allow even a hose wagon to go beyond immediate recall while alarms in his own city are coming in at ten-minute intervals? Even the large number of false alarms, due to the reckless use of the day, have their dire significance, for they tire out the horses and the men, and reduce the ability of the department to cope with actual fires. When the gong begins to ring at headquarters, its call is as imperative for a rubbish heap ablaze as it is for the home of a citizen. The wear and tear of the apparatus, and even the injury to the horses during thirty-six hours of almost constant runs, may be as great for false alarms as for real ones. It seems a sort of folly almost too unspeakable to relate, but there are instances where American firemen have been killed in runs to fires on July 4th by being thrown from trucks by frightened horses swerving from their course at explosions thrown under them as they galloped past.

Never an "Independence" Day but scores of human beings are made dependent for life. Life and limb are jeopardized by explosives thrown from windows above the level of the street, setting fire to clothing and men acing the eyesight of those passing, while upon the child, who, in his innocent love of noise and objective demonstrations, responds to our present absurd kind of celebration, falls the heavy hand of disaster. When our civilization was not so complex, it was possible for those who had the courage to leave their homes to the mercy of possible conflagrations, to shut them up and escape to the quiet of the country. Not so to-day. The trolley car and the automobile follow the seeker after peace to his country retreats, throwing explosives at his head as they roar past in their reckless irresponsibility.

And for what! Nobody stops to inquire. Nobody any longer cares. We have gotten wholly away from the educational significance of "Independence" Day, and lost ourselves in an orgy of fire and noise.

It is, perhaps too much to expect any sudden return to sanity; but some effort at least may be made by cities and towns toward leading their people into more moderate and more intelligent forms of celebration. If explosives must be used the authorities can limit their use to the public parks during certain hours of the day, where the folly-hunters may kill and maim themselves and each other to heart's content, without injuring other people, or destroying property by fire. The firing off of explosives among the closely built shinlge-roofed frame houses, which compose the greater part of our cities, is wholly in accord with the reckless spirit of Americans regarding fire.

If before every Fourth of July all cities and towns were given a thorough cleaning of rubbish, and all use of explosives then restricted as to time and place, the police and public wardens might have at least a fighting chance to minimize the disastrous results of our public folly during the years it may require to inspire in our people a desire for a rational kind of celebration. And such a desire must be inspired. It is the duty of every city to arrange for its people suitable amusements or exercises definitely to educate them in a rational observance of this historic holiday. Habits of folly can be most easily eliminated by a substitution of something better. The things a city can do to interest its citizens in a sane and wholesome celebration are unlimited, and the municipalities, which in the past two years have taken steps in this direction are already receiving national praise for their wisdom and their high sense of civic responsibility.

Independence Day of 1911 is coming. To what city, what town, what mother or father is it this year to bring suffering or sorrow the day after?

GRAND THEATRE

It is not at all surprising that Joseph E. Howard's big musical comedy "The Flower of the Ranch," is a great success, for in this charming story of the Golden West, Mr. Howard has given the public all there is to be found in a beautiful story and a typical Howard play combined. Those who have in the past witnessed that wonderfully clever drama, "The Girl of the Golden West," may imagine that most interesting drama with twenty musical numbers interpolated, and you have some idea what "The Flower of the Ranch" is like. Mr. Howard has given the public a charming story of the Golden West and has arranged his popular airs so familiar to the theatre-goer. The production was at once accepted in New York and Chicago, and proved a winner from the first performance. There is lots of action from the rise of the curtain and, presented by an excellent company, it will prove one of the best offerings of the coming season. This attraction will be at the Auditorium, Monday, July 10th.

JUDGMENT SALE
IN DISTRICT COURT

Fourteenth Judicial District
State Of Minnesota)
) ss.
County Of Pennington)

By virtue of a judgment duly entered and docketed in the district court in and for the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on the 2nd day of March 1911, in an action to foreclose a mechanics lien wherein Thomas Gulseth is the plaintiff and Helene Anderson and Halvor Anderson are the defendants wherein it is adjudged;

FIRST, That the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants is the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars ($85.60), with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and the sum of twenty-five and 10-100 dollars as attorney's fees, together with the sum of two and 40-100 Dollars as sheriff's fees and the sum of seven and 55-100 dollars as clerks fees and other costs, making a total of one hundred twenty-four and 09-100 dollars.

SECOND, That all of said sum is due for work and material furnished in and about the construction of a building on the following described premises situated in the county of Pennington and the state of Minnesota, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of block eleven (11) in the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., according to the recorded plat thereof, and that the said premises and the interest of the defendants therein at the time of the commencement of work and the furnishing of material aforesaid on the 20th day of July 1910, or which they or either of them have since acquired are subject to a lien for all of said sum.

THIRD, That the interest of the said defendants in and to the premises above described be sold to satisfy the amount of said lien and the costs of this action; and the filing of the lien claim, the notice of Lis Pendens and attorney's fees.

FOURTH, That the sale be made by the sheriff of said county and that said sheriff give notice thereof in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate under foreclosure, and that the said premises be sold in one parcel and out of the proceeds of such sale, pay said Thomas Gulseth the sum of eighty-five and 60-100 dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the third day of September 1910 and all costs herein before provided, including attorney's fees.

NOW THEREFORE, By virtue of said judgment and the laws of the State of Minnesota in such cases made and provided, I, as sheriff of Pennington county, Minnesota, will sell, subject to all prior incumbrances and liens, the hereinbefore described premises, to wit: Lots numbered thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) in block eleven (11) of the original townsite of the city of Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Minnesota to the highest bidder for cash at public sale at the front door of the Auditorium Building in said city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington and State of Minnesota on Saturday, the 1st. day of July, A. D., 1911 at 10 o'clock a. m., of said da to satisfy said judgment, costs, and attorney's fees subject to redemption as provided by law.

Dated this 10th, day of May, A. D. 1911.

Beecher's Keen Retort.

In his autobiography Senator Hoar related the following story: Henry Ward Beecher some time in 1862 was speaking on behalf of the Union in Liverpool. The audience was unfriendly, and in the course of his speech he was interrupted by some one in the crowd who called out: "You said you would smash up the southern army in ninety days. Why didn't you do it?" At this there was a burst of laughter throughout the house, and many a gibe was hurled at the speaker. Mr. Beecher waited until the audience had quieted down and then said, "My friends, if the rebels had been Englishmen we would have done it!" Those men in gray were Americans of the purest blood.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Attorney....for Petitioner....

For pure, wholesome fun, for laughter that will not be followed by the slightest tinge of regret for having brought your mother, sister or sweetheart to see it, is "The Flower of the Ranch," the Howard musical success coming to the Auditorium on Monday, July 10th. Its sparkling comedy, its overflowing mirth, its pretty costumes and its excellent cast have combined to make it the most talked of play of the season. The marvelous little "Broilers" who do the wonderful dances which bring the audiences to their feet with such swiftness and dash, still work with the same enthusiasm that has made these girls a revelation to the theatregoers who heretofore have been accustomed to the bored looking chorus girl. The musical numbers "Just Say You Care," "Worried," "What's The Use of Dreaming," "The Pajama and the Nightie," "The Same Old Story," "California" and "The Days of '49" receive encore after encore.

Rasp Got the Pig.

Surely one of the hardest tests of a sheep dog is to be put in charge of a pig. That, according to one of the contributors to "Shepherds of Britain," is what happened to Rasp, a famous Midlothian collie. The owner found on his return home one day that the pig had escaped and sent the dog to fetch it. "So off went Rasp in quest of what proved one of the most stubborn of the members of the bucolic family she ever encountered. Having been absent about twenty-five minutes, she at last appeared with a few sheep in front of her. But in the center of the sheep was the pig, experience having taught her that the little rebel could not be driven alone."

THE "NIGGER TEACHER"

By WALTER B. HENDRICKS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Were you here when the war broke out?" I asked a citizen of Alabama during a visit to that state in 1868.

"Waal, yes, I reckon I war hyar about that time."

"Do you remember Cyrus Vandeveer?"

"Reckon I do remember Cyrus Vandeveer. Nobody who was hyar when he was hyar 'll forgit him, I reckon."

"Do they remember him kindly or unkindly?"

"They remember him mighty kindly about the time he went away, but when he first came down hyar they didn't take to him at all."

"What changed them? Tell me all about it."

"Well, suh, Cyrus Vandeveer was one of them abolitionists that didn't know enough to let the southern people alone to do what they liked with their niggers. At that time we didn't want our slaves to know too much, fo' if they did we would lose our property. Vandeveer set up a school fo' the blacks. Some of our most influential citizens went to him and protested. He said that he believed it to be his duty to teach 'em, and he proposed to go on with the wo'k.

"They went away and consulted, but they didn't say anything mo' to Vandeveer, who continued teachin' the niggers. That was just befo' the wah, and we was all gittin' mighty hot down hyar. Finally one night Vandeveer's schoolhouse was observed to be on fiah. The darkies ran fo' buckets to put water on it, but the committee stopped 'em, tellin' 'em they couldn't put on any water. Co'se the niggers was mighty cut up about this, and it made a heap o' trouble among 'em. The schoolhouse burned to the ground, and there was nothing left but a few charred timbers. Vandeveer wasn't nigh. He had gone to see a sick darky that had been one of his scholars and didn't get back till his schoolhouse was burned to ashes.

"That was a very dry season, there not having been any rain fo' months. After the fiah everybody went to bed. The wind rose, and—well, some s'pose it carried a spark and some s'pose the spark got lodged in the shingles of the roof when the schoolhouse was burning. Anyhow, about 11 o'clock there was an ala'm o' fiah at Cunnel Woodbridge's house. The cunnel was playin' a game o' draw at Majo' Atwater's with Captain Sykes, Cunnel Thorpe and several other influential citizens. They had burned the schoolhouse and afterward gone to Majo' Atwater's fo' a julep and a game o' cyards. Cunnel Woodbridge sta'ted up when somebody rushed in and tole him his house was afiah, sayin' he had left his little gal tha' alone. The cunnel was a widower, with this little daughter, about twelve years old.

"By the time the poka' party got to the house the downstairs was burnin', and nobody could get upstairs. Little Mary Woodbridge ran to a windo' and, seein' her father below by the light o' the flames, stretched out her a'ms to him and cried out:

"'Papa, save me!'

"I was lookin' myself at the cunnel, and I neva' saw such an expression of agony on a man's face in my life. No one could get up to the child, fo' everything below was afiah.

"Just then a man come along and took in the situation. He was that cursed nigger teacher. He was young and active as a cat. There was a rusty lightning rod in a corner of the house runnin up right to the window wha' the gal was. Vandeveer he tuk hold of it and shinned up to the window and reached out an arm. The gal tuk hold of it and swung down beside the abolitionist, who held on to the rod with the other hand.

"Waal, there he was. He couldn't come down hand ovah hand with only one hand, and he couldn't hold on long. Anyhow, it was gittin' hotter all the while, and he and the gal would burn to death. But he hung on. While he was tha the room wha' the child had been burst into a flame. It looked as if both of 'em must perish when some one come with a ladder and, puttin' it up to 'em, Cy dropped Mary on to it and she got down. Then Cy followed her.

"You just orter seen Cunnel Woodbridge when he got his daughter from the man whose schoolhouse he had helped to burn. And his burnin' the schoolhouse was what burned his own house, and if it hadn't been for Cy Vandeveer would a' burned Mary. The cunnel couldn't look the nigger teacher in the face. He just put out his hand and said nothin'.

"That was the night befo' Fo't Sumter was fired on, and the next mawnin' when they looked fo' Cyrus Vandeveer he wa'n't no wha' to be found. They reckoned he'd lit out to the no'th to fight the south."

"What's become of Mary Woodbridge?" I asked.

"Oh, she's livin here with her aunt. She's grown up now. Lots o' young fellers want to marry her, but she says she's waitin' fo' that nigger teacher that saved her from burnin'."

"Where can I find her?"

"Over tha' in that white house." As I walked away he called: "Say, stranger, what do you want of her?"

"I'm the nigger teacher. I've been waiting for her too."

"Oh, no, mother. I want it that way so I can see it myself. Most always only other people can see the feathers on my hats."—Judge.

A WIDOW'S OLD HORSE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

One day the Widow Saunderson was in town, and she found a horse auction going on. The last of the bunch to be put up was an old gray mare. She was skin and bone and then some more. The auctioneer did not slander her character when he called her an old skate.

There was a general laugh of contempt over the old mare, and then some one bid $2. Out of pure sympathy the widow bid a dollar more, and the nag was hers. She was guyed by the crowd, but the prize was hitched behind the wagon and reached the farm in due time without having once fallen by the wayside. There were two hired men to grin and chuckle and talk about crow banquets, but the woman silenced them with:

"Get along, you idiots! Turn that horse out to grass and take good care of her. If she dies her hide will be worth all I paid for her whole body."

This was early in the spring. When the old mare began to fill up she began to improve. In a month her ribs could no longer be counted from the highway, and she began to gambol a bit. It was when another horse was turned into the lot with her of a Sunday that the surprise came. One of the men came up to the house and said to Mrs. Saunderson:

"Say, you come down to the fence and see that old mare!"

"Dead, is she?"

"Dead! Why, she's the liveliest old nag you ever set eyes on! Come down!"

The two horses were having a play. It was a ten acre meadow, and they were circling it. The farm horse was on the gallop and the old mare on the trot, and yet he could not leave her behind.

"She got that gait before a sulky for sure," said the man.

"Looks like it to me," replied the widow. "After this you feed her a few oats every day and use the currycomb, and don't either one of you boys say a word outside."

The Akron county fair, always held late in September, ranked next to the state fair. Some said the horse racing was even better, because the track was better. When the opening of the entries was announced the Widow Saunderson said to one of her men:

"Joe, here's the money to enter Lady Gray. You can claim to be the owner. You go over to Johnsonville and borrow or buy a sulky and get it here on the sly. The old mare is going into the free for all, and you are going to drive her."

And a few days later she said to the other man:

"Tim, here is a hundred dollars. You go to town and loaf around for two or three days. Bet the money on our horse. Get the best odds you can."

When day and date came they hooted the widow's hired man and his equine. They had bet 5 to 1 before, now they bet 15 to 1. The widow had $400 in the bank. She drew every dollar of it out, and Tim placed it on the mare.

That was a race that is talked of yet. A green driver, an old sulky and a farm horse. As soon as the mare got on to the track her actions betrayed the fact that it was a familiar scene to her, and her driver had the sense to let her take her own way instead of hauling her about. When the bunch got away at last he simply held his horse steady and prayed with all his might. She had "gone some" on the highway, but she seemed to be flying now. She picked up horse after horse until she had the lead, and she came in winner by such a distance that the other horses were hooted off the track. Not a skip, not a break—just a fast and steady pace, and a driver who was so scared that he had to be helped down from his seat.

The roll of money gathered in by the Widow Saunderson on her wagers and by the sale of the mare after the race was exactly the size of a fifteen cent tomato can. With the bundle in a pillowslip she called on the minister of her church a few days later and said:

"Parson, I know you have figured things up. How much to paint the meeting house?"

"A hundred and fifty dollars," he replied.

"And how much for pew cushions?"

"A hundred."

"And for the red carpets in the aisles?"

"Fifty will do it."

"And can't we get an organ for $500?"

"We certainly can."

"And a bell?"

"Two hundred."

"And how much salary is due you?"

"Well—ahem—well, I don't like to say so, but the sum is about $200."

"But, widow, I don't understand."

"Won it at the county fair the other day."

"Then I can't take it. It is tainted money."

"Parson, don't be an idiot! The men who paint the meeting house will swear. The men who cast the bell will swear. There'll be swearing over the cushions and carpets and organ. There'll be tainted money just as much as this money. You want to swear over your back salary, and, by gum, I'll do some swearing if you don't take the money! There, now!"

And the parson took it.

AN ARMY LOVE AFFAIR

By JOHN ADAMSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The United States army and navy, which used to be very aristocratic institutions, are, like everything else, becoming democratic. The old army before the civil war was like one family—that is, the officers and their wives and children constituted one select social circle. Recently there have been several episodes to indicate that the old spirit is dying, but dying hard. The following story illustrates this:

I was graduated at West Point at twenty, and I don't know a more dangerous age than that for a young officer. His pay enables him to marry. He has seen nothing of the world and nothing of the opposite sex except for a couple of months each summer for two years during the encampment season while he was a cadet. Released from a confining life, he is ready to fall in love with the first girl he meets.

I was graduated in the engineers, and the first job I was given by the government was making an estimate on certain intended repairs on a fort on the Atlantic coast in a southern state. The fort had not been kept up, having been left in charge of an ordnance sergeant, but in view of a feeling on the part of the people of the United States that our coast defenses needed strengthening the government decided to look into the matter.

Fort L. was situated on a point of land extending into the ocean and as lonely as a lighthouse. For a few months in the spring the neighborhood was a resort for northern persons, chiefly invalids, there being several hotels on the beach. I was sent to the fort in October. When I first saw the old pile with its empty casements and empty quarters I shuddered at being obliged to pass some time there.

The sergeant made me as comfortable as he could in a casement, his wife taking pains that it should be clean, and my bed was provided with snow white linen.

And now comes the point of my story: The couple had a daughter seventeen years old. What could I do? What did I do but make love to her. I knew perfectly well that there is a barrier in the army between the families of commissioned and noncommissioned officers. I knew furthermore that Mary Converse was getting no education and had never mingled with the class of people to whom I was used. If I married her it would place her out of her element and she would be a lifelong drag on me.

But here was I in the springtime of life, shut up with a girl in a fortress and no other associate. I doubt if any precaution would have availed. She was situated just as I was, shut up with a young soldier, and could no more resist a natural drift toward me than I toward her.

Before leaving I asked Mary Converse to be my wife. I knew I was wronging her and myself in doing so, but I had conceived high notions of honor at West Point and considered myself pledged to her. At her age, and being one of those feminine girls who when they love love hard, I believed that if I deserted her it would wreck her life. So I went away engaged, well knowing that if I did not desert her both our lives would be wrecked.

My first visit to my fiancee was in the following spring. The hotels on the beach were now open, and I took up my quarters in one of them. Some seven months only had elapsed, and Mary was not much changed. I felt the same toward her as before. The reasons I attributed this to are that it was a case of young and innocent love, and Mary was a superior girl. She was bright, she had what we call character, and she was pretty.

At the hotel I met a Mrs. Boyington, the wife of an army officer, who conceived a marked friendship for me. She was twenty years my senior, and I craved some one on whom to bestow my confidence. So I told her of my affair.

"It must be broken off," said the lady, "both on your account and the girl's."

"She will not be able to endure it without serious consequences," I replied.

Our talk ended in the lady's going to see my betrothed. On her return she handed me a note from Mary badly written, misspelled and blotted with tears, in which she said that Mrs. Boyington had convinced her that she would harm me and herself by marrying me and she released me.

I was so far attached to her that I spent some time making up my mind to accept the release.

After that I met many young ladies, but none of them pleased me. I was preoccupied with my first love. Indeed, I did not propose to replace her. Since the difference in our stations prevented our marriage I would marry no one. At intervals I met Mrs. Boyington, to whom I told my feelings.

"Don't talk that way at your age," she replied. "You'll surely find some one you can love."

Six years later Mrs. Boyington and I met at the same station. She asked me to dine with her, and whom should I meet at her quarters but Mary Converse, but not, so far as education and manners were concerned, the simple Mary Converse of years before. Mrs. Boyington had educated her and given her many social advantages.

She had been as true to me as I had been to her, and before we parted our engagement was renewed.

RELATES STORY OF SUGAR WAR

John D. Spreckels Testifies Before House Committee.

HAVEMEYER ASKED FOR PEACE

Witness Asserts That at the Conclusion of a Long and Costly Competitive War His Father Forced His Opponent to Throw Up His Hands and That an Alliance of the Contending Parties Was Then Formed.

Washington, June 27.—Details of a great sugar war in the early nineties between Claus Spreckels in the West and Henry O. Havemeyer in the East, resulting in an alliance between those two sugar sovereigns, were related to the sugar trust investigating committee of the house by John D. Sprekels, son of the Pacific sugar magnate and president of the Western Sugar Refining company of San Francisco.

"When Claus Spreckels met Henry O. Havemeyer in that old sugar war," asked Representative Madison of the witness, "it was a contest of Greek against Greek, was it not?"

"It certainly was a fight."

"Your father was a masterful man in the sugar industry, was he not? He was to the Pacific coast what Henry O. Havemeyer was to the Atlantic. Was not he a monarch over the sugar industry?"

"In a lawful way, he was," said Mr. Spreckels. "We always aim to carry on our business in a lawful manner."

Mr. Spreckels then described how, during the sugar war, his father invaded the Eastern territory and erected a great cane sugar refinery in Philadelphia. That brought about the culmination of the fight.

"Who was the first of those two masters to throw up his hands?" Mr. Madison resumed.

Says Havemeyer Gave Up.

"I think it was Havemeyer," said Mr. Sprekels. "When we entered the East in that fight, of course both my father and Mr. Havemeyer realized that they were losing money. They came to their senses and, in short, came together and concluded that such a fight was of no use. It resulted in a consolidation of the plants in the East and the formation of the Western Sugar Refining company in California, which took over the American Sugar Refining company plant and our plant there. The American plant in the West was closed down. Each side took a half interest in the new company. In the East the entire Philadelphia Spreckels plant eventually was sold to the American Sugar Refining company. That was, I think, in 1892."

"After that there never was any competition between Spreckels and Havemeyer, was there?" Mr. Madison inquired.

"No, but there has since been plenty of other competition."

Tells of Beet Sugar Deal.

Mr. Spreckels also described how Mr. Havemeyer became associated with them in 1897 in the Spreckels Beet Sugar company in the erection of the largest beet sugar plant in the world.

He further related the history of an agreement in 1903 between the Western Sugar Refining company with a rival concern, the California-Hawaiian Sugar company, whereby the plant of the latter was leased by the former and shut down for three years. Eventually it was turned back to the original owners and is again a competitor. This transaction, Mr. Spreckels said he was advised by counsel, was not a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The witness declared that in his opinion free trade in sugar would ruin the beet sugar business and he prophesied that with the tariff on sugar let alone the state of California alone could furnish enough sugar from beets to supply the entire United States and to warrant the tariff protection of the industry.

In answer to questions by Representative Hinds, Mr. Spreckels declared that the American Sugar Refining company did not have a monopoly of the sugar business of the country.

NEW SHIP HAS HIGH SPEED

Utah Exceeds Contract Requirements by Going 21.6 Knots.

Rockland, Me., June 27.—A maximum speed of 21,637 knots, .887 greater than the contract requirement, was attained by the new United States battleship Utah, the latest addition to the nation's dreadnoughts, during her standardization trials over the official course here.

Although no official statement has been made it is understood that the working of the turbines with which the Utah is equipped was satisfactory.

The battleship is 98.4 completed and is is now expected that she will be ready to go into commission about Aug. 10.

Bloomington, Ill., June 27.—During a heavy rain and electrical storm at Panola William Heirmeir, seventeen years old, was killed by lightning. While harvesting wheat near San Jose Henry Nees, twenty-seven years old, was killed by lightning.

Broadway and the Strand.

Broadway, New York, is the more or less exact counterpart of the London Strand. It is actually broader, but it appears more narrow because the houses are so much higher, and it is a little straighter because it is a made road, not a road evolved from what was once a path along river mud. The general effect is identical. There are the same kinds of shops and a crowd of the same type passing to or from the business quarter of the city. But, as I have said, one rubs one's eyes looking out at the crowd upon the sidewalk. It is the Strand crowd—cosmopolitan, varied, people touching one another so closely that the tops of their heads appear to form another tier on the street, a tier paved with hats instead of wood blocks or granite sets. There it is, the crowd. But it appears to stop still. In one's first astonishment one thinks that all these people are waiting for a procession to pass. One cannot believe that they are the procession. Nevertheless as the slow trolley passes onward one realizes that the crowd is actually in motion—that it is the thing itself, not the procession. It is an extraordinary shock, this first impression of the land of hurry.—Ford Madox Hueffer in Atlantic.

Victor Hugo's Golden Gift.

A Paris chiffonnier makes a living of a sort, and he sometimes in overhauling the dust bins comes across a find. In this respect a Paris contemporary relates a capital story of Victor Hugo. A little silver gilt souvenir spoon which the poet valued very much disappeared. Through the carelessness of the maidservant it had found its way into the ash bucket and in due course into the hands of the chiffonnier who practiced in the district. This worthy succeeded in getting the poet to awake from his reveries and to descend from the lofty heights of Olympus—in other words, his study—to receive back the lost spoon. Hugo was delighted to get back his souvenir. The author of "Hernani" was never a prodigal, so he rewarded the chiffonnier by presenting him with a copy of his "Les Chansons des Rues et des Bois," saying, "There, my man; you will find in it as much gold as is contained in any jewel case in the world."—London Globe.

Watched.

"No, Herbert," whispered the maid; "you mustn't put your arm around me. We are watched."

Herbert looked around the dimly lighted parlor.

"Oh, yes," he smiled; "I see there's a rubber plant at the other end of the room."

"Sh! There's another one that you don't see. Johnny's hiding there."—Chicago Tribune.

Long Engagements.

Young Man—Do you believe in long engagements, sir? Cynical Benedick—Certainly, my young friend, certainly! The longer the engagement the shorter the marriage!

Genesis of the Playhouse.

Thespis in 536 B. C. acted his plays in a wagon. In 499 B. C., during the time of Aeschylus, creator of drama, the performances took place upon temporary wooden scaffolds, one of which, having collapsed during a representation, the Athenians were induced to build the great theater of Dionysius, calling it the Lenaion, which was the first permanent stone structure of its kind. It required 160 years to erect it. There was no scenery, but he scene was decorated so as to represent the locality in which the action was going on. Roofless was his structure, but around the building were porticoes, to which the people retreated during rainstorms. Sometimes awnings were used to ward off the sun's heat. Invariably the actors were males, who wore masks with mouthpieces, answering the purpose of speaking trumpets. Owing to the vastness of the theater metal vases were placed under the seats to serve as reflectors of sound. Performances began in the morning and usually lasted twelve hours.—New York Telegram.

Hanged and Buried and Lived.

It is not given to many men to be hanged and buried and yet be able to tell the tale, but such was the experience of one John Bartendale, who was executed at York in 1634 for felony. After his body had hung for nearly an hour it was buried. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the earth move, and with the help of his servant he disinterred the convict, who was still alive. It was the custom in those days to bury suicides and executed criminals without any coffin. The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life. When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied. "When I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."

Plon-Plon and Bernhardt.

Prince Napoleon, commonly known as Plon-Plon, often used to come to George Sand's rehearsals. He was extremely fond of her. The first time I ever saw that man I turned pale and felt as though my heart stopped beating. He looked so much like Napoleon I. that I disliked him for it. By resembling him it seemed to me that he made him seem less far away and brought him nearer to every one.

Mme. Sand introduced him to me in spite of my wishes. He looked at me in an impertinent way. He displeased me. I scarcely replied to his compliments and went closer to George Sand.

"Why, she is in love with you!" he exclaimed, laughing. George Sand stroked my cheek gently. "She is my little madonna," she answered; "do not torment her."—Sarah Bernhardt's Memoirs.

Convincing Argument.

A certain colonel's gardener was going through the woods belonging to his employer when he saw a man gathering nuts.

As the colonel had given strict orders that this was not to be permitted, the gardener accosted the man. "You'll have to clear out of this," he said. "I've had orders to keep all these nuts for the colonel this year."

"That's all right," replied the man. "I'm getting 'em for the colonel."

A week later the gardener came across the man again.

"Look here," he said angrily. "You weren't getting those nuts for the colonel at all."

"I tell you I was," was the emphatic reply. "Do you think I was getting 'em for the shells?"—London Ideas.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

There are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.—Scientific American.

Worse Off.

"You know that I told you how I dropped our rubber plant and wrecked it?"

"Yes."

"I'm sorry I did it."

"Why?"

"My wife has just bought a new one that's twice as heavy."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HOUSE IS MARKING TIME

Passes Bill Making Appropriation for Various Probes.

Washington, June 27.—The passage of an urgent deficiency appropriation bill for $31,000 odd, including the payment of expenses of the special investigations now being conducted by house committees, was practically the only business transacted by the house.

Except for the work of committees nothing will be done by the house until after July 4, adjournment being taken for three days with the understanding that no business would be transacted on Thursday nor on next Monday.

ALLEGED ELECTION FRAUDS IN ZION CITY

Voliva and Other Officials Indicted for Irregularities.

Waukegan, Ill., June 27.—Overseer Wilbur Glen Voliva and 189 other officers and members of the Christian Catholic church in Zion City were indicted at Zion City charged with election frauds at the Zion City elections, April 5 and 18, involving, in part, control of the church founded by the late Alexander Dowie.

Two hundred witnesses were heard. It is alleged that Voliva and his coworkers in the election brought members of the church from all parts of the country, including San Francisco, Portland, Ore.; Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Cleveland and other cities, to vote. Their qualifications in many instances were protested by the "independents," but they are said to have sworn in their votes by taking oath that they were residents of Zion City.

BIBLE TEXTS ARE APPLAUDED

Congressman Accused of Inserting Applause In Printed Speech.

Washington, June 27.—The expression "applause" after the words "Jesus was born in a manger; John the Baptist fed on locusts and wild honey," in the printed speech of Representative Fowler of Illinois, a newly elected Democrat, precipitated a personal colloquy in the house.

Representative Mann of Illinois, Republican leader of the house, accused Fowler of having inserted all the "applauses" in the advance copy of the Fowler speech. Mann said he would not have noticed this but for the fact that the word "applause" was inserted after the quotation cited.

Representative Stone, also an Illinoisan, declared he heard the speech delivered and that there was applause at all the points indicated.

Two Kisses

By C. ARNOLD COLE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Formerly railroad cars passing through tunnels were not lighted as they are now. A number of episodes have been recorded of affectionate action in these dark holes in the ground, and kisses have been surreptitiously taken. Leonard Starkweather, a young man of some twenty-one years and proportionately inexperienced, took one of these kisses, and it led to no end of worry on his part. He finally paid the penalty.

He was traveling with Miss Gwendolin Stewart, a young lady two years his junior. Miss Stewart had one of those complexions which can only be compared to a ripe peach of a light shade, a pale rose on ivory. Her lips were of that same shade of pink and quite tempting enough to cause any man to wreck himself to touch them with his own. Starkweather had been introduced to her by a mutual friend before the train started, and she had been put under his care. This rendered his act all the more dishonorable.

The better to cover his tracks the kiss was stolen with malice aforethought. He told the young lady just before the train entered the long tunnel, the location of which he well knew, that he was going into the smoking car for a whiff at a cigar. Instead of doing so he went into the next car back, where he remained till the train shot under the hill. The young lady sat on the right of the car, the eighth seat from the rear. This he had carefully noted. Putting his hand on the back of every seat till he reached the eighth, he felt carefully till he had noted Miss Stewart's position, then quietly bent down and took the kiss.

A muffled cry was heard above the rattle of the train, but when the car shot out into the light there was no evidence of anything wrong. Starkweather had made good his escape, and Miss Stewart was apparently endeavoring to regain her equanimity by fumbling with her handkerchief, which she was examining as though she had bought it at a bargain counter and doubted if she had not been sold as well as the linen.

Half an hour passed—quite enough to enable her to quiet down after the episode—when Mr. Starkweather returned to his seat beside her, bringing with him the odor of tobacco smoke. He was a trifle nervous, but felt relieved to find Miss Stewart quite composed. He expected that she would tell him of the outrage that had been inflicted upon her and ask him to take measures to discover the perpetrator. He was surprised that she didn't mention the matter and considered her refraining from doing so due to maidenly modesty.

But Miss Stewart's treatment of her escort was somewhat different from what it had been. An innocent freedom was replaced by a slight reserve. The ingenuousness, the confidence—call it what you will—of girlhood seemed to have departed from her. Occasionally Starkweather caught her looking up at him sidewise with an expression that he could not fathom. He began to be troubled lest she had known or at least divined that he was the man who had insulted her. But how could she have got any inkling of this? When he kissed her not a ray of light had penetrated the car. He had felt no touch. His face was smoothly shaven, so that no pointer could have been obtained from the character of a beard. No; it was simply impossible that she should have any evidence of having been kissed by him. This being the case, why should she have withdrawn that outspoken confidence with which she had treated him? And yet it was not a turning against him; it was rather like that condition which comes between friends of different sexes when the man lets go friendship to grasp at love.

Starkweather looked upon a young girl as something too holy to be profaned. This is a characteristic of youth, and another is a great sensitiveness to woman's treatment. His theft was to him like that of the Spartan boy who stole the wolf—not criminal so long as not found out. The boy had the wolf under his coat and let it gnaw the flesh away rather than that it should be discovered. Starkweather began to believe that Miss Stewart knew he had kissed her. Perhaps if he had been sure of this it would have been more tolerable than the uncertainty under which he suffered. Horrible situation! An innocent girl had been put under his care, and he had kissed her in a tunnel. Should she really know that he had so betrayed a trust possibly before they parted she might resent the outrage as it deserved. The thought was maddening.

They arrived at their destination after dark. Starkweather saw the young lady to her home, leaving her at her door. In the light of a street lamp he stood, half expecting that she would give evidence of her scorn. Instead she turned up to him those lips that had tempted him. What did it mean? He didn't stop to ask. He kissed them.

"Did you know I kissed you in the tunnel?" he asked.

In reply she gave him his handkerchief with his initials on it, which she had pulled out of his pocket when the kiss was taken.

A MEDIEVAL LOVE AFFAIR

By MARGARET L. BLISS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

One morning some three centuries ago, when Florence, Italy, ruled by Duke Cosimo de Medici, was divided among a number of powerful families, the Duchess Eleanora, attended by couriers, was driven from the Pitti palace across the bridge called the Ponte Vecchio, spanning the river Arno, into the main part of the city. Beside the duchess sat a young girl noted especially for her fair complexion and golden hair. From an upper window overlooking the bridge a young man looked down on the cavalcade. About stood a crowd of persons dividing their glances between the young man and the young girl beside the duchess. His eyes were riveted on her, while she glanced up at him. They were known to be lovers, all Florence sympathized with them, and the crowd had collected to observe this lovers' look that passed between them.

The girl was Maddalena, the daughter of Bernardo Vettori, surnamed "the light haired," and it was from him that his daughter inherited her locks of gold as well as an immense fortune. The mother of Maddalena when widowed married Pietro Salviati and, in order to keep her fortune in the family, the stepfather betrothed her when still a child to his son by a former marriage. But this young man was killed in battle.

When Maddalena came to a marriageable age a love affair came about between her and Lodovico Capponi, who owned a villa in the country adjoining one of her own. It was a grand passion on both sides, and the flame was fanned by opposition. Maddalena's stepfather, still bent on keeping his fortune in his own family, persuaded Duke Cosimo to forbid the marriage. Despite her own, her mother's and her lover's protests and entreaties the girl was placed in a convent.

Lodovico was a fiery young man, and it was hoped by the stepfather that he would commit some act of violence which would afford an excuse to banish him, lock him up or otherwise dispose of him. But the lover displayed more self control than had been expected and refused to give his enemy the covered opportunity.

Maddalena's mother told the story of her daughter's love and misfortunes to the duchess and succeeded in interesting her. The affair was known to all Florentines, who were a poetic and artistic people easily moved by a story of love. Moreover, they feared that if the duke was able to prevent this

The duchess finally succeeded in persuading her husband to permit her to invite Maddalena to visit her for a few days at the palace. Instead of days she remained months. But the struggle to compel her to resign her lover was not given up. Indeed, her invitation came in order to unite her with another suitor. By the duke's order Lodovico was never mentioned except in contempt, while Sigismondi di Rossi, a favorite of the duke, was always spoken of with the highest praise.

Lodovico, not being permitted to visit the girl he loved, rented a house overlooking the Ponte Vecchio, from which he could look down upon her and receive her return glance whenever she crossed the bridge with the duchess.

It was one of these occasions that has been described at the opening of this story, a scene that would not likely have happened anywhere except in the city of the medieval Italian poets and painters whose names and works are part even of the present age. The bridge that Maddalena crossed stands today, traversed daily by thousands of Florentines and tourists.

Perhaps no incident in the history of Florence can so well express the difference between that age, that people and this. Fancy a crowd at the entrance of a park in an American city, Washington for instance, waiting to see an heiress driven out with the president's wife, her lover standing at the window of a house he has hired for the express purpose of seeing his ladylove go by. That age has passed, but romance still exists and is as deep set in human nature as ever. While the people of that day were interested in individual cases, we now find its expression in "best sellers." Have we not in this respect degenerated?

Whether it was that the duke, who was only interested in Salviati's plans through friendship for him, found that he was playing a losing game for himself, becoming unpopular, or whether he met an undercurrent of opposition from those prominent families who feared his power to interfere in their own affairs, is not recorded, but in any event his opposition suddenly collapsed. One morning at daylight an old woman appeared at Lodovico's bedside and awakened him with some astonishing and delightful news. She bore a message from the duchess. Lodovico was summoned to the palace to take Maddalena away with him and prepare for an immediate marriage.

The lover bounded out of bed and began the preparations at once, going as soon as he was dressed to the palace. All Florence was interested in the wedding, which took place at the house from which the lover had so often looked down on his mistress, but since it was not large enough the piazza on which it stood was inclosed for a ballroom.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

WIN ONE AND LOSE ONE

"Indians" Defeat Warren 5 to 2 On Sunday and lose 12 to 15 July 4th.

Last Sunday the locals put up an excellent game of ball and easily trimmed Warren 5 to 2 on the local grounds. A large and enthusiastic crowd, aided by the band, helped the boys on to victory. The fans have awakened to the fact that Thief River has a first-class ball team, and are now giving the team excellent support and encouragement.

FIRST INNING

Warren—Bakke grounded to Courtney and was an easy out at first. Summers and Boardman finished by striking out.

Thief River—Doland reached first on error by short, but was forced at second when Jaronson hit to short. Nason followed with a two-bagger and Jarnason scored on Christy's hit over short. Holt was out third to first.

SECOND INNING

Warren—Albert Johnson got first by being hit by a pitched ball, and immediately stole second. Boardwick flyed to Nason. A. Johnson was out on Wassgren's hit to Holt. Johnson struck out.

Thief River—Lambert struck out. Flynn was out second to first, and Aasland out short to first.

THIRD INNING

Warren—Boardman was out short to first. Mattson fanned. Bakke got first on error by Holt, stole second, took third on Summer's hit to center and scored on Boardman's hit thru Nason. Johnson struck out.

Thief River—Doland was out pitcher to first. Johnstone was safe on hit over short. Courtney reached first on error by short and Johnstone got third. Courtney stole second. Johnstone scored on Nason's hit between short and third, and Courtney scored on Christy's hit to short. Nason scored on Holt's hit to third. Lambert was out second to first.

FOURTH INNING

Warren—Boardwick struck out. Wassgren was safe on hit to short and took second on passed ball. Johnson got first on balls and Boardman reached first on error by short. With the basses full Mattson struck out and Bakke was out third to first.

Thief River—Flynn and Aasland fanned, and Doland was out short to first.

FIFTH INNING

Warren—It was one, two, three and out.

Thief River—Johnstone flyed to left, Courtney hit the ball into the brush for a home-run, Nason was out second to first, and Christy out on fly to left.

Fourth of July Game.

July 4th the ball team went to Warren with the idea of again getting an easy victory. The final score was 15 to 12 in favor of Warren.

The high score shows that there was something radically wrong with both teams. The opposing clubs were very generous to each other and each tried to hand the game to the other.

The only explanation offered for such poor playing is that both teams had an "off, day." Everybody knows that the boys can play good ball, so here's hoping they'll do better next time.

ECHOES OF JUNE WEDDING BELLS

Two more Couple Made Happy. Brides are Both Locally Known Girls.

DOLAND—ROGERS

Last Monday evening, at the home of the bride's parents' Mr. and Mrs. George B. Doland occurred the marriage of Maysel E. Doland and Harry E. Rogers, Rev. J. Smith officiating.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few of the closest relatives and friends of the bride, those present being, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Doland, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Hornseth, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. John Collins.

A wedding supper was served in honor of the event.

The bride has grown to womanhood in this city and needs no introduction to the public here. The groom came here from Wisconsin and is one of the trusted employees of the Western Express Company. They will make their home in this city and have the best wishes of the entire community.

RANUM—OPSETH

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Opseth's Sunday June 25th when Benhard Ranum and Julia Opseth were united for life.

The ceremony was held in the Norwegian Lutheran church near Strip, Minn., where Rev. Bredeson tied the knot.

Those present from Thief River Falls were as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Nyhus; Mr. and Mrs. Berg; Mr. and Mrs. Remmem; Mr. and Mrs. Damsberg.

The bride has spent her past life near Strip and the groom has resided in Warren where he is well known. We wish them a long and happy life.

THE NEW FOURTH

The movement for a more patriotic expression of national sentiment on July 4th, gains force every year, and awakens approval even from those who are tolerant of the destructive hurly burly once universal.

At the same time, to make this civic birthday look good to the small boy, there must be something more than the solemn splurge of the Fourth of a generation ago, accounts of which you can find in the files of our older newspapers.

Of course the fathers used to have a jolly time with wrestling matches, barbecues of fat animals, and other exuberances. But when one reads the typical July 4th speech of about the year 1840 to 1850, it is clear that the patriotism of to-day is at least more intelligent.

But how the eagle did scream at those florid and redundant functions of our previous history.

According to the holiday oratory of those celebrations, the entire political wisdom and constructive statesmanship of the world was centered under the stars and stripes. We were a bumptious youth, and we used to proclaim the truths of statecraft to a waiting and awe struck world, much as the college graduate of to-day tells how the earth would cease this distressing creaking on its axis if it would but grease the bearings with the wisdom of newly fledged alumni.

As the youth grows more modest the farther away he gets from his college degree, so America takes its place i nthe sisterhood of nations with less aggressive self assertion. We believe we have the best government in the world, but we do not feel that it is always good manners to be proclaiming that fact in the ears of our neighbors.

The new Fourth and its oratory will look more to the future than to the past. If it tells of the deathless deeds of the patriots of old, it will be from no feeling of self satisfaction but merely to show the youth of to-day the standard that is set for their far up-hill climb.

The New Fourth will always be a day for young hearts. What if the fireworks do look a little pale to the blase eyes of age, if they stir the "Ohs" from the children, they make good. And first and foremost in the New Fourth must always be manly athletics, for the first step in patriotism is to place a sound normal body at the service of your country.

Thief River Anti-Saloon League Field Day Sun., July 9th.

Three of the representtives of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League will again visit our city. The League needs no introduction and the speakers are well known not only here but throughout the state and so far as oratory is concerned the public may feel assured that they can deliver the goods.

The questions to be discussed are live issues and everybody in this state should be interested whether he be friend or foe of the liquor traffic.

Your business, your family and your life are in the balance and it is a matter for you to decide. Come and listen to some of these addresses and they may help you reach your decision.

FARMERS MAY CO-OPERATE

Reservation Farmers may Build Electric Railway. Tired of Waiting.

Editor John T. Lattimore, of the "Eleven Towns," published at Erie, Pennington County, spent last night in the city attending to some business in connection with a contest case.

Editor Lattimore says it is some job to publish a paper 25 miles from a railroad, but that he is given splendid support by the farmers, and all are looking forward to a great future for that section of the country. The one drawback is the lack of transportation facilities, and while the Soo has general surveys made to give the service, nothing definite has been done. Mr. Lattimore says considerable figuring has been done, looking towards the construction of an electric road running from their country to Thief River Falls and thence possibly to Fargo.

He says the farmers will put up the cash for constructing the roadbed and laying the rails, and that after this much is done the road can easily be bonded to secure the equipment and the power can be secured at Thief River Falls. If this is done, a big farmer's elevator will be part of the plan.

Mr. Lattimore says the crops are magnificent there this year and that many new and desirable settlers are coming in, as land is still being sold at from 12 to $15 per acre, because of the distance from market.—Crookston Times.

A Good Show.

Stevens Point, Wis., June 2, 1911.
W. Smith,
Dear Sir:—

"The Flower of the Ranch" played my house June 29. We had splendid business and all were delighted. Many have told me that it was the best attraction that had ever played the town. They have a new production and the costumes are all new and very pretty. The chorus is good and the singing part of the show a decided feature. Mr. Flisher has asked me to write you my opinion and I have. It is the best show I have played and I'll have a return date in March when they return from the coast trip.

Yours truly,
A. W. Carle.

HOTTEST IN 41 YEARS.

Chicago reported the 5th day of July this year as the hottest day known in that city in the last forty one years. The heat was 99.8 degrees in the shade and hundreds of persons died on the street from the intense pressure. Think of that and then appreciate that you are living in northern Minnesota.

GOOD PRICE FOR POTATOES.

O. A. Flann one of our Newfolden subscribers was in the city on Monday and marketed 10 bushels of nice new potatoes raised on his fine farm. Mr. Flann received $24 for his potatoes and remarked with a smile that at that rate he would be able to furnish eatins for the family.

SCYTHE OF TIME SCORES THREE

Mrs. R. L. Muzzy, Emil E. Zeh, Jr., And Henry A. Wilson.

MRS. R. L. MUZZEY DEAD.

Last Wednesday after a long and trying illness Mrs. R. L. Muzzey answered to the call of the final summons.

The Muzzey's were among the early settlers in this locality and are well known thruout Marshall and Pennington counties.

Mrs. Muzzey was the mother of six children the oldest son, Nathanial Muzzey being a graduate of the local high school. All of whom together with Mr. Muzzy will miss the gentle caress and thoughful care of a patient mother and wife.

Mrs. Muzzy was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of this city and the funeral will be held from that church this afternoon at 2:30.

DROWNED.

Henry A. Wilson, 24 year old son of Charles M. Wilson residing at 223 Markley Ave. N., was drowned in the river below the dam last Monday afternoon at about five o'clock. He went in swimming alone and it was only when he failed to come home at night that fears were entertained for his safety. Next morning a search was made for him, which finally led to the clue that he had gone in swimming. His clothes were found on the bank and then the body was soon recovered. He had drowned in less than three feet of water, evidently being taken with cramps or a fainting spell, from which latter he used to suffer until the last two years. This was the first time he had entered the river this season, and it may have brought on the old trouble and left him helpless even in shallow water.

The funeral was held yesterday from the Presbyterian church of which deceased was a member, Rev. C. E. Boyden officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the Greenwood cemetery to await resurrection day.

He leaves to mourn him, a father and mother, sisters and brother, besides friends, all of whom have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

EMIL E. ZEH, JR. IS DEAD.

On Sunday of this week, grief came to the home of Philip J. and Mary Zeh of this city in the loss of their son Emil E. Zeh.

Of a family of six bright boys, Emil, the third oldest, was the first to answer the summons that will come to all of us.

At the age of nineteen years, just as cheerful boyhood was turning to the promise of a noble and useful manhood; respected by acquaintnces; at all times in the full enjoyment of the confidence of his associates and employers; beloved by those whose good fortune it was to be counted among his friends, he lingered for weeks and months upon a bed of pain without a word of complaint and met death with a smile, for he was a Christian.

"So his life has flowed
From its mysterious urn a sacred stream,
In whose calm depth the beautiful and pure
Alone are mirror'd."

His life was an honor to the parents who reared him and a help and inspiration to his brothers who survive him.

His example of cheerfulness, sobriety and uprightness is worthy of imitation by all young men.

We all miss Emil, and those nearest and dearest to him ought to find comfort in the knowledge that all who knew him mourn with them his untimely departure.

CONSOLIDATE THE SCHOOLS

The revenues of the State of Minnesota are now available to an extent never before equaled, in any state, for the upbuilding of rural schools. It is the purpose of the State, as manifested in the Holmberg and collateral laws, to offer to the boys and girls of the farms educational opportunities second to none that are enjoyed by the boys and girls of the towns. The country youths now growing up are to enjoy in actuality the larger beneficences of the State's magnificant school-fund, which those of preceding generations have enjoyed only in anticipation.

"Consolidation" is the key which is to unlock, far eariler than was dreamed of, the rich resources of the State, for the betterment of rural educational facilities. It comes by a natural process of evolution from the increased density of poulation and the improvement of the roads, coupled with the shrewder judgment born of a comparison of the results won by the well-equipped city graded schools as contrasted with those of the one-room country district school. Consolidation now offers, in the one hand, a building fund equal to one-fourth the cost of a building, unless a building costing more than $6000 is erected. Fifteen hundred dollars is the largest amount allowed toward a building. In the other hand, it offers a contribution of $1500 annually to the support of every consolidated school of four or more rooms. All this in addition to the regular apportionment from the State school fund, of about $5 per pupil annually.

The school thus aided must teach Agriculture, Manual Training and Home Economics; must observe certain requirements as to the qualifications of the teachers employed, and have the approval of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for their plans and equipment. None of these requirements is burdensome; rather, every one of them carries a beneficence. The load of taxation left to be assumed by the people of the consolidated district—including the cost of transporting pupils to and from their homes—is so slight that in many cases the change from the district to the consolidated plan will not be noticed through any pull at the pocket.

Districts which, with such a n opportunity inviting them to action, continue inert and indifferent, set themselves down as below the plane of Twentieth Century activities. A progressive Americanism should forthwith set the machinery of Consolidation at work in all the school districts of Minnesota.

INDUSTRIAL WORK FOR RURAL'S

Putnam Act Provides Funds For Association With T. R. F. High School.

Among the school laws passed by the recent legislature is one of striking interest to the school boards in the rural schools, and particularly to the schools in this section of northern Minnesota. It appears that any school of any nature, regardless of the length of its term or grade of its teacher, can associate with a "central" school under the well known Putnam act, for the introduction of the ordinary agriculture, industrial work and other special work taught in the central Putnam school.

This rural school so associating will receive an annual grant from the state of $50 in addition to all other state grants received by the school. The central school must be equipped with buildings, material, special teachers and everything necessary to present this special instruction.

The Thief River Falls High School is one of the Putnam schools and is, therefore, qualified to have other schools associate with it. The work is introduced into the rural associated school by the central superintendent and the special teachers, and it is supervised by them. They have no other authority in the rural school, however.

The state grants the central school $250 to aid in meeting the expense stated above and, of this amount, the rural school gets $50 for merely accepting the special work. The rural school is required to levy a two mill tax to aid itself in this work; but as this will be less than the $50 in nearly all school districts, the district will be money ahead and have the special work in addition.

It looks as though the farmers, in this instance, would get busy and have the necessary petition signed calling for the vote on the proposition as the schools first acting on the measure will get the coin, since there is not enough to go all around. The time to bring this matter to a focus is Saturday, July 8th, when the annual meeting of the school trustees will be held in the assembly room of the Lincoln High School, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

Notice is hereby given that the Annual Meeting of the qualified voters of Independent School District No. 18, Thief River Falls, Minn., will be held at the Central School Building, July 15th, 1911, at 7 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing two directors, to succeed Emil E. Zeh and C. C. Jackson, whose terms will expire, and to transact any other business that may come before the meeting. The polls will be open from 7 o'clock p. m., to 8 o'clock p. m., on the above mentioned date.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

A call has been issued for the School Trustees throughout the country to meet in the Assembly room of the Lincoln Building on next Saturday July 8th at 10 o'clock a. m.

As many changes have been made in the school laws it was thought necessary to have such a meeting. Able speakers from abroad will discuss various questions pertaining to our schools under these laws. We hope all school officers will be able to attend, as they are paid for the day spent and mileage.

The people of Thief River Falls anticipate a big meeting, and will try to entertain the visitors the best they know how. Let this first meeing ever held in Pennington County be a success.

Here is the program:

"THE SQUAW MANN" COMING.

The information that Geronimo, the blood-thirsty medicine man of the San Carlos Apaches was dead at Fort Sill, where he had been a prisoner of war, was hailed with delight by every resident of the southwest, who has not forgotten the Geronimo outbreak and the months of murder, rapine and outrage which terriorized the inhabitants from Colorado to the City of Mexico.

Just before this famous outbreak of the bloodthirsty and treacherous Apache, Tabywana head chief of the Colorado Utes went on the warpath for ponies, scalps, Mexican women and any other loot which might fall to his war party.

On the banks of Medicine Creek, Oklahoma, laden with spoil, many captives and a big band of ponies and a large herd of cattle, Tabywana crossed the trail of Geronimo's party. It was easy to tell from the moccasin tracks and the trail of the lodge poles that the party was the hereditary enemy of the Utes. Tabywana sent his captives to southern Colorado with an escort, and the balance of the outfit trailed the "snakes." Near Henrietta the Utes met Captain Lawton and his intrepid squadron of the Seventh Cavalry. The Utes joined forces with the troops and drove the Apaches far back into the mountains of Mexico where they surrendered. Edwin Milton Royle in drawing the charcter of the famous Ute Chief, has done so from life and the entire atmosphere of his Western drama "The Squaw Man" which Clarence Bennet and Company are presenting, breathes the days of the vanishing West. "The Squaw Man" will be given at the Auditorium on Wednesday night, July 12th.

who had been cast out of his tribe for daring to exhibit fidelity to an American officer who had befriended him some time before. To General Miles went this officer, and said that the Indian would attempt to reach the fort, provided General Miles would intrust him with a dispach. It was a case of Hobson's choice, for no one but an Indian could hope to get through. Tabywana started on the best pony that could be obtained, and he had not gone far when he was discovered and pursued by the Utes. Having failed to cut him off they set fire to the prairie, and the flames soon overtook the courier. In desperation he killed his pony, disembowelled it, crept inside the carcass and managed to remain alive until the fire passed by, and though he was terribly injured he crept to the fort, a distance of twenty miles, on his hands and knees. His hands had been burned to the bone where he had held the body of the pony together during the passage of the fire. It is this character that Mr. Edwin Milton Royle has immortalized in his play.

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Thief River Falls People Learn The Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first;

But when you know 'tis from the kidneys;

That serious kidney troubles follow;

That diabetes, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the statement of a Thief River Falls citizen.

Mrs. Louise Cerny, 318 Markley Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The statement I gave for publication three years ago, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills was correct in every detail. I gladly confirm it and add that I have had little kidney trouble since. This complaint bothered me for several years. At times I had backache and dull pains in my back and I was often nervous and weak. The kidney secretions were unnatural and my health was all run down. My supply of Doan's Kidney Pills was procured at Curtis' Drug Store and the good work they did, convinced me of their merits."

Here is the secret of their success. There is a baby born in the neighborhood. The attending physician gets $15. The editor gives the loud lunged youngster a great send off and gets $0. It is christened and the minister gets $5 and the editor gets $00. It grows and marries. The editor publishes another lond winded article and tells a dozen lies about "the beautiful bride," the minister gets $10 and a piece of cake. The editor gets $000 and the request to carry the groom's subscription account another year. In course of time she dies. The doctor gets from $10 to $1000, the minister gets another $5, the undertaker gets from $50 to $1000, the editor publishes a notice of death and an obituary two columns long, a lot of poetry and a card of thanks and gets $0000. No wonder so many country editors get rich.—Newfolden Riview.

RESOLUTIONS

We, the members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, of the 14 District of Minnesota, Assembled, Grateful for the Divine Guidance of our Heavenly Father, do consecrate ourselves anew to the principles, for which our organization stands. And we pray that right may triumph over wrong in the land we love.

We wish to express our appreciation of the efforts put forth by our District, and State officials, also the legislative members, who were instrumental in helping to pass any of the reform measures during the last session of the Legislature. We also find it advisable to emphasize the work in the following Department for the ensuing year.

Viz: Purity, L. F. L. Franchise, and Christian Citizenship.

We express our sincere thanks to all who participated in the Program; To the Presbyterian people for the use of their church; To the people of Thief River Falls, who have opened their homes for our entertainment and to all who helped in any way to make a success of the convention.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. Gulickson,
Chairman.

Sweet Mother Love.

A man awoke one night with a toothache.

He groaned, he turned and twisted, he howled, he sat up and lay down again. He arranged his pillow and pressed it against his face, with another groan.

His wife slept on and never moved.

He wanted attention, he wanted sympatthy, and he groaned again.

Still she slept.

Injury added to the pain; it wasn't treating a fellow right to sleep like that when he was suffering with a painful tooth, and he called her name.

Still she slept.

He had groaned three times as loud as he could, and she didn't awake.

Then the baby, in its crib in another room, sighed softly in its sleep.

The woman was on her feet and standing beside its crib, anxious eyed, in an instant.

"And I actually thought," said the man, "that she loved me most."—St. Louis Star.

National Purses.

The Englishman carries gold, silver and copper loose in his trousers pocket, pulls out a handful of mixed coins and selects the one he needs. The American carries his "wad of bills" in a long, narrow pocketbook in which the greenbacks lie flat. The Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics The German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen. The half civilized capitalist from a torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief, which he hides about his clothes. A similar course finds favor with the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings.—London

The Missionary a Puzzle.

To the untutored Chinamen the presence of the missionary is a puzzle. They simply cannot imagine human beings exiling themselves from their native land for the love of men on the other side of the globe. So they frame sundry theories to explain the thing to themselves. One theory is that the missionaries are secret political agents bent on gaining an influence over the Chinese and then swaying them to the advantage of their respective governments. Only of late have the natives come to realize that the strangers are not sent by their governments, but by religious groups. According to another theory, China is so excellent and renowned that the red haired barbarians come to live there for the mere pleasure of it. As for their self denying works of benevolence, these are supposed to be prompted by the desire to acquire merit.—Century.

Quite Likely.

"I wonder when the first surgical operation was performed."

"I suppose it was in Adam's time. When he had his fall he must have broken something."—New York Press.

Not His Air.

It was a very fashionable concert, and the artists were very well known ones, but the two young things were too busy with picking out their peculiarities to hear the music.

In the midst of a beautiful selection the pianist suddenly lifted his hands from the keys, and one of the young things was heard to say clearly:

"I wonder if that hair is his own?"

The old man who sat beside her was slightly deaf, but he turned with a benevolent smile.

"No, miss," he imparted pleasantly, "that is Schubert's."—Philadelphia Times.

A Friendly Tip.

"I'm going to keep on climbing until I reach the top of the ladder," said the candidate who had just been elected to a petty office.

"That's all right," rejoined the old politician, "but take my advice and keep an eye on the men at the bottom. They are the chaps who can upset the ladder."—Pittsburg Post.

THE "NIGGER TEACHER"

By WALTER B. HENDRICKS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Were you here when the war broke out?" I asked a citizen of Alabama during a visit to that state in 1868.

"Waal, yes, I reckon; war hyar about that time."

"Do you remember Cyrus Vandeveer?"

"Reckon I do remember Cyrus Vandeveer. Nobody who was hyar when he was hyar 'll forgit him, I reckon."

"Do they remember him kindly or unkindly?"

"They remember him mighty kindly about the time he went away, but when he first came down hyar they didn't take to him at all."

"What changed them? Tell me all about it."

"Well, suh, Cyrus Vandeveer was one of them abolitionists that didn't know enough to let the southern people alone to do what they liked with their niggers. At that time we didn't want our slaves to know too much, fo' if they did we would lose our property. Vandeveer set up a school fo' the blacks. Some of our most influential citizens went to him and protested. He said that he believed it to be his duty to teach 'em, and he proposed to go on with the wo'k.

"They went away and consulted, but they didn't say anything mo' to Vandeveer, who continued teachin' the niggers. That was just befo' the wah, and we was all gittin' mighty hot down hyar. Finally one night Vandeveer's schoolhouse was observed to be on fiah. The darkies ran fo' buckets to put water on it, but the committee stopped 'em, tellin' 'em they couldn't put on any water. Co'se the niggers was mighty cut up about this, and it made a heap o' trouble among 'em. The schoolhouse burned to the ground, and there was nothing left but a few charred timbers. Vandeveer wasn't nigh. He had gone to see a sick darky that had been one of his scholars and didn't get back till his schoolhouse was burned to ashes.

"That was a very dry season, there not having been any rain fo' months. After the fiah everybody went to bed. The wind rose, and—well, some s'pose it carried a spark, and some s'pose the spark got lodged in the shingles of the roof when the schoolhouse was burning. Anyhow, about 11 o'clock there was an ala'm o' fiah at Cunnel Woodbridge's house. The cunnel was playin' a game o' draw at Majo' Atwater's with Captain Sykes, Cunnel Thorpe and several other influential citizens. They had burned the schoolhouse and afterward gone to Majo' Atwater's fo' a julep and a game o' cyards. Cunnel Woodbridge sta'ted up when somebody rushed in and tole him his house was afiah, sayin' he had left his little gal tha' alone. The cunnel was a widower, with this little daughter, about twelve years old.

"By the time the poka' party got to the house the downstairs was burnin', and nobody could get upstairs. Little Mary Woodbridge ran to a windo' and, seein' her father below by the light o' the flames, stretched out her a'ms to him and cried out:

"'Papa, save me!'

"I was lookin' myself at the cunnel, and I neva' saw such an expression of agony on a man's face in my life. No one could get up to the child, fo' everything below was afiah.

"Just then a man come along and took in the situation. He was that cursed nigger teacher. He was young and active as a cat. There was a rusty lightning rod in a corner of the house runnin' up right to the window wha' the gal was. Vandeveer he tuk hold of it and shinned up to the window and reached out an arm. The gal tuk hold of it and swung down beside the abolitionist, who held on to the rod with the other hand.

"Waal, there he was. He couldn't come down hand ovah hand with only one hand, and he couldn't hold on long. Anyhow, it was gittin' hotter all the while, and he and the gal would burn to death. But he hung on. While he was tha the room wha' the child had been burst into a flame. It looked as if both of 'em must perish when some one come with a ladder and, puttin' it up to em, Cy dropped Mary on to it and she got down. Then Cy followed her.

"You just orter seen Cunnel Woodbridge when he got his daughter from the man whose schoolhouse he had helped to burn. And his burnin' the schoolhouse was what burned his own house, and if it hadn't been for Cy Vandeveer would a' burned Mary. The cunnel couldn't look the nigger teacher in the face. He just put out his hand and said nothin'.

"That was the night befo' Fo't Sumter was fired on, and the next mawnin' when they looked fo' Cyrus Vandeveer he wa'nt no whar to be found. They reckoned he'd lit out to the no'th to fight the south."

"What's become of Mary Woodbridge?" I asked.

"Oh, she's livin here with her aunt. She's grown up now. Lots o' young fellers want to marry her, but she says she's waitin' fo' that nigger teacher that saved her from burnin'."

"Where can I find her?"

"Over tha' in that white house." As I walked away he called: "Say, stranger, what do you want of her?"

"I'm the nigger teacher. I've been waiting for her too."

Good Guess.

"Yes," said the man who had made a good many millions by half wrecking railroads and then buying in the stock when he had caused it to drop to almost nothing. "I was mistaken for a burglar once."

"Is that so?" replied one who had bought at 80 and sold out at 18, "the fellow who did the mistaking must have been able to see pretty well in the dark."—Chicago Record-Herald.

JOSEPH CAILLAUX.

Former Minister of Finance Who Becomes French Premier.

NEW CABINET IN FRANCE

Caillaux's Selections Approved by President Fallieres.

Paris, June 29.—The new French cabinet has been definitely constituted and Joseph Caillaux, the premier, who succeeds M. Monis, presented his colleagues to President Fallieres, who signed the nomination decrees. The cabinet is composed as follows:

M. Caillaux, premier and minister of the interior; Jean Cruppi, justice; Justin G. Deselves, foreign affairs; L. L. Klotz, finance; Adolphe Messimy, war; Theophile Delcasse, marine; M. Augagneur, public works; M. Couyba, commerce; Jules Pams, agriculture; M. Lebrun, colonies; Renoult, labor.

INTENSE HEAT IS FATAL TO MANY

Forty-eight Victims in Chicago in Thirty-six Hours.

Chicago, July 4.—Chicago sweltered in its hottest day of 1911 and the hottest July 3 in the history of the weather bureau.

Following the hottest night ever experienced in Chicago the temperature climbed steadily and at 2:45 o'clock the thermometer in the weather bureau tower officially registered 99.5 degrees, while at the street level the temperature officially was recorded at 103 degrees.

Twelve deaths and one suicide brought the list of heat victims of the last thirty-six hours up to forty-eight, of which number twenty-eight were babies.

New York, July 4.—The siege of oppressive hot weather continues throughout New York state. In this city the maximum was 98.

Ten persons died from the heat, while the prostrations officially reported ran upward of a score.

At the Cornell weather station in Ithaca a temperature of 101 degrees, the highest since the station was established thirty years ago, was officially reported.

Boston, July 4.—All heat records of the weather bureau were shattered by the hot wave which encircled New England.

Beverly, the summer capital, sweltered in a temperature of 108 degrees.

Three deaths and more than fifty prostrations were reported in Boston and its suburbs alone, while scores of persons in other parts of New England were overcome.

Pittsburg, July 4.—Twelve deaths were reported for the day, six of these from exhaustion caused by the heat and six by drowning, while one woman was found wandering the streets demented.

STRIKE ENDS AT LIVERPOOL

Sailing Schedules to Be Resumed Immediately.

Liverpool, July 4.—The transatlantic steamship companies here and the striking seamen have reached a settlement satisfactory to all.

This ends the strike on all liners running out of Liverpool. Sailing schedules will be resumed at once.

At Hull, where many of the families of the strikers are on the verge of starvation, negotiations were resumed with prospects of settlement.

Kills Three and Himself.

Dubuque, Ia., July 4.—Leslie Miller, a prominent farmer at Devon, near New Hampton, Ia., murdered his wife and two of his children and then committed suicide. Domestic troubles are said to have been the cause of the tragedy.

Confederate General Dead.

Atlanta, Ga., July 4.—After lingering at death's door for nearly a month General Clement A. Evans, formerly commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, died here of Brights disease.

The Mother of the World.

Marriage is the mother of the world and preserves kingdoms and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their king, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interest of mankind, and is that state of good things in which God hath designed the present constitution of the world.—Jeremy Taylor.

GERMANY WILL COME INTO LINE

[illegible] Treaty With America [illegible] Be Drawn.

AMBASSADOR IS GOING HOME

When Count von Bernstorff Leaves Washington in the Near Future It Is Expected He Will Be Charged With a New Presentment of the Question That Will Insure Favorable Consideration.

Washington, July 4.—That Germany will not be far behind Great Britain in her acceptance of the principle of unrestricted arbitration of all issues, including those involving national honor, is regarded here as practically certain.

When Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, leaves for Berlin in the immediate future it is expected he will be charged with a new presentment of the question that will insure favorable consideration.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF.

DENEEN TO BE SUMMONED.

Illinois Executive Will Be Witness In Lorimer Inquiry.

Chicago, July 4.—Governor Deneen and several of his lieutenants will be subpoenaed within a day or two by a process server of the United States senate and commanded to appear before the senate committee on privileges and elections. The governor will be expected to tell what he knows of the conversation between himself and Edward Hines over the long distance telephone at the time of the election of Senator William Lorimer in 1909. Subpoenas for the governor and several of his intimates have already been issued.

A list of twenty new witnesses has been prepared and they will be called as soon as the hearing is reopened on July 13.

HURT IN GASOLINE BLAST

Two Men Probably Will Die as Result of Accident in Garage.

Butler, Pa., July 4.—A barrel of gasoline that lay in the hot sun all day exploded at a garage here, saturating the clothing of employes and patrons. The liquid spouted in the direction of a rubbish fire and in a twinkling there was fire everywhere. The men, with their clothing aflame, rushed from the garage that had already become a mass of flames. Charles Edfour, aged twenty-five, and Robert Leith, aged seventeen, garage employes, were probably fatally burned and three others, one of whom is former District Attorney Henninger, were seriously burned. All were taken to the hospital.

HEAT EXPLODES NITRO PLANT

Marietta, O., July 4.—Where the Marietta Torpedo company's nitroglycerin plant stood, three miles from this city, there is a hole in the ground big enough to put a dwelling.

Six hundred quarts of the explosive were set off by the excessive heat and the plant was blown to atoms. This city was considerably shaken. Many windows were shattered, including expensive stained glass ones in several churches. Three men were slightly injured.

Old Time Circus Clown Dies.

Winfield, Kan., July 4.—J. B. Agler, known better as "Tony Parker," reputed to be one of the oldest circus clowns in the United States, died at his home here, aged eighty-seven. He became a clown when ten years old and for fifty years pursued that calling without interruption.

Shoots Girl When Rejected.

Davenport, Ia., July 4.—Because she refused to marry him John Avangelos, a Greek, shot Clara Reeves Wagner, an American girl, through the mouth, while they were riding in the country. Then he shot and killed himself. The girl will probably recover.

Looking and Seeing.

There is much in knowing how to see sights. The discreet and skillful person when confronted with a variety of attractions will carefully select those that are for him the best and then will devise means to see them with the least wear and tear. But there are excitable people who set out to see everything, tire themselves out, see only half of anything and are dissatisfied in the end.

SECRETARY STIMSON.

Will Sail for Panama to Inspect the Canal Work.

HITCHCOCK ALONE ON JOB

Balance of Cabinet Away Over Fourth of July.

Washington, July 4.—Postmaster General Hitchcock held down the government lid, President Taft being away on his Indiana trip and all the other members of the official family spending the Fourth out of the capital.

For a time it was thought Secretary of Agriculture Wilson would be the only cabinet officer at the helm, but the postmaster general returned from the New England coast to share the responsibilities and to occupy the job alone, while Secretary Wilson spends the holiday with friends in the country.

Vice President and Mrs. Sherman are at their summer home in Utica, N. Y., for the Fourth; Secretary of State and Mrs. Knox are at their home in Valley Forge, Pa.; Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. MacVeagh have gone to Dublin, N. H.; Secretary of the Navy Meyer is on the New England coast and Attorney General Wickersham is spending a few days with his family at Cedarhurst. Secretary of War Stimson, who will sail Thursday for Panama to inspect canal work, left for his summer home at Huntington, L. I.

At the navy department Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining, chief of the ordnance bureau, is acting as secretary for the first time, all the officers ranking him being temporarily absent.

WILL DEMAND MORE TARIFF LEGISLATION

Progressives Will Insist Upon Revision of Certain Schedules.

Washington, July 4.—That progressive Republican senators will not be satisfied with the passage of only the wool revision and free list bills, after the final disposition of the Canadian reciprocity bill, but will demand other tariff legislation, was indicated in a statement by Senator Bristow of Kansas.

Mr. Bristow has had a number of conferences with the other progressives regarding their program.

He said he would never consent to the adjournment of congress until duties are reduced on trust controlled products, naming cottons, woolens, steel, sugar, lead, leather, rubber manufactures, etc. Amendments making such reduction he would attach to the reciprocity bill. Failing that he served notice that "some of us will insist that a bill or bills be passed reducing the duties on these articles before the adjournment of the present session."

GRASSHOPPERS IN CANADA

Provinces Near the Line Report Influx of the Pest.

Winnipeg, July 4.—Grasshoppers are said by farmers to have entered Canada during the past few days, doing damage to the wheat, oats and barley. The country along the border appears to be affected the worst. Black beetles also have appeared.

Reports from across the line indicate that there has been no damage from either hoppers or beetles there and the farmers are wondering where the pests came from.

May Return Squadron's Call.

St. Petersburg, July 4.—The ministry of marine is considering a plan to send a Russian squadron to America in 1913 to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the visit of the Russian squadron, under the command of Admiral Lyssovsky, to New York in 1863. The visit of 1913 would serve at the same time as a return of the call recently made at Cronstadt by the American battleships.

What Nothing Is.

If any man thinks that he can conceive well enough how there should be nothing, I will engage that what he means by nothing is as much something as anything that he ever thought of in his life, and I believe that if he knew what nothing was it would be intuitively evident to him that it could not be. Absolute nothing is the aggregate of all the contradictions in the world.—Jonathan Edwards.

SENATOR KENYON SAYS PERJURY

Intimates Prosecutions May Result From Lorimer Case.

EDWARD HINES ON THE STAND

Chicago Lumber Magnate Contradicts Evidence Given by Witnesses Who Preceded Him.

Washington, June 30.—Intimations that prosecution for perjury may grow out of the testimony of certain witnesses before the senate committee investigating Senator Lorimer's election and the declaration of Edward Hines of Chicago that Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company, far from being asked to contribute, had volunteered to help defray Senator Lorimer's election expenses startled the committee.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa stirred up the talk of perjury prosecution after Mr. Hines had contradicted several previous witnesses, but it remained for Mr. Hines to spring the real surprise of the day with his new version of the famous conversation with the International Harvester company official.

In telling his story of that much discussed talk with Clarence S. Funk at the Union League club at Chicago Mr. Hines said he was sitting in the club with Fred Carney of Marinette, Wis., Charles Hall of Sault Ste. Marie and Isaac Baker of Chicago. Mr. Funk approached and shook hands. The witness continued:

"He (Funk) said, 'I am very glad to hear of Mr. Lorimer's election to the senate.' I said I was glad to hear him say so. He said, 'I would like much to have you arrange to introduce me to Senator Lorimer. I have never met him.'

Would Like to Contribute.

"Then we walked over toward the entrance of the club and he said: 'I understand the senator must have been put to more or less expense for this senatorship and he ought not to stand it. The business interests ought to take it off his hands. We would like to contribute.'

"I said: 'I do not know anything about that. I will see about it and let you know.'"

All day Mr. Hines was on the stand and his examination was not concluded when the committee adjourned. His first testimony that attracted deep interest was his detailed account of how he said President Taft, former Senator Aldrich and Senator Penrose had him exert his influence to have Mr. Lorimer elected to the senate.

Hines said he never went to Mr. Funk's office to muddle his memory respecting the Union league conversation following the publication on Feb. 15 last of the Chicago Record-Herald editorial charging that a Lorimer fund of $100,000 had been raised.

Hines further denied the testimony of Wirt H. Cook of Duluth that he (Hines) had said over the telephone in talking with Springfield on the eve of Lorimer's election, that he would be down on the next train prepared to furnish all the money required.

EDWARD TILDEN ON STAND

Denies Knowledge of Bribery In the Lorimer Election.

Washington, June 29.—His methods of bookkeeping and his loyalty to the Democratic party alike were under fire when Edward Tilden, bank director, packing house manager and corporation man generally, appeared before the senate Lorimer committee to testify that he was in no way interested in the raising of a fund to elect Mr. Lorimer to the senate.

Attorneys for the committee, attorneys for Senator Lorimer and members of the committee itself asked Mr. Tilden, in almost every conceivable style of question, if he had anything to do, or knew of any one that had anything to do with the raising of a fund for Senator Lorimer, either before or after election. To each the witness said with emphasis that he did not.

TEN MEN CRUSHED TO DEATH

Dozen Others Injured in Collapse of Buffalo Pumping Station.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 1.—Ten men are dead, and a dozen are injured, several probably fatally, as the result of the collapse of the roof and other portions of the Buffalo water department's new pumping station on the lake front. It will probably be hours before those buried in the pumphouse can be reached. The city police are being aided in their rescue work by troops in the garrison nearby.

TO DISSOLVE TOBACCO TRUST

Thirty Days Supreme Court Allowed for Rehearing Passed.

Washington, June 30.—The supreme court of the United States issued an order to the attorney general directing him to instruct the lower courts to carry out the supreme court's decision providing for the dissolution of the American Tobacco company.

The time allowed the company to ask for a rehearing has expired.

HAPPY HOMES.

How happy home might be made but for foolish quarrels or misunderstandings! It is our own fault if we are querulous or ill humored, and it is easy by a tactful word to turn aside the ill humor of others. Bring smiles, not frowns, into the home.

No nation can be destroyed while it possesses a good home life.—J. G. Holland.

HERBERT KNOX SMITH.

His Report on United States Steel Corporation Made Public.

EXPRESS PROBE IS DECIDED ON

Interstate Commerce Commission So Decides.

Washington, July 2.—A sweeping investigation of all the express companies in the United States, affected by the interstate commerce laws, was ordered by the interstate commerce commission on its own motion.

Evidently, in anticipation of this action by the commission, practically all of the express companies, with the exception of the Long Island, filed new tariffs which are believed to be material reductions in rates. It was said that it would require several months to compare these rates with those now in existence.

More than a year ago the number of the leading commercial organizations of the country petitioned the commission for a general investigation into the rates and methods of the express companies, and in its order the commission says that the inquiry is ordered "to determine whether such rates, classifications, regulations or practices are unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, preferential or prejudicial, or otherwise in violation of the provisions of said act, and to determine the manner and method in which the business of the express companies is conducted."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1911.

Duty well done is noble, if properly advertised it is fame.

The past week was the noise week, the coming week will be the Show week.

Carrie Nation is dead. Some day our posterity will no doubt put her in the class with John Brown.

Thinking is a willful act as much as that of moving the hand. If your thoughts are not the right kind, change them. If you can't change them in your present position, change your position or your company.

It is the honest opinion of the editor that there will be enough people stay at home during the next year to make up for what the railroad companies expect to make on the three cent fare.

The reading of the Stillwater-Prison mirror is more edifying than the reading of some of the exchanges that come to our desk, especially those whose highest aim seems to be that of throwing mud at their fellows.

The three cent fare has again been saddled upon the poor class in this state. We say on the poor class as we understand that the railroad company are making preparations to sell milage books to those who can afford to buy them at a 2 cent rate. It does seem queer but it is a fact that the smaller a man is the harder he will be hit—by the corporations.

The exodus from Thief River Falls on the Fourth was largely to small country places close by. This condition was largely due to the 3 cent fare. A large part of our population had planned to go to Warroad and other citieshaving a celebration but when they found that the raise in the fare was a reality and not a joke a good many became indignant and stayed at home.

IS PROTECTION OBSOLETE?

Another American manufacturer proclaims himself against any more tariff protection. He is William C. Redfield of Brooklyn manufacturer of machinery, and he happens to be a member of congress. He stands with the International Harvester Co. on the proposition that America has outgrown the need of protection and can beat the rest of the world on equal terms.

Perhaps the tariff is on its way to join the "bloody shirt" and other issues in the limbo of the west.

Any man who doesn't think the soil in this locality is any good should take a tape line and a scale and proceed to measure some of the crops as they now stand. He will find hay, small grain and corn as fine as can be found anywhere while he will find potatoes, many of which weigh as high as 3 pounds each. If this is not good enough for us common mortals in the way of crops there is no use in looking for them anywhere on this mundane sphere.

SOCIALISM IN AMERICA

A banker traveling through North Dakota the other day emitted this prophecy: "The way things are going, this Country will be Socialist in a few years. See the way they are getting the votes. There's no stopping them."

Possibly bankers don't read election returns as closely as they scan notes. If this one had, he would have recognized what a wild statement he was making. There are from sixteen to eighteen million voters in America. Nine-tenths of them belong to parties avowedly opposed to socialism. There are less than a million Socialist votes in the whole country.

If the banker meant only to say that the Socialist propaganda would arrive in a few years, he was still a too sudden prophet. Socialists themselves make no claim of immediate "relief from the capitalist system." They look forward to an evolution from capitilism into socialism, not for a revolution. Read Victor Berger's speech in the House the other day. It clearly takes the ground that socialism is an evolution. His argument, briefly stated, is this:

Unbridled competition is gone. It was destroyed by the excessive tariff which showed the manufacturers the value of combination. The Socialist does not quarrel with the trusts. He does not want to destroy them. He considers them a part of the inevitable process of evolution from private to public control. The trusts now fix prices. He wants the Government to deal with the trusts, not by dissolving them, but by fixing prices for them. This he considers the next step. In this he agrees with Judge Gary of the United States Steel Company. Complete ownership is the final solution.

The Socialists, Mr. Berger adds, consider that the individuals are fighting a hopeless fight, when they attempt to force men to compete who do not want to compete, and who have learned not to compete. It is a hopeful fight in their judgment to attempt, first, the National regulation, and finally the complete ownership of these great concerns.

Mr. Berger's statement of socialism as applied to America shows that it is an evolutionary doctrine which contemplates a long period of education and of gradual absorption. Why, then, should a representative of such an intelligent class as the bankers go about breathing prophecies of a red Socialist revolution?—Minneapolis Journal.

It is true that socialism is an evolutionary doctrine which contemplates a long period of education but we must consider that this period of education has been going on for at least two thousand years and just how soon it will bear fruit is rather hard to tell, but it is certain that the more the big city papers sell their influence to capital and the more capital continues to rule with their present highhand system, the sooner and the surer it will come.

WHAT TO DO WITH WASTE MEN.

"What we have lost without we must win back with in," Capt. Enrico Mylius Dalgas told his countrymen of Denmark in 1864, after Prussia and Austria had taken their most valuable provinces.

He referred to the vast heath which covered the Jutland peninsula. In 40 years it has been converted from waste to garden and forest, enriching Denmark by countless millions, and changing both the climate and the social condition of the country.

It is one of the world's great lessons in conservation, and an example of what may be accomplished by the influence of a single individual. Who would not rather be Dalgas than a Rockfeller? Two lessons America may learn from this conquering of the Danes:

First, the value of waste lands. Second, the value of waste men, for the Danish Heath society has accomplished its results largely by the employment of convict labor.

So long as there is an acre of reclaimable land in the United States, why should there be a single able-bodied man idling his life away in a prison cell? Denmark has proved that the convict employed outdoors at a creative task is not only a better man, but a better prisoner than the one confined between four walls.

There is not one state in the Union where convict labor could not be usefully employed in restoring exhausted or abandoned land to fertility, planting forests, draining swamps or watering deserts. The practical objections that naturally arise in one's mind are conclusively answered by Denmark's experience.

There is no competition with union labor, and the best of it is that the waste man is frequently reclaimed along with the waste land.

WHAT A MORTGAGE WILL DO FOR YOU.

A mortgage is a strange institution. It makes a man rustle, and it keeps him poor. It is a strong incentive to action; and a wholesome reminder of the fleeting months and years says an exchange. A mortgage represents industry, because it is never idle and never rests. It is like a bosom friend because the greater adversity the closer it sticks to a fellow. It is like a soldier it never hesitates in charging or fears to close on an enemy. It is like a sandbag of a thug; silent in its application, but deadly in its effect. Like the very hand of providence it is spread over all creation, and its influence is everywhere visible. It is like the grasp of a devil fish; the longer it holds the greater its strength. It will exercise feeling, energy and hard activity to the sluggish brain. No matter how hard the debtor works, the mortgage works harder still. It makes a fellow sour, cross, selfish, unsociable and miserable and it rarely does him any good except to exercise him.

MUCK-RAKING THE MAGAZINES.

The attempt of the government to dissolve an alleged combination of a score or more magazine publishers will create a national smile audible from one ocean to the other.

The defendant magazines will probably say that these proceedings are retaliatory for their muck-raking campaign, a clever piece of strategy to deposit critics of government in a deep hole.

Few would deny that the magazines named in this complaint and other like publications have performed a magnificent service in arousing public attention to the dishonest league between big business and higher up politics. For all that certain methods frequently used by the muck-rakers are means that would bring a country or city newspaper into instant disrepute.

A certain halo of successful literary achievement surrounds some scores of well known writers, engaged for the past five years in this work of national house cleaning, offensive to the nostrils and stomach, but needful for the public health.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THOSE INTERESTED.

We enclose a circular of facts, excluding knocking, ill feeling, or personal attempts to discredit our former Agency or its chief management. (J. P. Brandt).

The Agency was organized and established in 1907 by J. P. Brandt with Quam as operator, our backing was general good and we brought good results; as business increased Brandt turned first reckless, after while became crooked and finally grafted until he was forced to change locality, Chicago which is his Headquarters at this present time.

andt's files containing Affidavits, correspondence, bills contracts, etc., are the facts we have to show for ourselves.

In the early days Dec. 1906 Brandt charged the I. O. G. T. $75. for work we did in their behalf, it was agreed between Brandt and Quam to donate for the cause all service except actual expenses. We were both members of the I. O. G. T. he took the credit and all the money the elp was never paid, nor the operators expenses covered.

January 1908 Brandt, with two of his men Johnson and Schoenrock, conducted some cases in Duluth, Minn., Court records and an affidavit will show they, under oath give Schoenrocks name as Ward so to conceal other scandals.

In Aug. 1909 his man Johnson was arrested for accepting a bribe in Bovey, Minn., and put in jail, two more men T. Gilmore and L. H. Gilmore sold out John Stratman's case at Skakopee, Minn December 6.-10 1909 Brandt attempted to sell one half of business to both L. H. Gilmore and Johnson, lack of means barred the deal, November 1909, Brandt sold to Quam for $1,000. Brandt over drew about $570, in August then he on the sly in secret without my consent or knowledge and unlawfully sold to said Johnson, Quam's business for $750, skipped out, changed heading and advertised again, those endorsing him are unaware of the facts yet, details will be furnished on request.

Yours, very truly,
Sig. Quam,
Gen. Mgr. N. U. D. A.

Did He Get Off?

The famous Liddell, who, with Scott compiled Liddell and Scott's lexicon, was dean of Christchurch college, Oxford. It was whispered in regard to the lexicon that Liddell provided the money and Scott the brains. A young undergraduate was haled before the dean for some misdemeanor. "I hear, Mr. ——, that you have a pretty wit for impromptu verse," said the dean. "If you will write one on the lexicon I will let you off." The young man thought a moment and then said:

"There's a lexicon written by Liddell and Scott.
Some of it's good, and some of it's not.
The part that is good was written by Scott.
The part that was written by Liddell is rot."

Hardly.

"The old, old story!" exclaimed the husband, with a long drawn sigh, as he laid down his paper. "Another man committed suicide because his home was unhappy."

"And did that make his home any happier," asked his wife, "or doesn't the paper say?"

Long Engagements.

Young Man—Do you believe in long engagements, sir? Cynical Benedick—Certainly, my young friend, certainly! The longer the engagement the shorter the marriage!

The King's Way.

It was characteristic of the late King Edward VII. that he never showed too much or too little courtesy, but just enough to maintain his reputation of being the most gracious gentleman of Europe. Some years ago, according to the author of "The People's King," his majesty visited Aberdeen and knighted the lord provost. At the luncheon which followed the king sat next to Mrs. Lyon, the wife of the lord provost, and noticed on the table the card denoting her place.

"I must alter this," the king said smiling on the lady.

With his pencil he effaced the word Mrs. and in its place substituted Lady and graciously handed the card to his newly made ladyship.

Considerate.

A bright and breezy musical comedy is coming to the Auditorium Monday, July 10th. It is "The Flower of the Ranch," by Joseph E. Howard. In writing this charming musical play Howard seemed to scorn the tropical lands and impossible situations dear to the average lover of comic opera, and turned to the far West for a setting; the result being a piece which has delighted metropolitan audiences for fifty weeks at a time and is meeting with equal success "on the road. An excellent company of forty people present this latest success with elaborate stage settings and effects.

WARS.

Wherever there is war there must be injustice on one side or on both. There have been wars which were little more than trials of strength between friendly nations and in which the injustice was not to each other, but to the God who gave them life. But in a malignant war there is injustice of ignobler kind, at once to God and man which must be stemmed for both their sakes.—John Ruskin.

When Cricket Playing Was a Crime.

Until a century and a half ago our great national pastime in fact figured in the statute book as a crime. The game was declared illegal in the time of Edward IV., owing to its having become so popular as to interfere with archery, the then sport of kings. The law against it was vigorously enforced, and every person convicted of playing the game was fined £10 or sent to prison. It was not until the formation of the famous Hambledon club in 1749 that the statute was repealed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Little Risky.

Suppose your wife—it is a wild supposition, of course, but let us just imagine it for once—set up her own judgment against yours in some vital matter. Try this way out of the difficulty. Say to her:

"My dear, you know that my judgment is above criticism, for I had the inspired wisdom to select you from among the many, but you, on the other hand, cannot place absolute reliance upon your judgment if, after accepting me, you find yourself wavering as to your confidence in my ability to direct our ways."

You will readily see that a wife in wisdom cannot protest against such a diplomatic assertion of domestic leadership.

Sunday in Old Scotland.

Looking out of the window used to be an indictable offense on the Sabbath, the London Chronicle says. In 1709 the kirk session of Edinburgh, "taking into consideration that the Lord's day is profaned by people standing in the streets, vaguing in the fields and gardens, as also by idly gazing out of windows, it is ordered that each session take its turn to watch the streets on Sabbath and to visit each suspected house in each parish by elders and deacons with beadle and officers and after sermon, when the day is long, to pass through the streets and to reprove such as transgress and inform on such as do not refrain.

"THE SQUAW MAN."

In "The Squaw Man" which comes to the Auditorium Wednesday night July 12, Edwin Milton Royle has written a drama in which there is much stirring incident, and has mingled the tragic and lighter shades of life in the right proportions. The play tells a story that is full of throbbing interest that often becomes intense. Its glimpse of English life in the upper circles is followed by a picture of ranch life in the West that is breezy and natural. Its action is spirited, without being overdrawn, and generally its lines are meaty, and nowhere does it become "talky" or tame. Much of its incidents are new, and in theme and treatment it is far above many of the latter day successes, so far as morality is concerned. The leading role of "The Squaw Man" is admirably suited to Mr. Dill, and there is every indication of the part being one of his greatest successes. Clarence Bennett and Company, the managers of the enterprise, have given Mr. Dill an exceptionally strong supporting company.

Diana of Ephesus.

Ephesus was one of the twelve Ionic cities of Asia Minor and was situated in Lydia, near the mouth of the river Caystrus. According to Strabo, it was founded by Androclus, son of Codrus. It ultimately came into possession of the Romans, and in the time of Augustus it was the greatest place of trade of all the cities of Asia west of the Taurus. St. Paul resided there three years, but the destruction of its great temple by the Goths in 260 A. D. gave it a blow from which it never recovered. This was the famous temple of Diana. Near the western extremity of the town are still to be seen some massive structures, which have since 1868 been carefully excavated. It is now certain that these stand on the famous temple site.

A Famous Windmill.

Nantucket possesses what is believed to be the oldest windmill for grinding grain in actual operation in America. Nathan Wilbur, a Nantucket sailor, who had seen the busy windmills of Holland as he sailed abroad, built it out of timbers of wrecked ships in 1746. There has never been a day in all the 165 years since that time when the mill has not been busy. There is always a wind to turn its outstretched wings.

"I was. I was thinking of the installment man."—Pittsburg Post.

Magnitude of a Million.

In some public schools where large halls are available an effort has been made to realize the meaning of a million. They secure 100 large sheets of paper, each about four feet six inches square, ruled in quarter inch squares. In each alternate square a round black wafer or circle is placed, a little overlapping the square, thus leaving an equal amount of white space between the black spots. At each tenth spot a double width is left so as to separate each hundred spots, ten by ten. Each sheet then holds 10,000 spots, each horizontal or vertical row containing 1,000. One hundred such sheets contain, of course, a million spots, and they would occupy a space 450 feet long in one row or ninety feet long in five rows, so that they would entirely cover the walls of a room about thirty feet square and twenty-five feet high from floor to ceiling, allowing space for doors, but not for windows. The Bible from Genesis to Revelation is supposed to contain 3,500,000 letters. If every letter in the Bible were a dollar it would about half build a battleship.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Icebergs.

The disposition of icebergs to turn turtle is one of their most dangerous propensities. It arises from several causes. When they start out from Greenland their bottoms are heavy with the detritus gathered in their glacial period, and this drops off at intervals as they move south, causing their center of gravity to change and the berg to assume new positions.

A Little Way Off.

Tommy—What does the paper mean by calling Mr Buggbaus an eight by ten business man? T.'s Father—I presume it means he is not exactly square.

Fort and Fortress.

Wife—Is there any difference between a fort and a fortress? Husband—Not much, except that a fortress must be harder to silence.

The "Ear of Dionysius."

A cunningly constructed prison cavern, consisting of a large chamber connected with one of smaller dimensions situated near Syracuse, Italy, has gone into legendary history with the title of the "Ear of Dionysius." The smaller chamber was unknown to the prisoners kept in this underground dungeon, and the tyrant by whose name it is known had a habit of secreting himself there to listen to the conversation of the convicts, who were mostly political offenders. An ingenious device constructed at the smaller end of the larger chamber transmitted the sounds through the partition, thus enabling the suspicious ruler to hear even the whispered conversations of his suspects.

"THE SQUAW MAN".

Few persons of the thousands who have seen "The Squaw Man," in which Clarence Bennett and Company, Geo. Dill will be seen at the Auditorium, Wednesday night, July 12th, have stopped to think that the Indian Chieftian, Tabywana, who is presented with such startling fidelity in the play, is but the theatrical representative of a famous character that lived and died during the Ute campaign in which General Nelson A. Miles figured some years ago. The name of this Indian has been retained, for it is one that should live in history. During the active campaign against the Utes, General Miles found himself penned up in a river bottom and surrounded by hordes of Indians. Seven couriers he had sent out had been captured and killed by the enemy, and the situation looked positively hopeless unless some word could be sent to the fort, fifty miles distant.

KILL MORE THAN WILD BEASTS

The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back, if not satisfied. Only 50c at All Druggists.

ESCAPED WITH HIS LIFE

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes, H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctors in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure. WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Charles Lamb's Excuse.

Leadenhall street, London, was for many years the scene of the daily labors of Charles Lamb. That Lamb, despite his many complaints, appears to have had a fairly easy time at the East India house is evident from a story told by Algernon Black in Macmillan's Magazine for February, 1879. One morning he "was observed to enter the office hastily and in an excited manner, assumed [illegible] for the occasion to leave by an opposite door. He appeared no more that day. He stated the next morning in explanation that as he was passing through Leadenhall market on his way to the office he accidentally trod on a butcher's heel. '[illegible],' said Lamb, to the butcher [illegible] ed: 'Yes, [illegible] my [illegible]' seizing his knife [illegible] you!'

"Lamb fled from the butcher and, in dread of his pursuit, dared not remain for the rest of the day at the India house. This story was accepted as a humorous excuse for taking a holiday without leave."

Superstitions of Scalping.

Indians believe that scalping is annihilation of the soul; hence the eagerness of the Indian to secure the scalp of his enemy and save his own scalp. Deprived of the scalp the body becomes mere carrion, not even worthy of burial. "Whether or not its removal annihilates a soul," says General Dodge, author of "Our Wild Indians," "the Indian is yet sure that a scalp is 'strong medicine' and equally sure that its taking by him will involve consequences to him either very good or very bad, and he does not always know which. An Indian will never take the scalp of a colored soldier, nor does he give any reason for it; all to be got out of him by way of explanation is, 'Buffalo soldier no good; heap bad medicine.' Whatever the special religious opinion of each Indian in regard to taking the scalps of slain enemies, I have never yet known a single case where the scalp of a suicide was stripped off, and in many cases the superstition is so strong as to prevent the Indians even from touching the body."

His System.

"Percy," said his father sorrowfully, "Percy, you have been fighting again."

"Yes, father," said Percy.

"And you have lost the fight, Percy. That is worse than anything. When I was a boy, Percy, I always won. I had a system by which I always contrived to get in the first blow."

"I did that, father."

"Well, you did it badly. By my system I always hit the boy fairly on the point of the jaw. My system never failed."

"Yes, father, but suppose when you hit the boy on the point of his jaw he fell into a pile of bricks and got up with a brick in each hand, how would you have continued your system when you were a boy?"

"Percy," said his father, "you seem to have a quarrelsome disposition. Let your defeat be a lesson to you. Now run away and play."—Pearson's.

Nature's Rifle Bullets.

What man has learned by dint of thought and experiment some of the lower animals appear to know through instinct. An instance is furnished by what is called the "spiral swimming" of certain organisms, such as the spherical shaped volvox and several elongated infusorians. As these revolve about the axis of progression in the manner of a projectile fired from a rifled gun, the consequence is that they are able to travel in a straight line, as they could not do otherwise, the revolution compensating with absolute precision for any tendency to deviate from a straight course. Without such a device many of these minute creatures would simply describe circles, making no forward progress.

Guarding Its Own Goods.

Honesty, in its purpose, looks but little outside of itself; honor generously aims to deserve the good opinion of the best, finding keener anguish in the moral stain or blemish than in grievous bodily wounds. Honesty guards its own goods, and loves self interest, while it gallantly protects the weak, relieves the oppressed from the grasp of cruel force, redresses the injuries of others or defends its own pure dignity.—Albert Mathews.

Art Enthusiasm.

"Does the public of Crimson Gulch remember my previous visit?" asked Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"It does," replied Broncho Bob.

"And is it waiting to receive me with open arms?"

"Not exactly open arms. It looks more like a case of concealed weapons."—Washington Star.

Good Impulses.

A mere good impulse that does not result in good works is rather worse than useless, for if not carried out in deed it has a reaction instead of an action as its outcome.

Settled.

Father—I don't think much of that young Sinkins who calls to see you. Daughter—Never mind, father. I think enough of him for both of us!

Nothing.

Binks—Where I spent Christmas last year the thermometer dropped to zero. Jinks—That's nothing. Binks—What's nothing? Jinks—Why, zero!

The Watch Below.

Those whose privilege it may be to inspect a liner or other large passenger ship will be wise to leave their watches at home, says the Sheffield Telegraph. This may sound strange. There is no fear of losing their watches, but they may find their watches lose, all the same, and very considerably too. In the engine room, where the electric dynamo is at work, the air is so powerfully charged with electricity as to affect any watch, even when carried in the pocket and not actually close to the dynamo. Engineers invariably leave their watches in their room, never, except by accident, carrying them below.

An engineer wishing to demonstrate the wondrous power of the dynamo held an iron hammer in his hand some inches from it. The dynamo drew this hammer from his hand with a clang as a magnet would a needle. Doubtless many persons who have gone below at some time or other have subsequently wondered how their watches have become "deranged," ignorant of the fact that it was done by electricity, which plays havoc with the delicate mechanism of a watch.

Rossetti and His China.

Ford Madox Hueffer tells in "Memories and Impressions" a story of Rossetti and his china collecting. A certain potter had acquired a valuable set of Chinese [illegible] things of which he had duplicates made in his pottery. Then he got an agent to sell the imitations to Rossetti for a large sum.

"Coming to tea the next day," relates Mr. Hueffer, "he remarked to Rossetti, 'Hello, Gabriel, where did you get those clumsy imitations?' And eventually he sold the originals to Rossetti for a figure considerably over that at which Rossetti had bought the forgeries. At each visit thereafter he brought one of the forged cups in his pocket, and while Rossetti's back was turned substituted the forgery for one of the genuine cups. At the end of the series of visits, therefore, Rossetti once more possessed the copies and the potter the genuine set, which he sold, I believe, to M. Tissot."

AN ARMY LOVE AFFAIR

By JOHN ADAMSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The United States army and navy, which used to be very aristocratic institutions, are, like everything else, becoming democratic. The old army before the civil war was like one family—that is, the officers and their wives and children constituted one select social circle. Recently there have been several episodes to indicate that the old spirit is dying, but dying hard. The following story illustrates this:

I was graduated at West Point at twenty, and I don't know a more dangerous age than that for a young officer. His pay enables him to marry. He has seen nothing of the world and nothing of the opposite sex except for a couple of months each summer for two years during the encampment season while he was a cadet. Released from a confining life, he is ready to fall in love with the first girl he meets.

I was graduated in the engineers, and the first job I was given by the government was making an estimate on certain intended repairs on a fort on the Atlantic coast in a southern state. The fort had not been kept up, having been left in charge of an ordnance sergeant, but in view of a feeling on the part of the people of the United States that our coast defenses needed strengthening the government decided to look into the matter.

Fort L. was situated on a point of land extending into the ocean and as lonely as a lighthouse. For a few months in the spring the neighborhood was a resort for northern persons, chiefly invalids, there being several hotels on the beach. I was sent to the fort in October. When I first saw the old pile with its empty casements and empty quarters I shuddered at being obliged to pass some time there.

The sergeant made me as comfortable as he could in a casement, his wife taking pains that it should be clean, and my bed was provided with snow white linen.

And now comes the point of my story: The couple had a daughter seventeen years old. What could I do? What did I do but make love to her. I knew perfectly well that there is a barrier in the army between the families of commissioned and noncommissioned officers. I knew furthermore that Mary Converse was getting no education and had never mingled with the class of people to whom I was used. If I married her it would place her out of her element and she would be a lifelong drag on me.

But here was I in the springtime of life, shut up with a girl in a fortress and no other associate. I doubt if any precaution would have availed. She was situated just as I was, shut up with a young soldier, and could no more resist a natural drift toward me than I toward her.

Before leaving I asked Mary Converse to be my wife. I knew I was wronging her and myself in doing so, but I had conceived high notions of honor at West Point and considered myself pledged to her. At her age, and being one of those feminine girls who when they love love hard, I believed that if I deserted her it would wreck her life. So I went away engaged, well knowing that if I did not desert her both our lives would be wrecked.

My first visit to my fiancee was in the following spring. The hotels on the beach were now open, and I took up my quarters in one of them. Some seven months only had elapsed, and Mary was not much changed. I felt the same toward her as before. The reasons I attributed this to are that it was a case of young and innocent love, and Mary was a superior girl. She was bright, she had what we call character, and she was pretty.

At the hotel I met a Mrs. Boyington the wife of an army officer, who conceived a marked friendship for me. She was twenty years my senior, and I craved some one on whom to bestow my confidence. So I told her of my affair.

"It must be broken off," said the lady, "both on your account and the girl's."

"She will not be able to endure it without serious consequences," I replied.

Our talk ended in the lady's going to see my betrothed. On her return she handed me a note from Mary badly written, misspelled and blotted with tears, in which she said that Mrs. Boyington had convinced her that she would harm me and herself by marrying me and she released me.

I was so far attached to her that I spent some time making up my mind to accept the release.

After that I met many young ladies, but none of them pleased me. I was preoccupied with my first love. Indeed, I did not propose to replace her. Since the difference in our stations prevented our marriage I would marry no one. At intervals I met Mrs. Boyington, to whom I told my feelings.

"Don't talk that way at your age," she replied. "You'll surely find some one you can love."

Six years later Mrs. Boyington and I met at the same station. She asked me to dine with her, and whom should I meet at her quarters but Mary Converse, but not, so far as education and manners were concerned, the simple Mary Converse of years before. Mrs. Boyington had educated her and given her many social advantages.

She had been as true to me as I had been to her, and before we parted our engagement was renewed.

The Weather.

His Lesson.

"Perhaps, with a few lessons I could learn."—Exchange.

PARTIAL REPORT ON STEEL TRUST

Findings of Herbert Knox Smith Are Made Public.

MAKES NO RECOMMENDATIONS

Declares Restriction of Competition Was Prime Object in Organization of Steel Corporation.

Washington, July 1.—The long expected and much discussed report from the bureau of corporations on the United States Steel corporation, recently submitted to President Taft, was made public here.

Signed by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, the report makes no recommendations and is almost wholly narrative in form.

Mr. Smith declares that restriction of competition was a prime object of the organization of the steel corporation, or so called "trust."

Capitalized at $1,402,000,000 the corporation, he asserts, had tangible property worth only $682,000,000. By a constant reinvestment of earnings, however, the report points out, much of the "water" in the company has been eliminated.

The steel corporation now owns 75 per cent of the lake ores, having recently concentrated its efforts to securing these properties. On this point the report says:

"Indeed, in so far as the steel corporation's position in entire iron and steel industries is of monopolistic character, it is chiefly through its control of ore holdings and the transportation of ore."

In his letter of submittal to the president the commissioner covers in condensed style practically every feature of the report.

The principal features of Commissioner Smith's report on the steel industry are:

Features of the Report.

The marked development of consolidation, culminating in the organization of the United States Steel corporation.

Capitalization by the United States Steel corporation far in excess of property values. The bureau's valuation of the tangible assets in 1901 is $682,000,000, as against $1,400,000,000 of issued securities.

An analysis of the cost of the subsequent additions to the property of the corporation, showing a total investment in tangible property on Dec. 31, 1910, of $1,187,000,000, as against $1,468,000,000 outstanding securities.

An average rate of profit from 1901 to 1910 on the corporation's actual investment, as computed by the bureau, of 12 per cent.

An almost continuous decrease in the corporation's proportion of the output of principal steel products, but a marked increase in its ownership or control of iron ore deposits.

The bureau places the value of the ore reserves of the corporation at $100,000,000, while the corporation itself places their value at $700,000,000.

To prevent ore from falling into the hands of independent producers or to prevent the Hill interests from founding a rival steel business the corporation granted to the Great Northern road the Hill leases which guarantee the largest royalties ever known in the ore business.

The corporation controls 75 per cent of the available ore and because of this and its control of the transportation facilities in the ore district occupies a commanding position in the steel industry.

A Dog's Age.

The age of dogs ranges from twelve to fourteen years when they receive proper care.

PROMINENT MEN MENTIONED

New York Grand Jury Indicts Wire Trust Officials.

New York, June 30.—Nine indictments charging restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law were returned by a federal grand jury here against as many associations and a long list of individuals comprising the "wire trust," affiliated with the steel industry.

Prominent among the defendants are Herbert L. Satterlee, a son-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan; William P. Palmer, president of the American Steel and Wire company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, and Frank Jay Gould of New York, president of the Old Dominion Iron and Nail Works company.

"What this suit charges," said District Attorney Wise, "is a trade agreement in restraint of trade. The government does not seek to establish a physical or fiscal merger of the properties or interests indicted, but a series of pools to maintain prices and apportion territory, in elimination of competition and so in violation of the Sherman act."

BANKS CEASING OPPOSITION

Accepting Establishment of Postal Savings Depositories.

Washington, July 4.—In announcing the addition of fifty more postal savings depositories, situated in thirty-two states, Postmaster General Hitchcock noted that the opposition of banking institutions to the establishment of these depositories had almost completely disappeared.

Morphine and Morality.

Morphine stands unequaled as a perverter of the moral sense. Whisky may disturb the imagination and judgment, causing many foolish and unwise actions to follow its use, but morphine strikes deeper and creates a person whom the father of lies must recognize as kindred to himself. Stories that are the creation of a disturbed brain, told in a manner to appear so intrinsically true that the stories become works of art, are what you will obtain from the habitual user of morphine or cocaine. I know of nothing that will appeal to one of these sufficiently to enable you to get an honest reply to any question of moment you may address to him. If you should receive a truthful reply it will be by accident.—North American Journal of Homeopathy.

A Tale of Two Hairs.

Of the dandy D'Orsay's not very brilliant "wit" this is from Feinmouth's biography: "The company were lounging about the fireplace when a singularly tactless gentleman of the name of Powell crept up behind the count and, twitching suddenly a hair out of the back of his head, exclaimed: 'Excuse me, count; one solitary white hair!' D'Orsay contrived to conceal his annoyance, but bided his time. Very soon he found his chance and, approaching Mr. Powell, he deliberately plucked a hair from his head, exclaiming, 'Parrdon, Pow-ell; one solitary black 'air!'"

Bee's Double Stomach.

The bee has two distinct stomachs. In the first it stores away the honey it so industriously gathers up from the flowers until such time as it is ready to yield it up, while the other stomach is used simply and solely for digestion purposes. Thus the food and the honey are never mixed. When the bee returns to the hive and is ready to deposit the honey it has gathered it contracts the muscles of the stomach, by which act the honey is ejected through the mouth. As to bee food, it is various in kind, consisting largely of the honey it so patiently makes for others.

Good Sailing.

Jack—Once more, Molly, will you marry me? Village Belle—For the thirteenth time this hour I tell you I will not. Jack—Well, thirteen knots an hour ain't bad sailin' for a little craft like you.—London Tit-Bits.

NOTICE FOR HEARING.

NOTICE OF HEARING upon application to vacate certain alleys in the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

WHEREAS, A duly verified petition has been filed with the City Clerk of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, praying for the vacation of the alley running from Conley Avenue to the right of way of the Minneapolis St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie Railroad Company in block twentl-four in Red Lake Rapids Now a part of the City of Thief River Falls, and the alley at the rear of lots 18, 19, 20 and 21 and along the west line of lot K in said block 24, on the ground that said alleys are no longer of public utility, and said petition having been signed by a majority of the owners abutting upon said alleys.

GUN COTTON.

A Peculiar Characteristic of This Terrible Explosive.

Many and odd are the materials entering into the manufacture of modern explosives, but perhaps the most interesting of all these elements of destruction as well as the simplest is gun cotton. The gun cotton manufacturing industry is large, as enormous quantities are used in the charging of torpedoes and for similar purposes.

The base of gun cotton is pure raw cotton or even cotton waste, such as is used to clean machinery. This is steeped in a solution of one part of nitric and three parts of sulphuric acid. It is the former ingredient that renders the mass explosive, the sulphuric acid being used merely to absorb all moisture, thus permitting the nitric acid to combine more readily with the cellulose of the cotton.

After being soaked for several hours in the solution described the cotton is passed between rollers to expel all nonabsorbed acid, a process carried to completion by washing the cotton in clear water. This washing process is a long one, requiring machinery which reduces the cotton to a mass resembling paper pulp. Should any nonabsorbed acid be allowed to remain it would decompose the cotton.

If the explosive is to be used after the manner of powder it is still further pulverized and then thoroughly dried, but if intended for torpedoes it is pressed into cakes of various shapes and sizes—disk shaped, cylindrical, flat squares and cubes. When not compressed gun cotton is very light, as light as ordinary batting.

A peculiar characteristic of this terrible explosive is that a brick of it when wet may be placed on a bed of hot coals, and as the moisture dries out the cotton will flake and burn quietly. If dry originally, however, the gun cotton will explode with terrible force at about 320 degrees of heat.

In general it is the custom to explode gun cotton by detonation or an intense shock instead of by heat. In a torpedo the explosive charge is wet, this wet cotton being exploded by means of dry cotton in a tube, this having been fired by a cap of fulminate of mercury, the cap itself having been fired by the impact of the torpedo against the target.—Harper's Weekly.

Nature's Scene Shifting.

Although in the geological past vast changes of level occurred on the borders and even in the center of continents, it is a debated question whether at present similar elevations and subsidences can be detected. Recently the frequently repeated statement that the coasts of Massachusetts and New Jersey are perceptibly sinking has been disputed, the apparent subsidence being ascribed to simple changes of shore line. But some curious records kept in Europe seem to indicate that actual fluctuations of the level of the land may occasionally be observed. In the valley of the Main a church tower hidden behind a mountain screen has since 1801 gradually risen into plain view from the chateau of Strossendorf, and still farther in the same direction another church tower, which began to be visible from Strossendorf eighty years ago, is now clearly seen above the horizon and is said to rise higher as time goes on. Similar records exist in Bohemia, in Switzerland, in Spain and in the French Jura.

Graceful Correction.

"Our literary contributor," says the editor of the Spiketown Blizzard, "is kicking because we printed it 'Throne of Caudor' last week when he wrote it 'Thane of Cawdor.' If he wants to use obscure language like that he's got to write it plain enough so anybody can read the words without having to guess at them.' We done the best we could with it."—Chicago Tribune.

An Exchange of Compliments.

A charming story is told of Pasteur, the scientist, and Victor Duruy, who was minister of public instruction under the second empire. The author of the "Histoire des Romains" was a great friend of Pasteur. Moreover, they were near neighbors, one residing in the Rue d'Ulm and the other in the Rue de Medicis. One Thursday, the day of the sittings of the academy, the two friends met at a cab stand by the Luxembourg. "Are you going to the institute?" asked the minister. "Yes," answered the savant, and they both entered the same cab. Arrived at their journey's end, Duruy tendered a five franc piece to the cabman, who, of course, had no change. Then said Duruy: "Keep the coin as a souvenir of this memorable ride. You have driven the greatest savant of the century." Next came Pasteur's turn. He put his hand in his pocket and withdrew a five franc piece, which he handed to the "cocher" with the remark: "Take care of it. You have driven the greatest minister of the second empire."—London Globe.

When Kurds and Turkomans Fight.

Describing a feature of a fight between Turkomans and Kurds in Persia, a traveler says: "The Turkomans, who always fight on foot, were ultimately defeated with heavy loss, and many prisoners were taken, and still more captives were released. Among the Turkoman prisoners was an old man of ninety, who said that he had joined the expedition in order to secure a new wife. The damsel in question came up during the interrogatory and brained her captor with a stone. During these raids, past and present, the Turkoman appeared to have enjoyed a great and permanent advantage in that neither Kurd nor Persian ever carried off their women or children owing to their ugliness. The Turkomans, on the other hand, preferred Persian to their own women and thus had a keen incentive, apart from the purely commercial aspect, to engage in these forays, in which no mercy was ever shown to the aged or weary."—Chicago News.

The Trade Winds.

The constancy of trade winds is due to the permanence of the conditions which rule them. As the heated air at the equator ascends surface winds set in from north and south and, uniting, ascend in their turn and flow off in opposite directions. As the velocity of the earth's revolution from east to west is much greater at the equator than at the poles, wind blowing along its surface to the equator is constantly arriving at places which have a higher velocity than itself; hence it is retarded and must lag behind, and under the influence of two opposing forces it is compelled to take an intermediate direction, so that what was originally a north wind is deflected and flows southwest, while what started as a south wind becomes northwest. From the great service they have rendered to navigation [illegible] called trade [illegible].

Genesis of the Playhouse.

Thespis in 536 B. C. acted his plays in a wagon. In 499 B. C., during the time of Aeschylus, creator of drama, the performances took place upon temporary wooden scaffolds, one of which, having collapsed during a representation, the Athenians were induced to build the great theater of Dionysius, calling it the Lenaion, which was the first permanent stone structure of its kind. It required 160 years to erect it. There was no scenery, but the scene was decorated so as to represent the locality in which the action was going on. Roofless was this structure, but around the building were porticoes, to which the people retreated during rainstorms. Sometimes awnings were used to ward off the sun's heat. Invariably the actors were males, who wore masks with mouthpieces, answering the purpose of speaking trumpets. Owing to the vastness of the theater metal vases were placed under the seats to serve as reflectors of sound. Performances began in the morning and usually lasted twelve hours.—New York Telegram.

Hanged and Buried and Lived.

It is not given to many men to be hanged and buried and yet be able to tell the tale, but such was the experience of one John Bartendale, who was executed at York in 1634 for felony. After his body had hung for nearly an hour it was buried. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the earth move, and with the help of his servant he disinterred the convict, who was still alive. It was the custom in those days to bury suicides and executed criminals without any coffin. The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life. When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied, "When I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."

Plon-Plon and Bernhardt.

Prince Napoleon, commonly known as Plon-Plon, often used to come to George Sand's rehearsals. He was extremely fond of her. The first time I ever saw that man I turned pale and felt as though my heart stopped beating. He looked so much like Napoleon I. that I disliked him for it. By resembling him it seemed to me that he made him seem less far away and brought him nearer to every one. Mme. Sand introduced him to me in spite of my wishes. He looked at me in an impertinent way. He displeased me. I scarcely replied to his compliments and went closer to George Sand. "[illegible] she is in love with you!" he [illegible], laughing. George Sand stroked my cheek gently. "She is my little madonna," she answered; "do not torment her."—Sarah Bernhardt's Memoirs.

Convincing Argument.

A certain colonel's gardener was going through the woods belonging to his employer when he saw a man gathering nuts.

As the colonel had given strict orders that this was not to be permitted, the gardener accosted the man. "You'll have to clear out of this," he said. "I've had orders to keep all these nuts for the colonel this year."

"That's all right," replied the man. "I'm getting 'em for the colonel."

A week later the gardener came across the man again.

"Look here," he said angrily. "You weren't getting those nuts for the colonel at all."

"I tell you I was," was the emphatic reply. "Do you think I was getting 'em for the shells?"—London Ideas.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

There are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.—Scientific American.

Worse Off.

"You know that I told you how I dropped our rubber plant and wrecked it?"

"Yes."

"I'm sorry I did it."

"Why?"

"My wife has just bought a new one that's twice as heavy."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Broadway and the Strand.

Broadway, New York, is the more or less exact counterpart of the London Strand. It is actually broader, but it appears more narrow because the houses are so much higher, and it is a little straighter because it is a made road, not a road evolved from what was once a path along river mud. The general effect is identical. There are the same kinds of shops and a crowd of the same type passing to or from the business quarter of the city. But, as I have said, one rubs one's eyes looking out at the crowd upon the sidewalk. It is the Strand crowd—cosmopolitan, varied, people touching one another so closely that the tops of their heads appear to form another tier on the street, a tier paved with [illegible] ite sets. There it is, the capital. But it appears to stop still. In one's first astonishment one thinks that all these people are waiting for a procession to pass. One cannot believe that they are the procession. Nevertheless as the slow trolley passes onward one realizes that the crowd is actually in motion—that it is the thing itself, not the procession. It is an extraordinary shock, this first impression of the land of hurry.—Ford Madox Hueffer in Atlantic.

Victor Hugo's Golden Gift.

A Paris chiffonnier makes a living of a sort, and he sometimes in overhauling the dust bins comes across a find. In this respect a Paris contemporary relates a capital story of Victor Hugo. A little silver gilt souvenir spoon which the poet valued very much disappeared. Through the carelessness of the maidservant it had found its way into the ash bucket and in due course into the hands of the chiffonnier who practiced in the district. This worthy succeeded in getting the poet to awake from his reveries and to descend from the lofty heights of Olympus—in other words, his study—to receive back the lost spoon. Hugo was delighted to get back his souvenir. The author of "Hernani" was never a prodigal, so he rewarded the chiffonnier by presenting him with a copy of his "Les Chansons des Rues et des Bois," saying, "There, my man; you will find in it as much gold as is contained in any jewel case in the world."—London Globe.

Queered Himself.

"Absentmindedness is a dreadful drawback to success," said a prominent official. "I know a very absentminded lawyer. The other day it was raining and blowing, and he engaged a taxicab. On the way to court he overtook the judge plodding along on foot through rain and wind and mud, and he hailed the taxicab and invited his honor to ride with him. The judge accepted the invitation, the taxicab duly halted at the courthouse, and the absentminded lawyer hopped out and ran upstairs to get ready the papers for a petition he was to present. But when the court opened and the petition was presented the judge, who had been so courteous in the cab a few minutes before, now regarded the lawyer coldly and contemptuously. As the poor fellow stood stupefied a crier whispered to him:

"'Do you know what you did? You ran in and left his honor to pay for the taxicab.'"—Washington Star.

PICKETTS ROUT THE "INDIANS"

Things Break Entirely Wrong For Locals and Grand Forks Win 16 to 3.

Last Saturday evening the Thief River "Indians" hit the trail for Grand Forks where, on Sunday afternoon, they intended to tie up and scalp the famous baseball team called the Pickets. Everything went as the "Indians" had planned until the end of the first inning. After that things broke entirely wrong and the score book showed at the end of the ninth inning that the "Indians" had ambushed only 3 pitiful scores while the Pickets had stacked up 16.

The Indians started the attack with their customary vigor and put one over the first round. Johnstone, the head of the list was given a free ticket to first. Jones and Courtney were unable to advance him, but Christensen and Holt followed with sigles which put the first run in the clear. Dolan was out. The Pickets evened things up in their half.

Beginning with the second inning, Sanders, the imported twirler from Mahnomen, began to gradually aviate, and by the end of the fourth the Pickets had battered the home plate for 10 runs. Sanders has good speed and good curves, but is evidently in need of some good training before he will be able to keep his head when things begin to look dark.

Bue pitched the remainder of the game but was unable to stop the greed for hits which the Pickets had acquired during the first four innings Nevertheless he pitched good ball after his first round and fully demonstarted excellent ability as an all around player. His work at the receiving end was good and he regularly nipped the daring ones who tried to pilfer second. Jones of Bagley, was another new man who showed up well in the field.

The locals annexed their other two good ones in the seventh with Hallet in the box. Dolan singled, Bue hit one to Evans at short who juggled the ball until both men were safe. Sanders struck out, Johnstone hit to center and Roy threw Doland out at third. Then Jones drew a pass and Courtney hit to deep right scoring Bue and Johnstone. Christy followed with a hot one to second but was thrown out.

Thomas, for the Pickets, pitched gilt-edged ball and it was he and Roy that won the game in the field. The grounds were exceedingly wet and heavy; so slippery in fact that the locals could do 'scarcely anything''. Looking into the error column it is not unreasonable to suppose that, had Thomas been hit more freely, the Pickets would have had fully as many errors as the locals.

The errors chalked up to Holt, Lambert and Courtney were wholly due to the poor condition of the playing field. Lambert asked to have a floater attached to the ball but the umpire wouldn't allow it.

The Flower of the Ranch

Lovers of the musical drama had a great treat Monday night at the Auditorium, when the "Flower of the Ranch" was presented. It was the drama in its most popular form, a virile story for ground-work highly embellished with humor, music, singing and dancing. The acting, too, was all that could be desired. Such plays rarely stop at cities of this size and the management deserve a compliment for landing it, even tho it did not pay in a pecuniary way.

The Squaw Man

"The Squaw Man," played at the Auditorium Wednesday by Clarence Bennett and Co., was a great success in every way. While it is very different from its forerunner, "The Flower of the Ranch," it is equally successful, and equally good. In its presentation it was true to life and the way its pathos gripped the heartstrings of the audience was most remarkable. "The Squaw Man" is certainly a masterpiece and its presentation here was good.

Swat the Canada Thistle

The Canada Thistle is classed as a noxious weed by our state law, yet there is plenty of it, and too much, growing in this section and going to seed undisturbed. Few seem to realize how badly this seed may infest our lands till they will produce little else. It is time we were up in arms fighting this enemy to our prosperity, and officers should not be slow to act upon complaints coming in.

The law of the state is that no person owning, occupying or controlling a land shall permit Canada thistle to go to seed thereon. They must also see that their half of the highway is clean.

Upon written complaint the chairman of each town board or mayor or president of the council are empowered and required to make an inspection, and if the complaint is well founded he shall serve written notice on the parties permitting the weeds to grow directing them to comply with the law within six days.

If this notice goes unheeded the road overseer or street commissioner shall have the weeds eradicated, charging $2 a day for his own services and the usual roadwork wages for men and teams. The expense in the first place must be borne by the town or municipality, but, unless the owner before October 1st reinburses the town or muincipality it shall be reported to the county auditor who shall extend the cost on the tax list to be collected against the land in question the same as the taxes.

But not only is the person who permits this thistle to grow on his land liable for the cost of its eradication but he commits a misdemeanor for which he may be prosecuted and fined and such fine goes into the treasury of the town or municipality where the offense was committed.

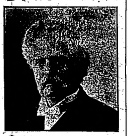
This same law applies to a number of other weeds, so keep a watch and keep them down. The law must be respected.

BEWARE OF FRAUD

A solicitor for an outside Commercial School was seen on our streets this week. Before entering into any contracts or signing any notes it is well to inquire of your local school as to prices and courses. The Commercial-Normal School is ready to give information about the cost of a business education.

WILL CELEBRATE 80th ANIVERSARY

Francis Ives will arrive to-night Celebrate Together With His Son.



One of the best known and most illustrious characters that will visit Thief River Falls for some time will without doubt be Francis Ives, the father of Clerk of Court Harry E. Ives Mr. Ives is expected to arrive here tonight from Cass Lake to spend next Sunday, it being the occasion of his eightieth birthday, with his son Harry and family.

Francis Ives was born July 16th, 1831 in the state of Vermont. He spent the early part of his life in St. Lawrence county, N. Y; came west in 1855 and located at Red Wing Minnesota in 1856, where he held the office of Municipal Judge for years.

In 1878 he removed to Crookston and while there had the distinction of being the first president of the first bank in that city which is now known as the Merchants National Bank of Crookston.

Mr. Ives was elected County Attorney of Polk county in 1886 and elected Judge of the District Court in 1892 which office he filled with honor for six years.

In 1899 he left Crookston and located at Cass Lake and started the Cass Lake Times which publication he still continnes. Mr. Ives holds the distinction of being one of the oldest newspaper men in our state today and that particularly in as much as he not only contimes the paper but he does so actively and personally and the Cass Lake Times is by no means a dead issue.

The Press extends congratulations to Brother Ives on his 80th anniversary and trusts that his years of usefulness may still be numbered in decades.

Church Dedicated at Viking

A three day religious meeting closed Sunday, July 2d, with the dedication of Zion church of Hauges Synod. Rev. J. J. Rendahl of Fergus Falls, Minn., chairman of Northern Minnesota District of Hauges Synd delivered the dedicatory sermon. The assisting pastors were M. L. Dahle, Eagle Bend, Minn., J. K. Lerohl, Dalton, Minn., B. Olson, Winsor, Minn., A. E. Skegerbo, Greenbush, Minn., E. A. Mostue, Sunbeam, Minn and I. L. Lasseson, pastor of the congregation. The weather was favorable and the church was taxed to its utmost capacity by a listening audience.

The church is a fine structure, tastefully finished inside and the only church in town. The congregation is very glad to have such a beautiful House of Worship in its mdist.

Jacobson-Gullingsrud

Wednesday afternoon the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson was the scene of a very pretty and charming wedding when Miss Mabel Josephine Jacobson and Mr. Otto Gullingsrud were united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed at five o'clock by the Rev. Roseland. Miss Gida Gullingsrud of Twin Valley, a sister of the groom was maid of honor and Mr. Henry Jacobson officiated as best man while the other attendants were the Misses Clara and Lena Gullingsrud and the Messrs. Carl and George Jacobson.

The bride was most becomingly gowned in white messaline satin and carried bride's roses, and the bride's maids, who also wore charming white gowns carried pink roses. The bride's going away costume was of white serge combined with black and a picture hat of black and white to correspond. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding feast was served, and as the host and hostess are true Vikings as one might expect this was not only a fine display of dishes in four courses but it was a true display of the bounties of the day and spoke volumes for the mistress of the culinary art.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Hildahl and family of Greenbush, Mrs. Styles and Mrs. Osmundson of Willmar, Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Gullingsrud, Misses Gida and Ella Gullingsrud of Twin Valley and Mr. and Mrs. I. Husby of Plummer.

The bride has made this city her home for several years and has endeared herself to many by her charming personality and the groom, tho not an actual resident here-to-fore, has made many friends during his frequent visits here in his capacity of traveling salesman for the Nicolet Dean and Gregg firm. The Press with their many readers wishes them a most happy and prosperous future.

Mr. and Mrs. Gullingsrud left Wednesday evening for Duluth and a trip on the Great Lakes and to points in Wisconsin. They will make their home in this city upon their return.

McQuery-Tonn

Mr. C. W. McQuery, of Thief River Falls, and Miss Olga C. Tonn, of Minneapolis, were united in marriage July 5th at the home of the groom's parents in Minneapolis. The happy couple reached this city Friday morning, and are stopping temporarily at Hotel Ogahmah.

The groom is a new business man here, he having recently purchased the Grand Theatre. He already has many friends here and is fast showing himself to be a live-wire business man—the kind that boosts while he is getting. The bride is known among her friends in Minneapolis to be a young woman who is especially well-fitted to make home a pleasant place and to take part in the important social affairs of the day. Here's best wishes to the happy couple.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

The Ladies Aid of the Synod church will serve ice-cream and cake, coffee and sandwiches in the basement of the church July 21st. Commencing at 3 o'clock p. m. A cordial invitation to all.

Lloyd E. Crown came down from Spooner Saturday where he has been on the saw-mill night-force for the past few months. For lack of water the mill now runs day-time only.

FLYING MACHINE DURING FAIR

Wright Machine In Charge of German Aviator To Make Two Flights Each Day.

A Wright Brother's aeroplane, driven by a noted German aviator, will be one of the main attractions at the Pennington County Fair to be held here August 2d, 3d and 4th. This wll give hundreds of people who have never seen a flying machine at close range not only the opportunity of being entertained and thrilled, but of learning by personal observation the principle on wheh these machines operate.

The fair management announces that, after a careful investigation of the various makes of aeroplanes, they decided that the Wright machine was best adapted for exhibition purposes. It is a significant fact that the Wrght brothers' have also secured the contract for the flight to be gven at the great State Fair.

Under the terms of the contract the company agrees to furnsh a Wright aeroplane fully equipped and in charge of an experienced aviator—one who has made successful flights and knows all about the mechanism.

This machine and aviator will be on the grounds during all three days of the fair, August 2d, 3d and 4th, and it is agreed that he shall make at least two fights each day. A flight consists of the raising in the air of the machine for a period of 10 minutes or more, at an elevation of 200 feet or more. A failure to comply with these terms relieves the fair of any obligation to pay.

One flight will probably be given in the morning and the other in the afternoon, six flights in all. The machine is on the biplane order. By next week we hope to have a cut which will give our readers an idea of this particular style of aeroplane.

Effect of Change in Freight Rates.

On the top of the advance in passenger rates from two to three cents per mile, which went into effect July 1st, the railroads have also advanced the freight rates on commodities; that is on various kinds of merchandise; in less than carload lots about 40 per cent over the old rates. As for instance the rate from Crookston to Bemidji has been raised from the 14.8 per cwt. to 20c per cwt; Crookston to Donaldson from 11.4c per cwt. to 17c per cwt. and from Crookston to Georgetown from 10.4 to 17.5 per cwt As it has been shown that the rates made seems like placing an unnecessary hard-ship on the public and we venture to say it will not prove a popular move on the part of the railroads.

Scores of other instances might be cited where the new freight rates are hitting the people who have to pay it hard. One concern in Crookston, figuring on a basis of busness done last year, will pay $1800 more per year in freight rates than at present—just one concern in Crookston. Think of what the enormous total will be.—Crookston Times.

Another Real Estate Firm

Albert Anderson and W. L. Carter of Cambridge, Minn., arrived in our city Tuesday evening overland by automobile. They are the latest acquisition of business men our city has made. They came here to engae in the real estate business and are much taken with the splendid opportunities of Thief River Falls and surrounding country. They have already engaged offices in the McGinn building and gone on the warpath for their share of business. They give promise of proving live wires in the local real estate trade. Their company, the Anderson Land Company, also has offices at Milaca, Minnesota, but Anderson and Carter are both to stay here. We extend to them the glad hand of welcome.

Run over by Auto

Willie Alexander, little son of Chas Alexander, had the misfortune of being run over by an automobile near his home last Wednesday evening. The car was driven by Wallace Watson and many persons saw the accident. They say that the little lad just as he realized his danger slipped or tripped and fell so that the auto passed over both legs above the knees. The auto, it seems, was moving along slowly, but there was a crowd of boys attracted to the place by "The Squaw Man" Band carrying an advertisement sign. The driver's eyes were perhaps drawn away from his course for a moment, and that made possible the accident. No bones were broken but the little lad was badly bruised up and is not yet able to stand because of the muscular soreness caused by the impact. May this accident lead to greater care on all sides in the future.

Daisy Rude Dies

Miss Daisy Rude, 22-year old daughter of Mrs. Peter Rude, died Thursday, July 6th at her home nine miles north east of this city. Deceased has been failing for nearly two years before death came to her relief. She leaves behind to mourn her untimely death a loving mother, two brothers, William and Arthur and two sisters, Mrs. Geo. Senum near here, and Mrs. Thos. Taraldson of Grand Forks.

The funeral was held last Saturday, Rev. A. L. Larson officiating. Interment was made at the Greenwood cemetery, south of town.

Generosity Saved One Eye

August Johnson, homesteader near Mud Lake whom our readers will remember as the one who about three weeks ago had so injured one of his eyes while clearing land that it was necessary for him to go to the Twin Cities to have the injured member removed to save the other, received free treatment at the University Dispensary and free lodging ata hospital and thus made the little purse given him here take him down and back again. No way was possible to save the injured eye as the eyeball was punctured, but the other is now all right.

To-day he set out for Middle River to rejoin his family.

THREE LADIES FILE IN ONE DAY.

Word from the Crookston land office informs us that an event somewhat out of the ordinary took place Tuesday when three young ladies appeared announcing their intention of filing on claims near this city.

The young ladies were the Misses Palma Dyrdal and Inga Bagaanson of Albert Lea and Bertha Torgerson of this city.

A record of three young ladies filing in one day is not quite along the regular routine of land office work.

J. H. Hay returned to Willmar Monday where he has charge of the Teachers Training School for the summer. Prof. Hay came home to be present at the school officer's meeting held in this city last Saturday.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR

Minnesota State Fair And Exposition Bigger And Better than ever before In 1911.

Good crop prospects and general prosperity throughout the Northwest are being reflected by the more than ordinarily acute interest shown in the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Throughout the state, the Northwest and the United States people are interesting themselves in the coming of th greatest of great state fairs. Everything indicates that in 1911 Minnesota will have a bigger, better balanced, more entertaining and more educational fair than ever before.

During the last few weeks great strides have been made in the big work of preparation. The premium list has been completed and is now ready for distribution. This book mirrors the liberality of the present management. Not only is the aggregate of premium offerings larger than ever before, but the total of $55,290 is distributed over a larger classification that gives an opportunity for more exhibitors and many more exhibits. The book itself is sumptuous and contains a large amount of valuable information about the coming fair. It will undoubtedly be prized by the people to whom it is distributed. Any one may obtain a copy by directing a request for the same to Secretary J. C. Simpson, Hamline, Minn.

Several new attractions have been secured during the past two weeks and the work of building, repairing and decorating the fair grounds is being carried on with noticeably good effect.

In all departments preparation is being made for the great event of 1911 and, in the matter of getting ready systematically to entertain and instruct half a million people, the present management has made better progress than ever before at this time of yar.

Agricultural Department.

It is gratifying to Superintendent Craig and those working with him in the management of the agricultural department to note the greatly increased interst. In 1910 there were but twenty-three counties represnted by exhibits at the state fair. Already this year more than that number of counties have signified their intentnon of being represented and it is certain that the slpendid aggregate will make memorable the county exhibit department of the 1911 fair.

Other exhibitors in the agricultural department are usually numerous and this part of the big exposition wil for the first time furnish a fairly complete idea of the soil and crop possibilities of the entire state.

Superintendent Craig has secured the sanction of the board and is endeavoring to arrange a series of classes, talks and lectures in which ambitiuos farmers will be given valuable instruction and information. This quasi short-course in agriculture will be conducted with the assistance of the farm school authorities and under their direction. It will assist in pointing out the lessons to be gained from the live exhibits in the department and should prove an invaluable feature.

Live Stock Progress.

In the horse, cattle, sheep, swine and other live stock departments a larger number of exhibitors than ever before at this time of the year have signified their intention of exhibiting their stock. The premium offerings, especially in the horse department, have been greatly increased, new class added and much interest aroused. A large number of the country's foremost breeders, some of whom have never shown at the Minnesota State Fair, will be represented here this year.

There has always been a demand on the part of some Minnesota Breeders that certain privileges and exclusive preference should be given

MILLER AT THE GRAND

Professor Miller was here again with his Spiritual Cabinet and once more mystified the people of Thief River Falls. No one has yet been able to explain how Mr. Miller can drive nails and play musical instruments while he is tied hand foot. However, he allows such close inspection of his methods, that the audience is always pleased with the act. Mr. McQuery, the owner of the Grand offered a season ticket to the person who could satisfactorly explain how Miller did it. One fellow, whose name we respectfully withhold, thot that Miller had another man inside of him who came out and did the stunts.

WOMAN MAYOR PROGRESSIVE.

Mrs. Ella Wilson is the new mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., who has figured in the newspapers so extensively of late. The new mayor is a kindly looking woman with a pleasant manner. But she can be firm, and when she states that "Hunnewell is no worse than a lot of other towns, but it is going to be better than most of them," you instinctively believe her. She is very much in earnest and she made an earnest campaign. Mrs. Wilson is well to do. She owns her home in Hunnewell and several farms in Oklahoma and Kansas. In addition, she is a leader in the Presbyterian church and is a member of a number of women's fraternal organizations, having been a State officer in some. She has two sons, one aged twenty and the other fourteen. Her husband is paralyzed. Mrs. Wilson is a suffragette, but not a militant. She believes that women should vote, but dosen't think acts of violence will help them to obtain the ballot. And, too, she has pronounced views in other lines, as for instance, she says, "If the W. C. T. U., ladies' aid societies and kindred organizations would devote more time to promoting better moral sanitary and social conditions and a little less to fighting evils, which can better be checked by education and evoltion than by revolution, they would be of more benefit to the community.' Mrs. Wilson has appointed Mrs. Rose E. Osbourne city marshal. Mrs. Osbourne is six feet tall and weighs nearly two hundred and fifty pounds. She says she is not afraid of any man in the town and apparently there is no reason why she should be.

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Thief River Falls People Learn The Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first;

But when you know 'tis from the kidneys;

That serious kidney troubles follow;

That diabetes, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the statement of a Thief River Falls citizen.

Mrs. Louise Cerny, 318 Markley Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The statement I gave for publication three years ago, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, was correct in every detail. I gladly confirm it and add that I have had little kidney trouble since. This complaint bothered me for several years. At times I had backache and dull pains in my back and I was often nervous and weak. The kidney secretions were unnatural and my health was all run down. My supply of Doan's Kidney Pills was procured at Curtis' Drug Store and the good work they did, convinced me of their merits."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milbourn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

A Curious Swiss Custom.

In one part of the canton of Ticino, Switzerland, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best" and, accompanied by as many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride. Finding the door locked, he demands admittance. The inmates ask him his business, and he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden. If his answer is deemed satisfactory he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of whom he rejects with scorn amid general merriment. The bridegroom, whose temper is sometimes sorely tried, is then informed that his ladylove is absent and is invited to come in and see for himself. He enters and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress ready to go to church. Then all his anxiety is at an end, and the nuptials are duly celebrated.

Penrose Declares Reciprocity Will Pass.

ADJOURNMENT IN A MONTH

Chairman of Finance Committee of the Senate Predicts End of Present Session Either the Latter Part of This Month or Early in August.

Washington, July 11.—"Nothing but speeches stand in the way of the complete success of the Canadian reciprocity bill and we are working the speeches off as fast as possible," said Chairman Penrose of the senate finance committee.

"We shall not be here so much longer. Gradually and more rapidly than most people appreciate, we are putting the speeches behind us and I am sticking to a prediction made long since that we shall adjourn either on Saturday, July 29, or Saturday, Aug. 5, by which time we shall have voted upon and passed the reciprocity bill and voted upon the free list and wool bills."

Mr. Penrose said there has been no especial efforts to expedite the consideration of the reciprocity bill on the president's Mayflower trip.

"There was nothing fixed on the trip," said Senator Penrose. "All the members of the party are friends of reciprocity and there was no missionary work to do. Neither was there any planning, for there is no doubt as to the outcome."

He said the affair was of a purely social nature and that despite the heat the party had a thoroughly enjoyable time. At the psychological moment Mr. Penrose will renew his request for unanimous consent to fix a day to vote on the reciprocity bill and also for days to vote on the two tariff bills now on the Senate calendar. He probably will name the same days mentioned in his first request, July 24, 25 and 26.

DETECTIVES MAY LOSE JOBS

Accused of Stealing Stokes' Letters From Graham Girl.

New York, July 11.—Dismissal from the force and criminal prosecution confronts the detectives who worked on the case against Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham, who shot W. E. D. Stokes in their apartment in the Varuna last month.

The direct allegation is made by the girls and their attorneys that these members of the police force turned over to Stokes' private detectives all of Stokes' letters found when the apartment was searched after the shooting.

The most important of these letters have disappeared and Police Commissioner Waldo and District Attorney Whitman united in independent investigations to place the responsibility.

TEXTILE MILLS REOPENED

More Than 31,000 Operatives Resume Work in New England.

Boston, July 11.—More than 31,000 operators employed in textile mills in various parts of New England have resumed work after shutdowns of varying lengths in accordance with the policy of curtailing production adopted by the mill managements.

At Manchester, N. H., 18,000 operatives returned to their machines in the Amoskeag Manufacturing company's mills after a layoff of ten days. Six thousand hands went back to the mills in Biddeford, Me., after two weeks of idleness and more than 7,000 employes in mills at Clinton, Chicopee and Ware, Mass., resumed work

WILSON GETS HIS SALARY

President of New Jersey Senate Turns Over Checks.

Trenton, N. J., July 11.—President of the Senate Ackerman has turned over to Governor Wilson the checks he received from the state comptroller's department for services as acting governor

Although the comptroller's department officially "docked" Governor Wilson for the period he was out of the state on his Western trip, Mr. Ackerman's act gives the governor payment in full.

Cheese to Weigh 12,000 Pounds

Appleton, Wis., July 11.—The construction of superstructure for the building of an American cheese weighing over 12,000 pounds and to be three times as large as the biggest cheese ever made in the world, has commenced here The colossal dairy product will be made by N Simon, the American cheese expert for the National Dairy Show association

Youthful Lover Shoots Girl.

New York, July 11.—Because fifteen-year-old Madeline Fritz spurned the love of her former sweetheart, Peter Wick, seventeen years old, pulled a pistol from his pocket and shot her. Passersby who had paused to listen to his ardent pleading saw him kneel in supplication to the girl just before he shot her. Wick was locked up.

Cruikshank's Fagin.

During the time Cruikshank was illustrating "Oliver Twist" he spent days traversing the east end of London in search of a face that would correspond with his conception of the character of Fagin. One day while standing before a mirror in his dining room "pulling faces at himself," so to speak, for the want of something better to do, he accidentally made the features for which he was looking. The picture, therefore, of Fagin is really that of Cruikshank himself.

ASKS FOR ONLY FIVE ROLL CALLS

Senator Cummins Loses Hope as Amendments Fail

BEATEN BY LARGE MARGIN

Canadian Reciprocity Bill Emerges Unscathed From Long Series of Proposed Alterations.

Washington, July 11.—The Canadian reciprocity bill emerged unscathed from the most serious ordeal it has yet experienced in the senate. The series of amendments offered by Senator Cummins of Iowa and the two offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, all seeking to increase the number of Canadian manufactured articles that shall be admitted to the United States free of duty, were voted down by large majorities.

The vote in favor of the amendments was so small that Senator Cummins asked for only five roll calls, although he had previously announced his intention of asking for at least ten. The maximum vote for his tariff amendments was 14, compared to a maximum vote of 53 against.

The defeat of the Cummins amendments clears the situation in the senate and leaves the reciprocity bill much nearer final passage.

Senator Bailey offered an amendment to the house woolen tariff bill, imposing a duty of 25 per cent on raw wool. He will ask for the consideration of this amendment and of his farmers' free list amendment in the near future. Senator La Follette has not yet introduced his amendments, of which there probably are a considerable number; but these are expected within a short time.

Senator Cummins, after the first roll call on his amendments, expressed the conviction that it was the intention of the senate not to change the agreement in any particular and that it was useless to press the senate for further votes. He finally allowed the remainder of his amendments to be voted on together, without the formality of a roll call.

Results of the Roll Calls.

On the proposal to put flour and cereal products on the list of articles which the United States will admit free from Canada Senator Cummins was defeated, 53 to 14; on the proposal to put agricultural implements on this list he was defeated, 53 to 12; on the proposal to put lumber on the list he was defeated, 51 to 12.

Other amendments voted down proposed to admit free from Canada, without demanding like treatment of American products, automobiles, iron ore, pig iron, coal, rubber, cotton, woolen, leather and silk goods. Senator Bristow demanded a record vote on the rubber amendment, but enough senators would not join in the demand.

Senator Smith of Michigan, who had previously announced his entire opposition to the reciprocity agreement as a whole, declined to vote for any of the amendments to it which sought to put more articles on the free list.

The amendment that secured the heaviest favorable vote was one separate from the tariff features of the agreement. It gave the president power to terminate this country's part of the pact if Canada abrogated her part.

Senators Clapp and Dixon (Republicans) and Senator Simmons (Democrat) opposed the general reciprocity measure in speeches. Senator Dixon said the agreement was due to the pressure of the newspaper interests and Senator Clapp declared the president had yielded to the demands of the cities for lower living and the needs of the press for free paper.

FOUR OF CREW DROWNED

Steamer Santa Rosa Pounds to Pieces Near Surf, Cal.

Surf, Cal., July 8.—Four members of the crew of the wrecked steamer Santa Rosa of the Pacific Coast Steamship line were drowned in the surf while trying to escape from that vessel, which stranded near Point Arguillo, six miles south of here.

Second Officer E. Hewson and three members of the crew were the only ones drowned when she broke up, according to latest advices received at the Pacific Coast Steamship company's office at San Francisco. These men lost their lives while trying to put a line ashore.

BRIEF SHOWER GIVES TEMPORARY RELIEF

Heat Causes 200 Deaths in New York in One Week.

New York July 11.—A brief thunder shower brought only temporary relief from the heat wave which again holds the city. The thermometer registered 96 and after the storm the mercury stood at 86 and the humidity, which was above 80 for a portion of the day, was but little relieved.

Just what sufferings have been caused by the prolonged heat is definitely shown by the report of the board of health for the last week. It shows:

Deaths from sunstroke, 200. Deaths from the same cause, during corresponding week in 1910, 33. The total deaths for the week were 1,754, against 1,472 for the corresponding week of 1910.

The day's death list was eighteen, while prostrations numbered above 200.

"Mr. Shepard is critically ill. His condition has remained unchanged for the past twenty-four hours," Dr T. L Henning, the attending physician, said.

CASTRO HOPES TO REGAIN POWER

Now in Venezuela at Head of Small Army.

Willemstad, Curacao, July 11.—A wireless dispatch from Buen Ayre island announces that General Jose Antonio Davila landed on the island secretly Saturday night, having come from Venezuela.

Davila is one of the sixty-three men who, led by General Cipriano Castro, years ago, invaded the state of Techira, Venezuela, from Colombian territory. He is Castro's close friend.

According to the best information obtainable Castro, the deposed president of Venezuela, is now on the western frontier of Venezuela at the head of a thousand or more men engaged in enlisting an army with which he proposes to repeat his exploit of twelve years ago, when he overthrew the government and placed himself in the presidency.

A Souvenir From the Dead

By EDWARD BUCKMAN

Copyright by American Press Association. 1911.

I am one of the old maids who became such by the civil war. An old woman with no hair on my head save what is white as snow, I have passed half a century alone, yet not alone, for once I have seen him.

He was killed in one of the battles around Richmond during McClellan's advance upon that city. A year before he had marched away with the soldier boys of '61—how young they seem to have been now and how strange that those who live are becoming tottering old men and that the boys' mothers and the girls who loved them could send them out to die!—he had gone down into Virginia, carrying my heart with him. He had fallen and been thrown into a trench, and then for the first time I wondered that I could have consented to his going.

No one has ever taken his place. I have lived as though we were one, he in the heavenly, I in the earthly sphere. For many years I wished to go down to Virginia and visit the spot where he died, and yet I dreaded to do so. It was not till the beginning of this century that I could make up my mind to do so.

I went to Richmond and visited the residence of the president of the Confederacy, which is now a museum. There I saw the arms and uniforms of Confederate heroes. But what took me nearer to the conflict of years before was a southern lady who told me how when a girl she had listened to the distant booming, gaining hope when it receded and losing courage when it drew nearer. From there I went to the battlefield.

I went alone. The battle in which he was taken from me is called Seven Pines. Why it is called Seven Pines I know not. There are thousands of pines there now, but I believe they have all grown up since the battle. It was fought in a cornfield. But it has not been tilled since that day in 1862, and the trees have had ample time to grow.

I found a long line of low earthworks that was thrown up by McClellan's army, behind which to resist the Confederates hurled against it by General Lee. Forty years had passed over these works, during which the pines had grown up as if to shield the dead and the trenches beneath them, in which so many soldiers' bodies were thrown. Walking on the line of earthworks, every now and again I came to a redoubt, where stood cannon, and there beneath were the ruts made by the gun carriages.

Before going on to the field I had been told that I should have a guide. I declined to take one or to go with a party who were conducted by one. I went alone. It was late in the afternoon, and most of the visitors were coming away. It seemed to me a sacrilege to listen to the story from a human voice told so eloquently by those intrenchments, the rises here and there in the ground over the dead, the waving pines, which with every breeze sighed a requiem. And I wished to be where my boy lover had fallen, without any one to jar upon me.

So I lingered till every one else had gone, sitting alone on the rampart, looking out upon the trees that obstructed further view. They were not there on that terrible day of '62. As I looked they seemed to dissolve and their place to be taken by waving grain. I saw a long brown line advancing, heard the word of command among them and the louder word of those preparing to resist them.

Whether a change that came over me was in the day or in the night, whether it was in me or in my surroundings, whether I saw what I seemed to see or it was a half conscious dream, I know not. But I was back in '62, and it seemed as if the wrath of heaven had come upon the earth.

The thunder ceased. The light was from scattered campfires. The sounds were the chatting of burial parties and the falling clods, with occasional volleys fired over the dead.

Suddenly I felt a touch on my shoulder. I looked up, and there was my soldier lover. Could this be he whom I had looked upon as a man? Why, he was but a boy—not a sign of a beard on his face. It was round and full, while in my head were many gray hairs and my face was wrinkled. One moment he stood looking down at me. I reached out for his hand, but before I could clasp it he had faded away.

When I came to myself the morning sun was shining down through the pines. I was lying on my back on the rampart, looking up at a patch of sky between the branches. It was blue and beautiful, with scattered white clouds sailing peacefully over it.

I was filled with consternation at having passed a night out on that battlefield of forty years agone. I raised myself with difficulty. My eye caught something mingling with the earth. It was a worn silver ten cent piece. I took it up, rubbed the dirt from it and on it traced with difficulty three letters—M. E. L.

I had forgotten that the night before he marched I had given him a new ten cent piece on which he had scratched my initials.

Is it anything to me whether or no my story is believed, whether I dreamed, whether where so many souvenirs of soldiers have been picked up it is to be wondered that I should have found one with my initials on it? In my own mind there is no doubt.

Lengthy and Monotonous.

One of the most curious contracts entered into by an operatic artist was that agreed to by Farinelli. When he visited Spain, Philip V. was suffering from mental depression, from which nothing aroused him until the arrival of Farinelli. The queen was so delighted to see her royal spouse once more interested that she engaged Farinelli at a salary of $10,000 to remain in Madrid. This he did, singing the same four songs to the king every night for ten years.

SAID TO HAVE FLOATED NOTES

Alleged James Pettit Is Short About Million and Half.

INQUIRY FOLLOWS HIS DEATH

President and General Manager of Peavey Grain Company Said to Have Been Speculating.

Chicago, July 11.—Close upon the death of James Pettit, who was found dead from drowning in Lake Michigan near the Moraine hotel Saturday morning, came the announcement of the retirement from the brokerage business of the firm of which he was president and general manager.

A number of telegrams were sent out by the Peavey Grain company to its agents and customers all over the country. It was stated that owing to the death of Mr. Pettit the company had decided to retire from the commission business in Chicago.

The Peavey Elevator company, which is a separate corporation and whose trademark (PV) may be seen on the elevators of almost every agricultural center in the country and lake and Mississippi steamboats, is not affected, however.

The retirement of the grain company followed meetings of officers of the First National bank, Corn Exchange National bank and possibly other Chicago financial institutions.

The tragic ending of Mr. Pettit's life is said to have a significant bearing on this action. It is pointed out that the inquiry was set afoot by the banks on the first business day following his death.

Company Will Redeem Notes.

Notes aggregating between $1,200,000 and $1,500,000, which Mr. Pettit, it is declared, floated on the credit of the grain concern and which money he is reported to have lost in private speculations, were under consideration at secret conferences of Chicago and Evanston bankers. It was said that the company had promised the bankers that it would make good on all the paper which had been given by Pettit on the credit of the concern.

An official of the Corn Exchange bank put the amount of the money involved at $750,000. He said, however, that he thought the banks would be secured by the warehouse certificates for wheat put up as collateral and also by the Peavey interests in Minnesota, though the Peavey Grain company is a separate corporation from the Peavey Elevator company.

Peaver Grain company telegrame were sent to agents and customers stating that, owing to the death of Mr. Pettit, the company had decided to retire from the commission business in Chicago, confining its efforts in the future to elevator operations. Customers with open accounts were requested to transfer them to other firms.

LAKE VESSEL SUNK IN CRASH

Steamer John Mitchell Lost on Lake Superior.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 11.—Three lives were lost and thirty-one persons, including six women and a little boy, experienced a thrilling midnight rescue when the steamer John Mitchell of Chicago was sunk in collision with the steamer William H. Mack of Cleveland, off Vermillion Point, Lake Superior, about sixty miles northwest of Sault Ste. Marie. The dead are Archie Causley of Detroit, second mate of the Mitchell; Al Clemans, steward, Rochester, Ind., and George Austin, watchman, of Cleveland.

The two vessels that crashed together in a fog were both of steel structure and about 400 feet long. Several of the crew and passengers of the Mitchell were taken on board the Mack more or less severely injured.

FOUR EMPLOYES ARE KILLED

Intense Heat Causes Explosion at Powder Works.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., July 7.—Intense heat, it is believed, produced an explosion at the Standard powder works at Horrells Station, on the Petersburg branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, resulting in the death of four employes and the destruction of the works. The storage house, containing tons of dynamite, nitroglycerin and powder, was the only building saved.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1911.

We had intended to publish in full this week the report of the Public Examiner's findings but fortune was against us, we had no power and hence could not set. We will publish the entire report next week instead. The lack of power is also the cause of our coming out late so if you were disappointed in not getting your paper at the usual time blame The Thief River Falls Lumber Co., and the Crookston Lumber Co., who have jammed the river with logs and thus prevented the natural flow of water and do not blame us for we are as helpless without power to run our machinery as you would be under the same circumstances.

"What would John A. Johnson do if he was governor?" is the question some of the state newspapers are asking in connection with the Red Wing matter. We can tell you what he would do and we can tell some of you what Knute Nelson would do, and what John Lind would do, and what the old lumberjack governor, Dave Clougo would do. If some discredited political barnacle like Andy Stephens attempted to get action on either of them in the same manner in which he has hounded Governor Eberhart to pull his chestnuts out of the fire, either of them would have booted him from the executive offices to Rice street. Remember this is the same Andy Stephens who asked the senate to seat him after the voters of Polk county had repudiated him by a majority of more than 500 votes. Fine man to tell the governor how state institutions should be run!—Chisholm Tribune.

to home grown stock. While the Minnesota classes have been little interfered with this year, the policy of the present directors is to make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition a place where there will be shown the best types of the various breeds of live stock regardless of where they are bred or raised.

Secretary J. C. Simpson feels very strongly on this subject and his views are supported by the board members. He maintains that the object of the live stock exhibits is to present all of the best products of live stock breeding, to show the farmers and stock raisers the best types and to let them profit by studying these.

"Minnesota can raise the best" he said, recently, in discussing the subject. "We don't want to advertise to the world that this is a second class state and that Minnesota breeders cannot compete with the most successful breeders in the world. If we cannot so compete we should be given a chance to study the best and learn how to breed closer to type. In this way Minnesota stock will be improved very much faster than by making special Minnesota classes and asking our breeders to compete only with other breeders of this state."

On Machinery Hill

In the machinery and industrial department of the fair there is manifested the same increase of interst. of year.

The enlargement of this department is even more certain than that of the others, because manufacturers make reservations for space earlier in the season than the exhibitors in the other departments.

Superintendent Sivright and Assistant Superintendent Lee have already given locations to an unusually large number of exhibitors and machinery hill will be one of the busiest and one of the most instructive parts of the grounds during the week of Sept. 4-9th. The big manufacturers universally admit the value of exhibits at the Minnesota State Fair and those who are not represented this year will be the exception.

SILOS AND ENSILAGE

It does not pay to devote high-priced land, for long periods, to pasturage and the production of hay. The land can be put to more profitable use. In order, therefore, that dairying may continue profitable, instead of depending, as in the past, wholly upon the pasturage for the chief food-supply of their herds, many of our farmers are turning toward the silo as affording a beneficent solution of the feed problem. It is doubly beneficent in that it not only does away with the necessity of devoting so much land to pasture; but also, by making available a cheap supply of succulent and highly-relished food all the year around, it deprives stall-feeding of some of its objectionable features, while keeping the milk flow at a higher level. During the past two or three years, more silos have been built than in all previous years combined. The more prosperous farmers are often supplied, not merely with one, but with two good silos.

The economic value of this method of hauling feed being generally recognized, the only real obstacle to the general introduction of the silo seems to be the first cost of the structure and of the machinery for filling it. More stock can be kept and profitably fed, per acre, when ensilage is grown, than by almost any other method of feeding.

The silo practically increases the producing capacity of the farm at least 10 percent, and often more. A 160-acre farm with a silo will produce as much revenue as one of 180 acres without. Therefore, the first cost of a silo—like that of a dwelling-house, a barn or a team—should be considered part of the initial investment; and, if one's capital is limited, it is better to buy a farm smaller by ten per cent, rather than dispense with a silo. The producing value of a silo on $50 land would be equal to that of twenty acres added to the 160-acre farm, or $1,000; on $100 land, it would be $2,000. This is a low esimate; for the stock-carrying capacity of the farm will often be increased fully 25 per cent by the adding of a silo. As compared with its producing value, the cost of constructing the silo is small, round wooden silos cost from $1.50 to $3.00 per ton of capacity; those of stone, brick or cement, from $2 to $4. It has been shown by actual experiment in Minnesota that —working cooperatively in the purchase of materials, etc.—a number of farmers in a locality may erect on each of their farms a stave silo, of 140 to 150 tons capacity, for about $275.—Geo. P. Grout, University Farm.

BEING INSPECTED

By HENRY G. WILLING

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In college we were divided into good, indifferently good and bad. I regret to say that I was of the third class—bad. The badness in college boys is usually but a superfluity of health, youth and spirits, and when I look back upon myself at that period I see simply a boy passing into manhood.

As soon as I was graduated I sought the freedom of the wild west. Ranching was my vocation, and cowboys were my associates. The only thing that I can remember creditable to myself while a rancher was falling in love with Eleanor Warfield, a visitor at a neighboring ranch. This occurred during my first year in the west and some time before I had been transformed from the grub, youth, into the superior being, man. Miss Warfield returned my proffered affection and consented to be my wife, but on one condition. I must be approved by her uncle. He was rich, and, being a bachelor, she was to be his heir. Nevertheless she was sure that if she married a man displeasing to him he would leave his property elsewhere.

My fiancee, having finished her visit, left for the east. She was to announce her engagement to her uncle and create as favorable an impression with regard to me as possible. Then, the way having been made smooth, I was to go east myself and present myself for inspection.

Miss Warfield wrote me some time after her arrival that she had informed her uncle of her engagement. She was not overhopeful in the matter, for he had asked a number of questions as to my antecedents which she knew very well would not please a critical old gentleman who had never sown his wild oats and whose ideas of a husband for his niece inclined to the clerical profession. What troubled Eleanor was that he asked at what college I had studied, and from my career at the university as I had frankly given it to her she was quite sure he would hear no good of me. She was agreeably disappointed in this, however, for the faculty spoke very well of me, a circumstance which surprised me and led me to believe that these gentlemen consider unmeritorious students more needful of encomiums than those who are meritorious. At any rate, I have found them far more lenient to my faults as a graduate than they were to me as a student.

When the time came for my inspection I wrote my fiancee, giving her the day and train on which I would arrive. On the way I fell in with an old gentleman who was the only person on the train I cared to talk to and whom I engaged in conversation. He was one of those men who have more sympathy with young people than those of their own age. He talked horse, and I was delighted to talk horse with him. He smoked to excess and drank whenever it pleased him to do so. We hadn't been together half an hour before he brought out a flask, cigars and cards. I was not personally averse to any one of the three and preferred them together. Having imbibed and lighted weeds, we proceeded to play. I found the gentleman the best euchre player I had ever met. Possibly my reason for so considering him was because before we reached our destination he had taken out of me all the money I had brought with me for expenses.

"Well," I said, "I'm cleaned out."

"Come to my bank tomorrow morning," he said, "and I'll cash a draft for you."

Since I needed money from the start, the first thing I did after my arrival was to call at the old gentleman's bank. I found him a very different person there from the man with whom I had traveled. He was dignity itself. He cashed my draft without the slightest reference to the manner in which we had whiled away the time on the train, asked a few civil questions and dismissed me with the remark that this was his busy day.

I felt a trifle groggy, and I feared I looked groggy. Therefore I took a long nap, deferring my call on my fiancee till evening. I was anxious to see Eleanor, but I feared to present a dissipated appearance to her uncle.

At 4 o'clock I took a Turkish bath, dined, and at 8, quite freshened, I rang the doorbell at the Warfields. Eleanor received me lovingly, of course, and told me that the account the professors had given of me at college had made her quite hopeful. After chatting for some time she led me into the library to be inspected. An old gentleman rose from an easy chair, and—well, I was appalled.

He was my fellow traveler.

He told me to sit down. Then he said that instead of making the inspection of me in his home he had gone west for the purpose of seeing what I really was by taking me off my guard. He was very well satisfied with me and considered me a much better man than I had been represented by the professors under whom I had studied, "or, rather, had not studied," he added.

"What did they say of me?" I asked.

"The reputation you left at college was far better than the one I left myself. I don't belong to a studious family myself, and I doubt if you do. I discovered on our trip that you are honorable, your impulses are good and you will turn out all right."

"That wouldn't make any difference to her."

"Oh, wouldn't it? Once before when I happened to have on an old dress she didn't speak to me, either. Now I'm through with her. If she doesn't care enough for me to speak when I'm in my old clothes she needn't speak at all. I won't speak to her when I'm dressed up. That's all there is to it."

"Did you speak to her?"

"I should say not. It's her place to speak first. Do you suppose I'm going to attract attention by yelling my lungs out for the like of her? I guess not."

When the Shoe Pinches.

"My own common sense and the shoe clerk permitting, I shall never wear another pair of tight shoes," said a woman, "but if I should be inveigled into making myself uncomfortable I know what I shall do to allay the pain. The ministrations to the aching feet of a man who called on my Italian cobbler for relief showed me a remedy. The man's shoes pinched in three different places. Having located the painful spots Rafael dipped a long strip of canton flannel into boiling water and held the cloth stretched tightly across the man's shoes. When the water began to evaporate he dampened the cloth again and repeated the process several times.

"'Now,' said he at last, 'your shoes are set to your feet. No more hurt.'

"The man gave him a quarter, which I thought a small price to pay for relief from a pinching shoe."—New York Sun.

Cards and Card Playing.

In a paper in the Journal of the Royal Society of Arts Professor H. Cheney, discussing the part played by gambling in magic, observes: "The use of cards is said to be derived from the Turot cards, which were originally employed for occult purposes. The legend which ascribes the invention of cards to the purpose of amusing a mad king does not seem at all a sufficient explanation, and there is in addition the fact that cards of a kind existed before the said king. In further support of this idea the well known practice of telling fortunes by cards may probably be re-

An English King's Death.

William Rufus was killed by an arrow, either accidental or with murderous intent. He died in the New forest. His body was stripped by tramps and the next day was found by a charcoal burner, who placed the naked corpse on his cart, hoping to receive a reward. On the way to Winchester the cart was upset, and the king's body fell in the mire. Covered with filth and black with charcoal, it arrived in Winchester, where it was buried in the cathedral. A few years later the tower fell and crushed the tomb, and 600 years after the Puritans rifled the grave and played football with the king's skull.

WOMEN WANT REPRESENTATION.

The women of this city have universally expressed a desire to be represented on the school board by one of their number. A vacancy has been caused by Mr. Jackson, who was a former member of the board, moving away.

Mrs. Bishop has been urged to allow her name to be used and we hope that she will consent, to that as she is a woman very much interested in school affairs. We feel that there is no one who could better fill the position, were she elected.

Woe Is His.

First.—My wife is my boss. I shall not deny.

Second.—She maketh me to lie down behind the bed when swell company comes, and she leadeth me behind her up Main street.

Third.—She restoreth my pocketbook after she has spent all of its contents for stylish skirts and theater tickets, and she leadeth me up the main aisle at church for her new hat's sake.

Fourth.—Yea, though I walk more than half the night through dark rooms with a crying baby I will get no rest, for she is behind me; her broomstick and her batpin they do everything else but comfort me.

Fifth.—She [illegible] a cold snack for me, then [illegible] for an old society [illegible] anointeth my head with the [illegible] deadly. My arms [illegible] with the bundles before she is [illegible] done with her shopping.

Signaling at Sea.

The custom of signaling at sea by means of various colored flags is very ancient, and the method seems to have been brought to a degree of development bordering very closely on perfection. Many people have been astonished at the length of messages conveyed in a few moments and with the use of but half a dozen flags in various combinations, and when the extent of the language and the complexity of many necessary messages are considered the eighteen flags in the signal flag locker seem very inadequate. However, it must be remembered that the signal code utilizes a sort of shorthand, and many long messages, known to be of frequent occurrence, have been contracted to a single showing of flags in a given combination. The number of flags hoisted when a signal is made never exceeds four. With the eighteen flags of various colors, using four for each signal, no fewer than 78,642 combinations can be made.

PINEVILLE'S CIDER DAY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

For twenty years the village of Pineville had had a custom of its own On the 15th of every September, in case the day did not fall on a Sunday a couple of barrels of new cider were placed on the public square and tapped and everybody invited to drink their fill. It was a day of rejoicing and was known as cider day.

On a certain 14th of September a stranger arrived in the village by stage. It was not so uncommon for strangers to arrive, but this was an uncommon man. He had a clubfoot; he had but one eye; he had a voice like the bellow of a bull; he had but one eyebrow. His personal appearance was freely commented on, as is the way of the villager, and there was great curiosity to know who he was and what had brought him there.

The stranger was limping around town next day when the cider was brought in and the rejoicings began, but he paid no attention until afternoon. Then the men had begun to warm up and grin and laugh and slap each other on the back. Firecrackers were thrown under the stranger's feet, and when he voiced his displeasure he was laughed and jeered at. Then he got a hand on his back and was challenged to a wrestling match and a trial of cuffing off hats. He was invited to drink prosperity to Pineville in a dipper of new cider, and when he refused to do so a quantity was poured on his hat.

The stranger was a good swearer, and he swore. He stood on the public square and swore, and he sat on the tavern veranda and swore, and he locked himself in his room and swore. All day the town made merry, as per custom, and next day some of the leading citizens called to make excuses. The stranger had hired a rig and departed after an early breakfast.

Pineville wanted a railroad. It had wanted one for years and at times had had strong hopes. The trouble was in the hills half surrounding it. There must be a costly tunnel. Engineers had come and estimated and reported, and the cost had been considered too high. A new and greater effort was now on foot, and three days after cider day a large and enthusiastic mass meeting was held. At this meeting a greater sum was pledged than ever before, and a delegate was sent to the headquarters of the P. and P. railroad to lay the matter before the proper officials. The line to Pineville, if built, would be a branch. The delegate was politely received and listened to and then told that a larger delegation had better come down. Indeed, the names of seven of his fellow townsmen were given him, and they would be received and the matter gone into.

When the delegation reached the city it was informed that if Pineville got its branch it would be through a certain capitalist, who would give them audience half an hour later. He did so. They filed into his office and up to his desk to find the man of the clubfoot. He had a smile on his face, but they did not like the smile. He spoke honeyed words, but at the same time he had the door locked and three stout men brought in.

"Glad to see you, gentlemen—very glad," he said to the delegation as a whole. "You may perhaps remember that I visited your pleasant little town the other day. Very nice town; very nice town. Very enterprising people. Very charming custom you have up there."

"Sir," replied Deacon Harrison, who had been appointed spokesman for the delegation, "if perchance our people made too merry"—

"Oh, no, no, no! I love merry people."

"It was our cider day, you know."

"Certainly, certainly—plenty of cider and plenty of merriment. So you came to see about a branch line to your town? Well, after an exhibition of a little custom of my own we will proceed to talk. There's the pail and dipper. Help yourselves."

None of the seven ever knew what the nature of the contents of the pail were. Deacon Harrison drank first, and he looked weary as he turned away. The weariness went down through the line.

"Now for some merriment," said the clubfooted man as he nodded to his three stout retainers.

The trio moved. They cuffed off hats. They slapped the delegates on the back. They gave them the iron elbow. They hustled them up and down and across and laughed and jeered. After ten minutes the boss held up his hand and said:

"The gentlemen must be thirsty. Before there is further merriment give them more drink."

When the said "merriment" ceased there was no man of the seven who could stand on his legs. They had been hustled for fair. As they sat breathing hard and wondering what was coming next the capitalist chuckled and laughed and said:

"This is all, gentlemen. You don't need a railroad to Pineville. You have your cider day, and that's better. As you probably have important engagements elsewhere I will now excuse you."

There was fighting all over town next day. On the next after that there was a public meeting to abolish cider day, and if you are looking for trouble you enter the town some day and ask why it hasn't a railroad.

The Orange In Spain.

It is considered a very healthful thing to eat an orange before breakfast. But who can eat an orange well? One must go to Spain to see that done. The senorita cuts off the rind with her silver knife, then, putting her fork into the peeled fruit, she detaches every morsel with her pearly teeth and continues to eat the orange without losing a drop of the juice and lays down the core with the fork still in it.

SHE COLLECTED THE ACCOUNT

By MARY D. JENNINGS

Copyright by American Press Association. 1911.

When Reinhart was in business he sold a man named Merritt some goods that were never paid for. Reinhart sent a collector after him, and the man came back with a black eye. He sent another man, and he came back with a broken jaw. Reinhart found it impossible to get any more collectors after that, for he felt in honor bound to tell them that Merritt was a fighting man and sent every collector back with some damage instead of the amount due.

One day a young woman came into Reinhart's store and asked him if he had any bad debts to give her for collection. She was pretty, and a good natured smile continually played about her red lips, just like a humming bird flitting near a flower.

Suddenly a bright thought struck Reinhart. He would give this girl Merritt's debt to collect. He told her that there was an amount he would like to get in, but felt bound to inform her of the reception his men collectors had met and to warn her that she would be liable to receive some pretty rough treatment.

"Just the kind of man I like," she said, with the same delightful smile "I have no use for these mild mannered men—ha, ha! But you don't think he'll really hurt me, do you?"

Reinhart told her that any man who would hurt such a charming young woman would be a brute indeed and assured her that if she received any bodily injury from Merritt he (Reinhart) would have Merritt arrested and see that he was punished.

The amount of the bill was $185.57, with $38.42 for interest. Reinhart told the girl (Miss Anthon she called herself) that he would give her half the amount if she succeeded in collecting it all and 50 per cent of whatever amount she did collect. He made out a fresh bill and gave it to the collector, and she went away smiling.

The next day Miss Anthon went to see Merritt, with the same pleasant smile on her face, and succeeded in getting into his house without his knowing her errand. He received her kindly, but when she sprung the bill on him he told her that if she didn't leave instantly she would be ejected. She replied by sitting down in Merritt's study—he was a literary man—and, removing her hat, let him see that she was going to stay till she chose to go. But she smiled on him that perpetual smile of hers, and the debtor, forgetting his debt, watched it, wondering where it came from. She didn't seem a bit afraid, paying no attention to his threat to have her put out. She rattled on about various things in a simple and childlike way, saying nothing more about the collection. She sat an hour, after which she arose and asked if Merritt would take up the matter of paying Reinhart's account if the interest were remitted. Since there was nothing very definite in this, Merritt said that if the interest were deducted he would surely consider putting the matter in shape for ultimate payment.

He chuckled when he closed the door on the collector and thought what an innocent, guileless girl she was. Surely Reinhart had resorted to a very stupid method of getting his account. But Merritt noticed that the girl had left her smile behind her. He was writing a story at the time of her entrance and attempted to continue it after her departure. It refused to be continued. It seemed to Merritt that his characters were laughing at him. He threw down his pen and, taking up his hat, started out to walk off this indisposition for work that had come upon him.

The next afternoon Miss Anthon called again on Mr. Merritt, and it seemed to the author that a fountain sparkling and making rainbows in the sun had come in with her. She began by saying something pleasant, and ran from that to something else pleasant, and then something else pleasanter still, till it occurred to Merritt that she was like the girl in the fairy story who every time she spoke, dropped a pearl from her lips. She made herself at home as before, and Merritt made no threat of ejectment. When she departed she told him that Reinhart was perfectly willing to throw off the interest from his bill, and she wished to know what Mr. Merritt thought of a compromise of the account at 50 cents on the dollar.

Merritt dismissed her, saying that he thought 50 cents on the dollar quite enough to pay under the circumstances, and Miss Anthon took her departure, again leaving her smile behind her. A fortnight passed and she had not called again. Merritt missed her. One day he met her on the street and asked her when she was coming to receive payment for the compromise amount of the Reinhart bill. She told him that Reinhart wanted the full amount of the bill, with the interest.

"Well, come in and talk it over," he said.

The next day Merritt was revived by a call from the collector. It seemed that he had been living at the north pole in December and with her entrance he had been transferred to the land of the never setting sun.

To shorten a long story, Merritt agreed to pay the full amount of the account on installments. Miss Anthon called for the installments, giving a receipt and a smile for each For the last installment she gave him a kiss and he gave her an engagement ring

KILL MORE THAN WILD BEASTS

The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back, if not satisfied. Only 50c at All Druggists.

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

A Disappearance

By RUTH B. SEVERANCE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There was a ring at the telephone. Mrs. Martindale answered the call and received an inquiry from her husband's office asking if he were at home. Mrs. Martindale replied that he was not and asked why the inquiry was made. The answer was that a gentleman who had an appointment with him was waiting for him; that Mr. Martindale had gone out to lunch and had not returned.

Mr. Martindale did not come home to dinner. His wife telephoned to his club and to every other place where he was likely to go without finding any trace of him. He did not come home that night. The next morning a newspaper contained an item stating that a well dressed man had been seen at 9 o'clock the previous evening to jump off a ferryboat. It was so dark that those who had seen him jump could give very little description of his personal appearance.

Mrs. Martindale was frantic. She feared that this suicide was her husband. Unfortunately the body was not recovered. A body changed beyond recognition was fished up weeks afterward, but there was no certainty that it was the remains of Mr. Martindale. After the police had searched several months for the missing man without finding him his wife reluctantly came to the conclusion that he was the man who had jumped from the ferryboat. Since his business and domestic affairs were in the most satisfactory condition it was supposed that he had committed suicide under a fit of temporary mental aberration.

* * * * * * *

A man ragged, unshaven, furrows in his face indicating suffering, appeared at the door of a dwelling and rang the bell. A maid came to the door, and, seeing one who bore the appearance of a tramp and being alone in the house, she was about to shut the door in his face when he asked if Mrs. Martindale was in.

"No," was the brief reply.

"Where is she?"

"In the country."

"Is Mr. Martindale in the city?"

"No. Mr Martindale is dead."

"Mrs. Martindale hasn't married again, has she?" the man asked.

"No. What's that to you?"

Without waiting for a reply she slammed the door. The man turned away. He was Oscar Martindale, the man who had disappeared several years before. He stood on his own doorstep for awhile, looking out on the passing throng, apparently deliberating what to do next. Then, starting down the street, he hailed a trolley car and, riding to the outskirts of the city, stopped at the gate of a cemetery. Entering, he walked into the interior and stopped at a lot of which he was the owner. There was a central monument with the name Martindale on it in raised letters. Underneath was Oscar Martindale, with the date of birth.

But this sight held Mr. Martindale's gaze only for a second; then it turned upon a little headstone on which was the name Edith. The returned man gave a convulsive shudder. One of his children had gone, his little daughter.

Mr. Martindale walked back to the city. He had expended his last nickel. Besides, he preferred to walk. Reaching the business center, he turned into a bank and, going to the cashier's desk, said:

"How are you, Somers?"

The cashier looked at the supposed tramp and asked what he wanted.

"Five hundred dollars."

Somers glared. "For whose account?" he asked presently.

"Martindale. I am Oscar Martindale."

The cashier peered into the man's face for a fully half a minute; then, arising and taking both of Martindale's hands in his, exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, Oscar, have you come to life?"

Half an hour later the cashier sent a telegram to Mrs. Martindale saying that he had news of her husband. Mrs. Martindale replied that she would be at home by the first train.

Mr. Martindale left the bank with a roll of bills in his pocket, purchased new apparel and, going to his house, rang the bell. When the maid opened the door he simply said, "Maggie, I'm Mr. Martindale," and walked upstairs. An hour later, after he had shaved and taken a bath, he came down, and the maid, who had been in doubt what to do in the matter and was about to call the police, recognized her master. He informed her that her mistress would soon be at home and later that he would go out and order something for dinner.

At 6 o'clock the table was set and a good dinner prepared, while Mr. Martindale awaited the return of his family. Presently a carriage drove up to the house and there was a ring at the bell. As Maggie passed through the hall to answer the summons her master directed her to ask her mistress to step into the dining room.

Mrs. Martindale entered in a state of excitement, followed by her children.

"There's a gentleman in the dining room," said the maid.

Mrs. Martindale led the way to the dining room, and there stood her husband. She fell into his arms.

At the family reunion dinner, which was later brought in, the husband and father told them that he had undoubtedly suffered one of those sudden lapses of memory that are not of infrequent occurrence.

An English Ghost.

A Westmoreland ghost used to haunt the shores of Windermere, where the Lowthers from time immemorial have been lords of the lake—the "crier of Claife." One tempestuous night in prereformation times a cry was heard across the water by the ferryman at the Nab inn—"A boat!" The ferryman, against all his cronies' persuasions at the inn, set out. After many hours he reached the Nab again, his boat dragged down by some unseen weight and himself with hair on end, a raving lunatic. Soon he died, and every stormy night his wraith was heard in agonized shrieks across from Claife till at last the resident monk of Furness was sought in his retreat on Lady Holm and persuaded to "lay" the unhappy spirit, which he duly did. Harriet Martineau and others tell the tale.—London Chronicle.

The Weaker Sex.

The young woman had spent a busy day.

She had browbeaten fourteen salespeople, bullyragged a floorwalker, argued victoriously with a milliner, laid down the law to a modiste, nipped in the bud a taxi chauffeur's attempt to overcharge her, made a street car conductor stop the car in the middle of a block for her, discharged her maid and engaged another and otherwise refused to allow herself to be imposed upon.

Yet she did not smile that evening when a young man begged:

"Let me be your protector through life?"—Life.

New Angle on Help.

"Why did you inquire so particularly into the wardrobe of that girl you just hired?" asked one of two women who were leaving an employment agency.

"To find out how carefully she will guard against burglars," said the other. "My experience has been that a girl who has nice things of her own will lock up more securely at night and keep a sharper eye out for sneak thieves in the daytime than one who has nothing of value to lose."—New York Press.

She Was Right.

"How effusively sweet that Mrs. Blondewell is to you, Jonesey," said Witherell. "What's up? Any tender attachment?"

"No, indeed. Why, that woman hates me," said Jonesey.

"She doesn't show it," said Witherell.

"No, but she knows that I know how old she is. We were both born on the same day," said Jonesey, "and she's afraid I'll tell somebody."—Harper's Weekly.

The First Lighthouse.

The first lighthouse was erected on Pharos, near Alexandria, in Egypt. It was finished in 280 B. C. Its height was 550 feet, and the light, which was kept burning on top at night, was visible forty-one miles away. This tower existed for some 1,600 years, when it was destroyed by an earthquake.

The Idea.

"Can a married man acquire happiness?"

"Sure! You don't think that bachelors are the only ones that die, do you?"—Toledo Blade.

Women and Banking.

The cashier of a bank which has many women depositors, in speaking of these customers, said that the stock stories about overdrawn accounts and ignorance as to bank methods had become pointless. "Whatever may have been the case before, women give banks no more trouble now than men. The woman who insists on drawing money when her balance has been exhausted because there are still blank checks in her book has disappeared, and in her place we have a woman who wants interest on her money and who knows what 'call money' means," said the cashier. Referring to the old kind he added: "One day we did have a real case. A woman rushed in, said she had just figured up her account and found she was $500 short. Husband away—no other money—what could she do? She had brought jewels to leave as collateral security till he returned, and then we looked up the matter and found she had over $800 to her credit."—New York Tribune.

A Dance Without a Smile.

They have a singular kind of dance conducted on the greens of country villages in Russia. The dancers stand apart, a knot of young men here, a knot of maidens there, each sex by itself and silent as a crowd of mutes. A piper breaks into a tune. A youth pulls off his cap and challenges his girl with a wave and a bow. If the girl is willing she waves her handkerchief in token of assent. The youth advances, takes a corner of the handkerchief in his hand and leads his lassie round and round. No word is spoken and no laugh is heard. Stiff with cords and rich with braids, the girl moves heavily by herself, going round and round and never allowing her partner to touch her hand. The pipe goes droning on for hours in the same key and measure, and the prize of merit in this "circling," as the dance is called, is given by spectators to the lassie who in all that summer revelry has never spoken and never smiled.

Wanted More Converts.

Southey in his life of Wesley relates the following whimsical incident. He states that some of the opponents of these religionists in the excess of zeal against enthusiasm took up a whole wagon load of Methodists and carried them before a justice. When they were asked what these persons had done there was an awkward silence. At last one of the accusers said: "Why, they pretend to be better than other people, and, besides, they pray from morning till night."

The magistrate asked if they had done nothing else.

"Yes, sir," an old man said. "An't please your worship, they have converted my wife. Till she went among them she had such a tongue, and now she is as quiet as a lamb."

"Carry them back; carry them back," the magistrate said, "and let them convert all the scolds in the town!"

Icebergs and Echoes.

Icebergs are always a source of worry to the transatlantic steamship skippers. It isn't pleasant to run along through a fog or a murky night and smash into one of these floating mountains of ice. The liner captains have a way of finding ice that at first strikes the landsman as curious. When it is suspected there are bergs in the neighborhood the whistle is kept going. If there is an echo the navigator slows down and keeps a sharp eye out, for echoes don't grow in the open ocean.

Disraeli's Gorgeous Costume.

When Disraeli was a young man he once went on a vacation trip to Corfu in this extraordinary costume: "A blood red shirt with silver buttons as big as shillings, an immense scarf for girdle, full of pistols and daggers; red cap, red slippers, broad blue striped jacket and trousers. His servant, engaged for the occasion, wore a Mameluke dress of crimson and gold, with a white turban thirty yards long and a saber glittering like a rainbow."—London Spectator.

The Difficulty.

The First Worker—Manner born be blowed! D'yer mean ter say if me an' you come into a bit of splash we couldn't keep our ends up with these 'ere dooks and people?

His Doubting Friend—Oh, we should be orl right, but our missuses'd give the game away, yer know.—London Sketch.

The Landlubber.

They were enlightening the landlubber as to maritime matters. He was becoming more and more crestfallen as their explanations progressed.

"Why, I always thought," he sadly sighed, "that the port side of a ship was the one nearest port!"—Boston Herald.

Maddening.

"They really fear she will become insane. You see, she found a diary he kept before he married her."

"Oh, I see. And the awful revelations"—

"Revelations? No. It was all in cipher, and she couldn't read a word of it."—London Tit-Bits.

An Affront.

D'Auber—Your daughter paints in the Dutch school, does she not?

Mrs. Newrich—Not much she don't! We pay $5 a quarter to give her private lessons at home. Dutch school indeed!—Philadelphia Record.

Posting Mother.

"Did that young man kiss you last night?"

"Mother, do you suppose he came all this way up here just to hear me sing?"

Looking and Seeing.

There is much in knowing how to see sights. The discreet and skillful person when confronted with a variety of attractions will carefully select those that are for him the best and then will devise means to see them with the least wear and tear. But there are excitable people who set out to see everything, tire themselves out, see only half of anything and are dissatisfied in the end.

Good Guess.

"Yes," said the man who had made a good many millions by half wrecking railroads and then buying in the stock when he had caused it to drop to almost nothing, "I was mistaken for a burglar once."

"Is that so?" replied one who had bought at 80 and sold out at 13, "the fellow who did the mistaking must have been able to see pretty well in the dark."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Partial Alibi.

"She claims she has a perfect alibi."

"What is her alibi?"

"She says she can prove that at the very time the crime was committed her own little girl was brushing her hair."

"That proves an alibi for her hair, but how about herself?"—Houston Post.

A FRENCHMAN'S STORY

By NORMAN GRANGER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I have been often in Paris, and the last time I was there I went to a restaurant for my meals in a house that had recently been the dwelling of a wealthy man. The landlord spoke English, and when I asked him some questions about how he came to secure so fine a house for such a purpose into his reply he wove a story. There was nothing very novel in the substance. The interest lay rather in the telling by a man who spoke English indifferently.

"Thees house was occupy by M. Chauteau, a reech gentilhomme, who haf ferry fine daughter. Mlle. Elise Chauteau she mak fool of herself when she want to marry Gaston Lefevre, a young man ferry poor church mouse. Mademoiselle tell Gaston she marry him in spite her fadder, in spite eferybodies. But M. Chauteau he find out hees daughter lof poor young man, and he mak arrangements for her to marry a reech man right off, ferry queeck. He tell M. Bourdon he lak have heem for son-in-law. M. Bourdon reech man, and he lak to marry reech woman. Marriage in France not lak marriage in Amerique. French girl git husband through her fadder.

"M. Chauteau tell M. Bourbon, 'I gif my daughter 100,000 francs. How much you gif?'

"'I gif 100,000 francs too. That mak 200,000 francs. Your daughter haf that to spend on fine clothes. That mak her ferry happy.'

"'All right. You go ask mademoiselle to be your wife.'

"M. Bourbon he go ask mademoiselle eef she be his wife for 100,000 francs.

"Mees Chauteau she say: 'Yees, I lak to be your wife ferry much. Haf a glass of wine?' M. Bourdon drink glass wine with mademoiselle. Then he go away. The next matin he go to M. Chauteau, ferry pale, and he say:

"'M. Chauteau, you haf done me great honor to let me marry your daughter. Mademoiselle do me great honor to consent to marry me.'

"'And you do me great honor, too, monsieur.'

"'Yees, we all do each udder great honor, but I t'ink I no lak get married just now. I not good enough for your daughter.'

"'What you mean, monsieur? Didn't you ask me for my daughter?'

"'Yees, monsieur.'

"'And didn't you ask my daughter to be your wife?'

"'Yees, monsieur.'

"'Then you mean to insult me, to insult my daughter! By gar, I break efery bone in your body!'

"'I not insult you; I not insult your daughter. I not lak to die just yet. I lak to lif a leetle longer.'

"'What you mean?'

"'I go ask mademoiselle eef she be my wife. Mademoiselle she kind enough to say, "You do me great honor, Mr. Bourdon." And she mak' me happy to say she be my wife. But she mak' me unhappy anudder way. Mademoiselle ask me to haf glass of wine. I ver' happy, ver' much honor, to drink the health of my fiancee. I tak' all in de glass down at one gulp. Then I go home.

"'What's that in my stomach? Eet must be I drink in that glass of wine hot coals. I roll on de floor; I cry; I tell Gascoine go queek for the doctor. The doctor come, and he put pump down my throat and pump out de wine your honored daughter kind enough to gif me. Ferry fine girl Mlle. Chauteau. I ferry much honored to be her mari, but I t'ink I remain bachelor leetle while longer.'

"M. Chauteau ferry glad to hush up thees matter that his daughter gif a suitor something hot in de wine. Mebbe that be poison; mebbe it be she put tabasco in de bottle. Anyway, M Bourdon haf enough of her. He tell her fadder to mak' his excuses to hees daughter and say he remain bachelor leetle while longer.

"Then M. Chauteau he shut hees daughter up in thees house and lock all the doors and close the windows so that Gaston Lefevre not get in or Mlle. Elise get out. But when two lofers mak' up their minds to lofe they ferry hurt to shut up so they didn't get out. One night robbers broke into the house, but they didn't steal anything except Mlle. Elise. One of those robbers was Gaston Lefevre.

"When M. Chauteau knew that hees daughter had gone off to marry that poor man he rave lak madman. Then he go away by himself somewhere and put up papier on thees house for rent. One day I come along and see the bill, and I go to the agent, and I rent the house for cafe."

"What wine will monsieur drink?"

"I certainly don't want the kind Mlle. Chauteau gave her fiance. You didn't take any of it off her father's hands with the house, did you?"

"No, monsieur, no! I assure monsieur that mademoiselle put pepper or something lak that in de wine. I bring all my wine here."

I ordered what I fancied, and he went away, saying: "I must go now. As you Americans say, 'I haf some fish to fry.'"

"Well," I said, "when you have fried your fish come back and tell me another love story. You needn't trouble yourself about the substance. All love stories are alike. You have a quaint way of telling yours. Then the politeness of you French people is delicious. We American men are deferential to women, but we don't carry our deference so far as to take off our hats to them when they pour hot stuff into us."

Cards and Card Playing.

In a paper in the Journal of the Royal Society of Arts Professor H. Cheney, discussing the part played by gambling in magic, observes: "The use of cards is said to be derived from the Tarot cards, which were originally employed for occult purposes. The legend which ascribes the invention of cards to the purpose of amusing a mad king does not seem at all a sufficient explanation, and there is in addition the fact that cards of a kind existed before the said king. In further support of this idea the well known practice of telling fortunes by cards [illegible] garded as a [illegible] regular form of divination by such means. It seems, in fact, that card playing for stakes is a mere development of a ceremony in which individuals consulting the oracle decided to abide by its pronouncements as to the holding of disputed property.

What's the Matter With Thomas?

There are some names which seem peculiarly suited to royalty; Louis, for instance, has a kingly sound. Francis, George, Henry in both spellings, Charles, William, Edward and James all have served their turn. Johns there have been, and Stephens. I remember a Robert in Sicily and a Peter in Russia and Servia. Frederick has often worn the crown, and royal honors are even now paid to Ferdinand in Bulgaria. But was there ever, anywhere, a king named Thomas? Oscars and even Haakens ascend the dais, but ever through all the centuries Thomas remains the subject, sometimes struggling up to a bishopric or an earldom, but never attaining the crown. Nicholases wear the imperial purple; Godfreys lord it over Jerusalem; Alexis struts in ermine; Alexanders fare forth to conquest; Julius and Leo don the triple crown, but Thomas, poor plebeian Thomas, has never a crown to his name. Now tell me, you who are wise in the occult influence of names, what is the matter with Tom?—London Idler.

Washington as a Humorist.

While president Washington's humor seemed to find expression in the diplomacy of self protection. A French revolutionist came to him for a general testimonial, which Washington did not care to grant, yet he did not wish to give offense to the French by a curt refusal, so he wrote an evasive card worthy of Lincoln—"C. Volney needs no recommendation from G. Washington."

After Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown Washington treated him with high consideration. At a dinner given in honor of the distinguished prisoner Rochambeau proposed "The United States" as his toast; Washington responded with "The king of France;" Cornwallis, perforce, faintly suggested "His majesty," when Washington startled them all by announcing, "The king of England—may he stay there!" with a ready wit that made even Cornwallis laugh.—Century.

Meteors and the Atmosphere.

One of the most useful results arising from the study of sporadic meteors is the light thrown upon the question of the height of the atmosphere, since it is the friction of the air that sets them on fire, and if their elevation is known at the moment of their first appearance the probable height of the atmosphere can be calculated. On Aug. 11, 1909, a brilliant meteor happened to impress its picture simultaneously on three photographic plates, at Tashkend, Iskander and Tschimgan, in Russian Turkestan. The distances between these places furnished base lines from which the height could be deduced. The calculation shows that the meteor first appeared at a height of 69.45 miles above the earth and disappeared at fifty miles.

The Orange In Spain.

It is considered a very healthful thing to eat an orange before breakfast. But who can eat an orange well? One must go to Spain to see that done. The senorita cuts off the rind with her silver knife, then, putting her fork into the peeled fruit, she detaches every morsel with her pearly teeth and continues to eat the orange without losing a drop of the juice and lays down the core with the fork still in it.

Unpalatable.

The Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon was fond of a joke, and his keen wit was, moreover, based on sterling common sense. One day he remarked to one of his sons:

"Can you tell me the reason why the lions didn't eat Daniel?"

"No, sir. Why was it?"

"Because the most of him was backbone and the rest was grit."—Youth's Companion.

Going the Rounds.

Husband of Tomorrow (reviewing wedding presents)—That awful cruet seems familiar. Wife of Tomorrow—Yes, dear, you saw it at the Browns. They got it as a wedding present and gave it to the Smiths at theirs. It's the Smiths' present. But never mind, dear; Harry's wedding comes off soon!—London Opinion.

Adroit.

"He is what you might call an adroit man."

"Decidedly. His sins never find him out and his debts never find him in."—Exchange.

Chilly Affair.

Stella—Did you give the bride a shower? [illegible] all her friends threw cold water on the bridegroom.—New York Sun.

A [illegible]

At Last.

A well known clergyman, called to other duties, says a writer in the Western Christian Advocate, preached his last sermon before the installation of his successor. The local paper, in announcing the order of services, gave it as follows:

"Sermon by the Rev. Blank; solo and quartet, 'Hushed at Length.'"

His Wanderings.

Stranger—What wonderful tales old Blinks relates! He must have been a great traveler in his day. Native—He was never outside the county in his life; but, you see, his mind has wandered for years.

Just Like Eggs.

Miss A.—So your wife keeps you continually in hot water, you poor man. Mr B.—Oh, that's all right. We husbands are like eggs. Keep us in hot water and we become hardened.—Boston Transcript.

Woe Is His.

First.—My wife is my boss. I shall not deny.

Second.—She maketh me to lie down behind the bed when swell company comes, and she leadeth me behind her up Main street.

Third.—She restoreth my pocketbook after she has spent all of its contents for stylish skirts and theater tickets, and she leadeth me up the main aisle at church for her new hat's sake.

Fourth.—Yea, though I walk more than half the night through dark rooms with a crying baby I will get no rest, for she is behind me; her broomstick and her hatpin they do everything else but comfort me.

Fifth.—She prepareth a cold snack for me, then maketh a bee line for an aid society supper. She anointeth my head with the rolling pin occasionally. My arms runneth over with the bundles before she is half done with her shopping.

Sixth.—Surely her dressmaker's and milliner's bills shall follow me all the days of her life, and I will dwell in the house of my wife forever.—Urich (Mo.) Herald.

Signaling at Sea.

The custom of signaling at sea by means of various colored flags is very ancient, and the method seems to have been brought to a degree of development bordering very closely on perfection. Many people have been astonished at the length of messages conveyed in a few moments and with the use of but half a dozen flags in various combinations, and when the extent of the language and the complexity of many necessary messages are considered the eighteen flags in the signal flag locker seem very inadequate. However, it must be remembered that the signal code utilizes a sort of shorthand, and many long messages, known to be of frequent occurrence, have been contracted to a single showing of flags in a given combination. The number of flags hoisted when a signal is made never exceeds four. With the eighteen flags of various colors, using four for each signal, no fewer than 78,642 combinations can be made.

Generally.

"Pa," said Freddy, "what is a social scale?"

"Generally speaking," replied pa, "it's a place where they weigh money."

Early Combines and Corners.

"Engrossing" was an offense punishable in England by fine and imprisonment, and the laws against it struck at those—called "engrossers" who planned to gain control over necessities, such as grain or foodstuffs in considerable quantities, either by purchase or otherwise, with the intention of raising prices. The statute book holds quite a series of enactments designed to prevent anything in the nature of what we know as a "corner" or "combine." "Regrating" was a criminal offense, and so was "forestalling." The former consisted of buying and selling the same day in the same market or near it, and the latter implied the purchase of merchandise on the way to market or before the hour at which the market commenced with the intention of selling at a profit, while it was also "forestalling" to circulate rumors calculated to raise the prices of commodities. Though these laws have fallen into desuetude, they were in force in our grandfathers' time.—London Mail.

He Let Her Sleep.

Some years ago a Swansea vessel was caught in a terrible gale. The captain had his wife on board, and when the wind was still rising he told her to go down below and sleep, for all was well. He remained on the bridge till the mate came up and said: "We've done all we can. Hadn't you better tell the chaps to get out the boats?"

"Yes, yes, my lad, if you think so," said the captain, who knew the only choice left was whether to go down with the ship or in a small boat, which couldn't live ten seconds in that sea. The engineers came up with the news that the fires were all out. "Very well, my lads," said the captain quietly; "save yourselves if you can."

"Won't you fetch the wife on deck, sir?" asked one of the men.

"No," was the calm reply; "let her sleep, poor old girl. I am going down to have a smoke." And, smoking by the bedside of his sleeping wife, he went down with the ship.

Modern Maps.

There are Egyptian maps dating from 1400 B. C., but in spite of this long history it has been astonishingly difficult to make progress in charts until very recent times. Errors are perpetuated; truth is forgotten; advance is slow. As late as 1900 charts of the Alaskan coast issued by the United States were said to be thirty miles wrong, and nearly all commercial map makers still represent mountain chains as caterpillars, and the fringe of the shore is adorned with a blue wavy frill. As for railroad maps, the less said the better, the great railroad map of the northern belt of the United States adorning the walls of the Broad street Pennsylvania station in Philadelphia being distorted east and west, north and south and otherwise, its accuracy in large part not being over 80 per cent, yet it is a more than usually good railroad map.—Engineering Magazine.

The Last Gladiators.

It was in A. D. 430, that the edict was passed which forever abolished the gladiatorial combats. In the deserts of Lybia there lived a monk named Telemachus, who, touched by the cruel stories of the combats, went to Rome, leaped over the barrier of the arena of the Coliseum, threw himself between the groups of fighters and implored them in the name of Christ to desist. Telemachus fell, slain by the swords of the gladiators, but there never was another fight in the Coliseum. The spirit of the monk had its effect, and the above mentioned edict was soon passed.

A Witty Reply.

On one occasion an important dress rehearsal at His Majesty's theater was prolonged until the small hours of the morning. The company grew very weary, particularly a gentleman who had been with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree in a good many productions, but who had never attained to more than a very tiny part. When the time came to rehearse his few lines he was so tired that his voice was anything but distinct.

"What's the matter, Mr. Z.?" asked Sir Herbert in his most sarcastic tones. "Are you saving your voice for the rehearsal?"

"No, Sir Herbert," was the retort. "I've never been able to save anything under your management."

Sir Herbert, an exceedingly witty man himself, was so pleased with the retort that the salary of the small part man was raised.—London M. A. P.

4 Publications. June 23-30 July 7-14

Soil moisture can be conserved for next year by early plowing. This has been demonstrated in Oklahoma in a five-year test. Land plowed there in the middle of July, during a five-year period, produced twenty-seven bushels of wheat per acre; that plowed about the middle of August produced twenty-four bushels per acre; that plowed during the middle of September yielded twenty-two bushels per acre. It will be found, when a comparison is made, say about the middle of September, between land that is plowed now and a fine mulch maintained, and land plowed in September—that there is a vast difference in the soil moisture, in favor of early polwing and harrowing. This will be especially noticeable when the comparison is made with land on which weeds have been permitted to grow until plowing is done in September.

EXAMINERS' FULL REPORT

Condition of Records Warrant The Investigation. Many Irregularities and Misdemeanors.

The City Treasurer and City Clerk have both furnished surety bonds which are on file in the City Clerk's office; the Treasurer's bond being $8,000 and the City Clerk's for $1,000 in accordance with a resolution passed by the City Council on January 5, 1910.

On March 31, 1911, the First National Bank of Thief River Falls was elected City Depository, but has not qualified by filing bonds with the City Clerk. The balance on deposit January 1, 1911 amounted to $8,671.17.

The books and accounts are well kept and bills, with one single exceptiogn (Warrant No. 10971, referred to later in the report) passed upon by the City Council before being paid by City Warrant, as stipulated by law.

Irregularities

Attached to this report is a copy of letter to the Public Examiner's department, from Chas. E. Boughton, as counsel for the petitioners, dated Red Lake Falls, June 14, 1911, in which letter is set forth some specific charges against the administration of the city affairs. These charges were taken up during the examination of the bills and warrants and the following facts are hereby reported: 1. City Warrant No. 9462 for $84.00, made out to Mark Fitzpatrick, facts as stated in the letter.

2. City Warrant No. 9838 for $84. made out to Mark Fitzpatrick. Facts as statd in the letter.

3. City Warrant No. 8189 for $900.00 made to Mark Fitzpatrick. Facts as stated in the letter.

4. City Warrant No. 9310 for $175.00 drawn in favor of T. P. Hamre, Mayor. Facts as stated in the letter.

5. City Warrant No. 9640 made out to Mark Fitzpatrick. Facts as stated in the letter.

6. "Bills of the Langseth Mercantile Company furnished the city have been audited and allowed in amounts aggregating many hundreds of dollars." This is true, but Mayor Hamre denies that he has any pecuniary interest in the Langseth Mercantile Company.

To the firm of Jensen & Son, of which firm Alderman Jens P. Jensen is a member, are paid some minor bills for teamwork.

7. "Bills of the Mayor and City Attorney for expenses not a legal charge against city were frequently allowed and paid." Carefully scrutinizin the bills and vouchers, I have found the following charges to be questionable:

Warrant No. 11061, G. Halvorson, 3 days time in trip to St. Paul.$30.00
Warrant No. 11062, G. Halvorson, to service in negotiating bonds, $40.
Warrant No. 11063, G. Halvorson, 5 days time in trip to St. Paul, $50.00
Warrant No. 10955, G. Halvorson 2 days time for city, $10.00
Warrant No. 10337, G. Halvorson, Salary as manager of Auditorium, June, July and August, 1910. $45.00
Warrant No. 10747, G. Halvorson salary as manager of Auditorium, September, October and November, 1910 ....$45.00
Warrant No. 11044, G. Halvorson Salary as manager Auditorium, Dec. 1910, Jan. Feb. and March, 1911 ....$60.00

Part of these bills and all warrants to Mayor T. P. Hamre are for expenses paid out for traveling in the city's business and same is true as to warrant No. 10971, issued to Emil Sedlacek for expenses for himself, Mayor Hamre and Alderman Forder, in going to St. Paul in telephone case. This last warrant is not issued in a regular way, but is approved by the city council by resolution and a unanimous vote. The legality of this action may be questionable.

10. Warrant No. 11088 T. P. Hamre for expenses going to St. Paul, $40.70 is considered a legal claim against the city and properly allowed. Under date of April 7th, 1911, the city council decided to send Mayor Hamre and some members of the Commercial Club to St. Paul to look after the City's interest in telephone bill now pending before the legislature."

In regard to the foregoing itemized charges, I have consulted with the Attorney General's office and have received the following verbal opinions:

Items 1, 2, 4 and 5: It is illegal for a member of the City Council or a city officer to work for a man who has a contract with the city and to draw pay for same.

Item 7: The officers of City Attorney and Manager of an Auditorium owned by the city are compatible; consequently, City Attorney Halvorson's claims for $150.00 as salary for manager of Auditorium are legal claims against the city; but his claims for time employed in serving the city during his travelings in bond cases or other cases are not legal claims.

In regard to Item No. 3, I find this to be a legal claim, and in regard to Item 6 it is not claimed by the petitioners or their attorney that any of the parties mentioned have entered into contracts with the city for delivery of any goods or performing any work. The point raised as to the illegality of these claims is a point of law that ought to be settled in the regular way. I found some of the bills approved by one of the petitioners, Mr. Chas. Alexander, during his term as a member of the City Council.

As a post scriptum to the letter from Chas. E. Boughton, hereinbefore referred to, is a charge that money appropriated as salary to the Mayor's private secretary is not properly used. There is no evidence in the records of the City Clerk and City Council to substantiate this claim, but after the close of the examination I received a written answer from the parties involved, which answer, also covering other charges made by the petitioners, is attached to this report and referred to as a part of same.

In addition to the charges above mentioned, I found a few small irregularities which I think ought to be avoided in the future, to-wit:

Warrant No. 9676. Thief Rivr Falls Lumber Co. $235.73
Bill not sworn to.

Several bills rendered to the Electric Light Department from outside firms, as for instance Northwestrn Electric Equipment Co., St. Paul, St. Paul Electric Co., Bryan Marsh Co., Chicago, and others are not sworn to.

Bills for library books from outside firms are not sworn to.

Receipts for bills paid by the Superintendent of the Electric Light Plant are not filed with the warrants.

Warrant No. 10020 to J. H. Hay, $300, appropriated for "Memorial Day Exercises," by resoltion passed by the Council June 15, 1910. The appropriation should have been made in advance.

In a certain report filed April 7, 1911 by N. J. Anderson, Emil Sedlacek and G. W. Booren, as a Committee on checking up the management of the Auditorium, charges are made that no reports of receipts are made for one performance, Oct. 10, 1910 by the "Glascow Select Choir".

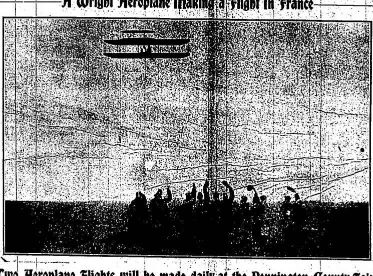
A Wright Aeroplane Making a Flight In France



Two Aeroplane Flights will be made daily at the Pennington County Fair August 2-3-4

The attractions which the fair management have secured to appear here during the Pennington County Fair, to be held August 2d, 3d and 4th, are far better than have ever been obtained before, and are certainly well representative of what is being done in the way of 20th century amusements.

The flying mahine, in charge of the well-known aviator McGoey, will of course, be the main attraction. There will be two flights each day. McGoey has been flying in Grand Forks this week, and reports from there say that no better exhibition flights have ever been given. The aviator and his machine are not an experiment. They have been making good wherever a flight was advertised to take place.

Three free acts have been engaged to take place on the fair grounds in front of the grand stand. These acts are put on by the famous Meier Bros., who are acrobats, gymnasts and entertainers of more than usual ability. Another startling attraction, one that will appeal to those who like the sensational, is the "Leaping of the Death Gap" on a bicycle.

There will be a balloon ascention each evening to take place down town. This act will be in charge of "Dare-Devil" Robinson. He promises to give the people a few new sensations in aerial navigation. Another pleasure place which will be located down town, is a Merry-Go-Round, popularly known as the Carry-Us-All. It is the same kind as the one which is now thrilling the people at Wonderland Park, Minneapolis.

The Warren baseball team will again try conclusions with the local team the second day of the fair. The teams are evenly matched, each having a game to their credit to date. The Warren band will be here on that day to assist the Thief River Band. Warren has "some" band all right. —They are going to play at the State fair, too. On the last day of the fair Detroit ball team will be here to give the "Indians" a chance to get even with them for what they did to the "Indians" last Sunday. There's no question but that there will be something interesting doing every second of the game.

Plan to be at the fair all three days and to bring with you any fruit, vegetables, stock, fancy work, educational, or other work that looks good to you. Help boost the fair and by so doing you will help boost yourself and your community.

All the barns, fences, exhibition buildings, the grounds and the race track are being put in readiness for the big event. By the end of this week the barns will have been cleaned and repaired so as to give ample and sanitary surroundings for the stock; the exhibition buildings will have been remodeled and painted thru out so that all exhibits can be shown in neat and attractive surroundings; and, the race track will be the best ever.

—The Carlson Bros., of Erskine, will have on the fair grounds their prize herd of cattle. This will be a treat of itself that no one can afford to miss.

Watch for the program next week.

MASS MEETING MONDAY

All Agreed Steam Plant Is Only Solution of Power Problem.

All Agreed Steam Plant Is Only Solution of Power Problem.

The mass meeting called together Monday night was well attended and perfectly unanimous about the best cure for our prsent light and power troubles. All were agreed that Red Lake itself has little water to give. That our water power is fast fading away was the sentiment of many. That a steam plant to take its place is the only feasible way of meeting the present exigency was accepted by all. Most of those present by rising vote gave their authority to the council to immediately go ahead with the proposed $25,000 400-horse power steam plant without awaiting returns from the vote on the necessary bonds. A few remained quiet in their seats, perhaps fearing to entrust so much arbitrary power in the hands of the present city administration. On the other hand, some really seemed anxious to leap before they looked.

There was considerable talk of making the change at this time from the direct system. Some arguing, that, if the change must be made some time, it would be economy to make it now when the plant anyway is standing still and likely will be for the next three months, as the change will take time and labor to put through.

For the proposed new plant new dynamos must be ordered and if the change is not made now they in turn will habe to be discarded and repdaced by others when the change is made, so the audience was told by Leonard Peterson of the light departmen.

The location of the new plant occupied the attention of the meeting for a while. There was some sentiment against building a large new plant on leased property. However, no definite understanding was reached as to place of building.

It is to be presumed that with the encouragement the council met with they will proceed without delay to get facts and figures and quotations that will make it possible for them to present to another mass meeting in a few days more definitely what sum will be needed, what equipment they propose to get after more mature thought, what the proposed change can be made for, and how necessary it is to make it, plans for the new power house and, lastly, options on half a dozen desirable locations for the plant. With these things more definitely laid before it the citizens will be able to take more intelligent action.

All seemed anxios to do something for the lasting good and weal of Thief River Falls.

SOCIAL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Ives entertained Judge and Mrs. Ives of Cass Lake last Sunday, the occasion being the eightieth birthday anniversary of the judge. At eleven o'clock the party accompanied by the children, Peggy and Nelly, motored to Red Lake Falls, arriving at the home of Mrs. Harry Ives' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pirath at twelve thirty.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with sweet peas, their fragrance filling the entire house. The center piece on the dinning table was a mammoth birthday cake decorated with eighty pink candles in rose holders. In the center of the cake the figure "80" was outlined with pink roses, the same also bordering the cake.

At one-thirty a chicken dinner, with all the fresh vegetables from Mr. Pirath's famous garden, was served, followed by a fruit salad and a pudding which would tempt the most exacting epicure, accompanied by coffee. It was a feast the preparation of which places Mrs. Piarth's name in the hall of fame for fine cooking.

Between the dinner and dessert the rooms were darkened and the candles lighted on the cake, the large number of which made a most brilliant showing. The ceremony of cutting the cake was performed by the judge.

Mrs. Pirath was ably assisted by her sister, Mrs. Spellman of Mankato. The party motored to Thief River Falls the same evening.

PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICANS

Meeting Called Thursday August 3rd at 11 A. M. In Registers Office.

We, the undersigned, believeing it necessary for the welfare of the country and the success of the Republican Party, that, the Progressive Element therein be placed in control, hereby issue a call for a mass meeting of the Progressive Republicans of Pennington county to be held at the Register of Deeds Office in the City of Thief River Falls on Thursday, August 3, 1911, at 11 o'clock forenoon.

Be sure to come to this meeting if you are interested in Progressive policies now gaining ground in the Republican Party, and dissatisfied with machine rule, and reactionary policies.

Signed: D. P. O'Neill, Peter Hedeen, Andrew Trovaton, Olaf Larson, Harry E. Ives, E. L. Quist, John O. Swanson, C. N. Urdahl, Lars Backe, P. P. Palmer and Bert Norby.

EXCITING GAME GOES TO DETROIT

Most Evenely Contested game of Season Played At Lake Resort Sunday.

Last Sunday, at the Detroit ball yard, the "Indians" were defeated 6 to 4 in the most evenly contested game of the season. Both teams played excellent ball, and the batting and fielding were about on a par. The errors made by Thief River cost two runs and those by Detroit ore run. In the fifth inning, when the "Indians" were beginning to do things to Baker, Courtney was called out on a rank decision at home. It was, literally speaking, anybody's game until the last man was out in the ninth. In the ninth inning, with Mattson on third and Bowman on second, Christie came to bat and hit a long fly to center field, but Bebeau made a fine running catch and the game was over.

The Lineup:

"Indians"	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Johnstone—lf	5	0	0	0	0	0
Courtney—ss	5	1	2	3	2	0

GERMANTOWN

Annual school meeting came rather early this year, it was well attended and resulted in electing John Clausen as clerk for district No. 76 for the next 3 years.

Mrs. Aug. Ruhnke came over from Superior to look after her farm interests. She was well pleased with the progress the country has made and thought there was no hurry in selling the land.

Mr. Edward Teipke and family came up from Kankakee, Ill., for a visit with his uncle, Aug Ristau and N. Bundhund. He thinks it is very pleasant to live here as it is mild and cool. Wonder if he would like to see it in January about 50 below.

Don't forget the picnic next Sunday.

Carl Bettin was kicked by a horse and was laid up for nearly a week. He is now able to be around again and we are all glad to see him so too.

Oscar Rambeck made a fine improvment along his farm by grading the road. Boys do you know that this increased the value of the farm for at least $500.

A number of farmers gathered at Amund Johnson's place yesterday and commenced talking telephone with the result that 3 men: H. Nabben, Louis Hamre and N. Bundhund were selected to work the thing up. 14 agreed to join the company. When 20 signers are secured there will be actual work started.

THE START OF A WRIGHT AEROPLANE.

FASTEST AEROPLANES, AUTOMOBILES, HORSES AND DOGS AT THE MINNESOTA STATE FAIR.

Speed will be king at the 1911 Minnesota State Fair. Every modern invention for the annihilation of time and space will be seen in races and daring exhibitions. Dan Patch and the world's fastest horses, "Wild Bob" Burman and the world's fastest automobiles, two champion aviators and two of Wright Brothers' most perfect aeroplanes and the world's fastest sheep dogs will be among the speed attractions that will race, attempt to make new world's records, furnish excitement and make the coming fair famous beyond all its predecessors.

F. H. KRATKA,
Postmaster.

Mrs. Louise Cerny, 318 Markley Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The statement I gave for publication three years ago, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills was correct in every detail. I gladly confirm it and add that I have had little kidney trouble since. This complaint bothered me for several years. At times I had backache and dull pains in my back and I was often nervous and weak. The kidney secretions were unnatural and my health was all run down. My supply of Doan's Kidney Pills was procured at Curtis' Drug Store and the good work they did, convinced me of their merits."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milbourn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Sprains require careful treatment. Keep quiet and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely. It will remove the soreness and quickly restore the parts to a healthy condition. For sale by all Druggists.

MAY, PROVE FATAL

When Will Thief River Falls People Learn The Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first;

But when you know 'tis from the kidneys;

That serious kidney troubles follow;

That diabetes, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the statement of a Thief River Falls citizen.

BUYING MINNESOTA BUTTER IN CONNECTICUT.

The Wonders Of The Long-Ditance Telephone And How It Scored A New Commercial Record.

From the dairy farms of Minnesota to the New England market is a long, long way. It used to be considered a prohibitive distance so far as the transaction of a business deal in quick time is concerned. Nowadays all that is charged, at least, in the opinion of a Connecticut dealer who recently called up Minneapolis to buy butter.

Minnesota butter is a commodity that in itself is likely to prove an incentive for the smashing of records. Its fame extends even far as New England, and though in the old days quick, up-to-date transactions at such distances were out of the question, the New Haven firm which resorted to the use of the long-distance telephone to order a carload of butter from Minneapolis has called attention to a very important service between distant cities.

The record for long-distance merchandising is believed to have been established by this instance. The message was received at Minneapolis at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. By nine that evening the car had been loaded and shipped. This assured the receipt of the butter in New Haven at least a day and a half sooner than if the deal had been arranged by mail.

This is only one of the later day wonders of the telephone. Somehow, without any noise or fuss, this little instrument, which only recently observed its thirty-fifth birthday, has won its way into universal acceptance as a necessity. When it was invented is was considered a toy, and was laughed at. That was as recently as 1876.

Today the whole business and social world demands the best in the way of telephone service. The telephon is in every commercial house, in thousands of residences and has even more recently found its way into the farms. This is the most useful work it has done, for lightening the labors and banishing isolation on the farms is an achivement worthy of standing by itself.

To spread telephone service over the farms, where once such a thing was unknown, has been a work of education. Attractive literature has found its way into every corner of rural America, telling the farmers the benefits and value of the telephone. "How to Build Rural Telephone Lines" is the titie of a booklet which the Western Electric Company has been distributing over every section of the country. For it is a fact that the farmers themselves can do most of the work of construction, and this booklet has been made the textrural telephone companies of today have grown.

Work of an educational nature has made possible the network of telephone wires in the farming sections where formerly such a thing was not even thought of. It was education of the sort fostered by the example of man who bought Minnesota butter in Connecticut and who demonstrated what the long-distance telephone can do.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That we, the undersigned, do hereby associate ourselves together for the purpose of becoming incorporated under Chapter 58 of the Revised Laws of the State of Minnesota for 1905 and all acts supplementary thereto and amendatory thereof, and that to this end do hereby adopt and sign the following Articles of Incorporation, to wit:

ARTICLE I.

The name of this corporation shall be Thief River Falls Farmers Exchange Elevator Company.

ARTICLE II.

The general nature of the business of this corporation shall be to buy, sell, store, ship, deal in and handle on commission grain, seeds, flour, feed, fuel, twine, lumber and building material of every description, implement and farm machinery; to purchase, erect, maintain and control elevators and warehouses, and to manufacture flour and feed; to borrow money and transact such other business and to do such other things as may be incidental to any of the above business; to purchase and retail, sell, convey, lease, mortgage, encumber, or improve such real estate, buildings and personal property as the business of the corporation may require.

ARTICLE III.

The principal place of business of this corporation shall be in the City of Thief River Falls, in the county of Pennington, State of Minnesota.

ARTICLE IV.

The amount of Capital Stock of this corporation shall be Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) divided into Four Hundred (400) Shares of the par value of Twenty Five Dollars ($25,00) each. No one person shall be entitled to hold or own more than twenty (20) shares of such stock at any time and all applications for such stock shall be subject to the approval or rejection of the Board of Directors; such corporation shall have the first refusal of any and all stock offered for sale by any stockholder; and each stockholder shall be entitled to but one vote regardless of the number of shares held by him.

ARTICLE V.

This corporation shall begin when these Articles shall have been legally executed or as soon thereafter as Thirty (30) percent of its Capital Stock shall have been sold and shall continue thereafter for a period of Twenty (20) years.

ARTICLE VI.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which this corporation shall at any time be subject, shall not exceed the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000).

ARTICLE VII.

The government of such corporation and the management of its affairs shall be vested in a Board of seven Directors (all of whom must be stockholders) who shall be elected by the stockholders at the Regular Annual Meeting to be held 2d Sat., of July of each and every year, commencing 1911, and shall hold for one year and until their sucessors are elected and qualified.

ARTICLE VIII

The following named persons are hereby created directors thereof to serve until the first Annual Meeting and until the elected directors shall qualify, to wit: CHAS. EVENSON, T. K. RYNESTAD, PAUL A. DAHLE, BERT NORBY, EMIL JOHNSON, OSCAR SPONHEIM, P. O. SORLOM, all of Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Within four days after the election of a Board of Directors such board shall meet and organize and shall elect from their own number a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, and a Treasurer for the ensuing year. The Board of Directors shall have full power to make and adopt such rules and regulations as they consider necessary from time to time, and to fill any vacancy that may occur in said Board from time to time or its officers.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonals.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN

and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

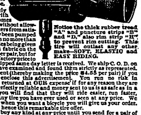
$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.



Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, JULY 21 1911.

Mother Earth is here so kind that you just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.

Don't think that a man is your enemy just because you do not agree on some petty political issue.

Because you disagree with a man on one proposition it does not follow that you have to disagree with him on every proposition.

A vigorous temper is altogether an evil—men who are as easy as an old shoe are generally of as little worth.
—Spurgeon.

The man who confines his work to one line gradually becomes a machine. The man who diversifies his work as well as his thought grows to fill greater spheres every day.

With the expected merger of the Times and Herald of Grand Forks, we can hardly look for any independent editorial thought from that city, except from Sam Haislet's Observer.—Binford Times.

You can't compel or persuade a woman to do certain things but if you give her a little bit of jolly she will do those same things unhesitatingly. Why?—Because she is closely related to man.

The recent school election demonstrated one thing: Many men have contended that if we had woman suffrage and there were a woman candidate the women would all vote for the woman. This concrete example proves the reverse.

In the natural course of events the Red Lake River has become worthless for power as well as for navigation. It now serves only the same purpose as the drainage ditch. In the future, while at times the water may become somewhat higher, there will be no regular navigation and no dependable water power.

CONGRESS

The Congressional Record having been stuffed to repletion with speeches never delivered, liberally interlarded with applause that was never heard, all franked free to the confiding public by statesmen desirous of further patriotic service, the business of the extra session will soon be concluded. The tribunes of the nation will soon be welcomed home to the bosoms of the people.

The most significant development of the session's work has been the desire of the Democrats for a hasty off hand revision of the tariff. They seem utterly to fail to realize what a vast structure of complicated technicalities a tariff schedule is. They complain bitterly about the "jokers" in the Payne-Aldrich tariff.

Yet the haste with which they propose to enact a new tariff is the very condition most favorable to "jokers."

Only a specialist is fitted to grasp the true significance of a tariff rate. Slight changes in the classification and description of goods alter the conditions of an entire industry, sometimes giving a manufacturer a simply hoggish amount of protection, and at other times wiping him off the map. The average Congressman is about as apt to detect the true inwardness of a tariff phraseology as he is to tell whether there is conscious life on the Planet Mars.

The tariff board now working on the wool and other schedules has secured in behalf of the government and of the American people, a band of experts, who are endeavoring to go to the bottom of the thing and no tariff investigators ever went to the bottom of it before. They are trying to find just how much protection a manufacturer needs in order to live on his side of the water.

Making a new tariff in advance of the findings of that board means simply making one that can't last. And this is as true of Canadian Reciprocity, so called, as of any other tariff.

Of course the Democrats have had no serious idea that they could pass a tariff other than reciprocity that the president would sign, even if they could get it by the Senate. They have been simply trying to get a political record made up for free mailing to the voters. This is natural and proper enough, but it forms no basis for judging what the Democratic party would do if it got into power.

AN OLD MAID

Once there was an old maid who said that she did not need to marry. She had a parrot that swore, a monkey that chewed and a cat that went out nights. But the Old Maid needed a bank and YOU need one.

HUMAN INFIRMITIES IN RAILROADING.

The frightful accident last week at Bridgeport, Ct., by which a famous Washington-Botson train was frightfully wrecked, again brings the American public up against the irreducible human element in the matter of railroad accidents.

It is often said that our frightful national record for railroad slaughter is due to the poor equipments of granger roads. But in this case a horrible wreck takes place on one of our finst developed lines.

The expenditure of millions for safety appliances proved helpless to avert a tragedy caused by taking a cross over at 60 miles an hour when 15 miles was the limit of safety.

In every profession and trade occasional human lapses occur, but else where they do not occasion much trouble. Every newspaper man, for instance, may write Smith when he means Jones, and usually the proofreader corrects it. If the mistake gets by, it is very annoying, but usually harmless.

The problem in railroading is how to prevent these occasional lapses that are a part of our wobbly human nature.

In American railroad life, safety has been looked upon as seaondary a luxury beyond our reach. Satistics show from four to five times as many accidents per mile of train runs as in Europe. It is not a question of speed altogether. The single German state of Prussia has 43 trains making an average of 38 miles per hour, while the great trunk lines connecting New York, Buffalo, Pittsburg, St. Louis, and Chicago had but 26 of these trains at the time of this computation.

Disciplining men concerned in accidents does not alwayes remedy the trouble. Frequently that merely substitutes an inexperienced man for one who is trained to the business.

There is too much taking of chances in our American temperament. Some of us are still willing to keep up the gamble even when human life is the stake.

While railroading attracts some of the finest types of men to be found among our laboring pople, its novelty and change also draw many reckless characters. To get the "rough rider" type weeded out before they get into responsible places is one of the most serious tasks of the management.

DR. WILEY.

The attempt to oust from his post Government Chemist Dr. Harvey W. Wiley centers attention on out of the most picturesque and virlie figures of official Washington.

Dr. Wiley got through Hanover college at Madison, Ind., with a room for which he paid but 50 cents a week, through his four years course. He tramped home once a week, returing with a seven day's supply of corn meal, potatoes, bread, and molasses, which constituted his living. He never owned an overcoat through that period, and yet he led his class both in book work and athletics.

Dr. Wiley began his work as head of the bureau of chemistry in a little office in the cellar of the old agricultural building, with four assistants and a dish washer, working for years and a dish washer, working for years on a clerk's salary. Now he has a building of his own, a staff of 800 and has the spending of $8,000.00 a year.

Dr. Wiley is a born experimenter, and early got to work on the sugar and other agricultural industries. He studied the way soils, fertilizer, rain and sun affect plant life. His experiments enabled the Louisiana cane growers to insrease their production 30 per cent, and they led to the development of the great sugar beet industries of Colorado and Michigan.

Later Dr. Wiley began to get after the adulteration of food stuffs. He showed how maple sugar, molasses, honey, etc., were being stuffed with glucose, and how various prepared foods were being doctored with salicylic acid, formaldahyde, sulphate of copper, borax, and benzoate of soda. He conducted the "poison squads" of clerks who volunteered to have their health broken down to test the effects of the poisons that food manufacturers were using in their product.

Dr. Wiley is a fellow who has always run his bureau in his own way. It would not be at all strange if as charged he had run it more or less contrary to law. He has trodden on more toes than any other man in the United States, and he seems to enjoy hearing the squealing that results [illegible]

Dr. Wiley is a round faced, bullet headed, square mouthed sort of a man, and some fur will be distributed thru the atmosphere before he quits his desk at Washington, D. C.

The Duluth Herald had the following editorial Saturday:

J. Ogden Armour says that this country is no longer producing beef enough for its own needs, and that this has been the condition for some time. Yet the beef trust has been exporting beef, paying ocean freights on it and selling it in Europe cheaper than it does here.

When this country hasn't enough beef to go around, and every pound exported tends to increase the price of what remains, what sort of a public service is it that consists in exporting beef needed right here and selling it abroad at prices lower than are charged here? Isn't it, in fact, a crime?

If Mr. Armour is riht it is not because we cannot produce enough. It is because the live stock market is so low that the farmer lacks the incentive to produce. The difference in price between live and dressed beef is abnormal. And this in turn is due to our methods of distribution. The price of dressed beef is arbitrarily fixed by Armour and the other big packers, and when they say they want as much for dressing a steer as the farmer got for raising him, they get it, because they have a virtual monopoly. Then, to get cheaper steak for the lobarer's table the Herald sits up and howls its part in the subsidized city press chorus (and a long, loud howl it is) in favor of Canadian reciprocity. Yet they know that that treaty did not dare to mention free beef, oh, no, only free live stock. They also know that as long as there is a duty on dressed beef, the packers will continue to get the same old price regardless of what they can get live beef for. But they howl for Reciprocity, and cheaper beef " to throw dust in the eyes of the city laborers whose support they covet for reciprocity for ulterior reasons.

Reciprocity will not affect the price either of beef or bread or any other manufactured article of food, because the pact takes care that the "interests" shall not suffer, while it does nothing to help the laborer or farmer.

The Herald is inconsistent when it lends its support to this fact which will only sacrifice farmer and laborer to encourage to more of this "crime."

CAR LOAD OF HORSES

Will have full car load of native draft horses at the Newberry Barn in - - - - - - - -

Mr. Farmer, don't fail to see them.

S. D. Roberts, U. S. Winnebago.

JULY GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES

Keep the cultivator going. It not only kills weeds, but conserves moisture.

Cucumbers for pickles may be planted yet. Boston Pickling is a good variety.

Do not cultivate beans when the foliage is wet. They will become spotted or rusted.

If the onions are not growing well, a little nitrate of soda or hen manure sown broadcast, before or during a rain, often helps them to fill out.

Chicken wire makes a good trellis for tomatoes. A single stake will do or a barrel hoop supported about two feet from the ground by three stakes is good.

If dead and unslightly limbs have not been taken off the trees, now is a good time to do so. Paint with white lead the place from which the limb came. Cut close to the tree, and do a clean, smooth job.

If the strawberry plants are vigorous, and the bed not too weedy, it may pay to renovate it for another year. Mow the plants close to the ground, rake off the foliage and burn it. Plow a furrow, cutting out all but about one foot of the row, and then go through and take out the weeds and diseased plants in this row. Fill the furrow with throughly-rotted manure and cultivate the soil back. Keep up a thorough cultivation of the soil all the season.

REPAIRS ON THE BARN

Every business man, in making out the annual balance sheet which is to show the profit or less on business for the year, allows a certain amount for depreciation in the value of his equipment and buildings and for the cost of repairs. He also finds a slack period at some time during the year, when the buildings, machinery and other equipments are overhauled. Unless he does this, he will find that the efficiency and producing power of his plant will not be kept up to the standard.

Every farmer who is in the live stock business is confronted with this same problem. He has his barn and other stable equipment, which remains idle a part of the year, but plays an important part in the returns from the herd during the winter. It should receive a thorough over hauling during the summer, so as to have everything in readiness when fall comes. The floors unless they are cement, will probably need repairing in various places. In dirt floors, all holes that have been made during the winter shtould be filled with clay and packed. The inside of the barn should receive a thorough cleaning, and then be given a good coat of whitewash, which will make it lighter as well as more beautiful. The mangers, stanchions, doors or windows may need some repair; these can be taken care of during a rainy day. To increase the life of the barn, it should receive an occasional coat of paint. There may be places in the barn that last winter let in too much cold air, to the discomfort of the cows. These should be taken care of before the rush of the season is on. There may also be something wrong with the ventilation in the barn, which can be remedied by a little work and a few boards.

These points may seem like small matters, but unless looked after they will do much toward keeping down the milk-flow of the cows, as well as reducing the size of the cream-check. Further than this, there is much pleasure and satisfaction in working in a place that can be kept clean, and where everything is convenient and handy. With these things taken care of, and good handling and feeding, the dairy herd,—where such is kept—should be a profitable adjunct of the farm during the winter.

MRS. JOSEPH DUNLEE, SOLOIST, WITH CONWAY'S BAND.

In addition to the famous Patrick Conway Band the state fair management has engaged the Kiltie Band of Galt, Ont., an equally famous organization, together with three other high class bands and three orchestras. There will be music everywhere and always at the 1911 state fair.

MARRIED

Wednesday afternoon occurred the marriage of Carl Christofferson to Miss Annie Skomedahl.

The bride was gowned in white caline and carried white roses. The bride's sister, Miss Gunnor Skomedahl was bridesmaid while Torbjon Skomedahl, her brother, acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Christofferson will make their home in this city for the present.

Both the bride and groom are well known here and have a host of friends who wish them a long, happy and prosperous life together.

A TEACHER'S CREED

I believe in boys and girls, the men and women of a great tomorrow; that whatsoever the boy soweth, the man shall reap. I believe in the curse of ignorance, in the efficacy of schools, in the dignity of teaching, and the joy of serving another. I believe in wisdom as revealed in human lives as well as in the pages of a printed book; in lessons taught not so much by precept as by example; in ability to work with the hands as well as to think with the head; in everything that makes life large and lovely. I believe in beauty in the school-room, in the home, in the daily life and out-of-doors. I believe in laughter, in love, in all ideals and distant hopes that lure us on. I believe that every hour of every day we receive a just reward for all we are and all we do. I believe in the present and its opportunities, in the future and its promises, and in the divine joy of living: Amen.

BEMIDJI BIBLE CONFERENCE

The Bemidji Bible Conference holds its seventh session at Bemidji beginning Sunday July 23rd and continuing through the week and including the following Sunday. Speakers of national weight will be there and conduct the same. They are Dr. A. C. Gaebelein of New York, Dr. Geo. N. Luccock of Chicago, and Dr. S. S. Hilscher of Iola, Kan. The conference is somewhat in the nature of a religious chautauqua, and the programs are bright, varied, three speakers each day, never dull, and time passes all too quickly. The meetings are public and all are welcome. For information address Rev. S. E. P. White, Bemidji, Minn.

SOARDS—YELL

At a very pretty wedding at St. Bernard's Catholic church Tuesday morning, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Anna Soards of this city and Mr. Louis Yell, a former resident now living in Minneapolis.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Soards and then the happy couple left for Minneapolis where they will make their future home.

The Press unites with their many friends in extending congratulations and best wishes for the future.

LOGAN—GANGNESS

Elmer Logan and Miss Sadie Gangness were united in marriage in the M. E. church on Wednesday afternoon by Rev. J. B. Smith. The ceremony was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hjerstad and quite a number of the frieds and relatives of the young couple. The ring ceremony was used, the bride being decorated with a fine diomand ring. Mrs. J. H. Hay played the wedding march.

The bride was gowned in white silk wore white slippers and gloves. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gangness, a prosperous farmer of Anstad and is highly respected and a great favorite among her acquaintances.

The groom, who has been employed as Superintendent on Ditch No. 20 between Esplee and Germantown by the Forrestal and Feyn Drainage Co. is a clear-cut, capable looking young man, well liked by all who have had the pleasure of making his acquaintance.

Mr. and Mrs. Logan left last night on a wedding trip to visit friends and relatives at various points as they go on. They go first to Minneapolis and then in turn to Waterloo, Vinton and Davenport in Iowa, then to Chicago, and from there to Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, all in Pennsylvania, and finally to Mr. Logan's old boy-hood home at Carlisle, Penna., to visit his mother and sister. In about two months they will be back to Mt. Auburn, Ia., where they expect to make their home in the future.

A host of friends here of the happy couple wish them a happy voyage and a pleasant trip: The Press, too, extends hearty congratulations.

Councilmen Resign

Milton Forder, president of the city council, and Jens Jensen, councilman, resigned at last Tuesday's meeting, just as the lights went out.

Their successors will be appointed by the remaining councilmen and Goodnow Torrison, for one, is receiving prominent mention as a possible appointee to help fill the vacancy. Who the other candidate will be is not yet known.

Mr. Stephen Singer, Postmaster at Kratka, returned from Crookston yesterday morning where he had been to attend the annual meeting of the Post Master's convention of the 9th Congressional District. There was a large number of Postmasters present from the entire district. Mr. Singer was honored as Vice President of Pennington County and his efforts to secure the next Annual Meeting of the postmaster's convention at Thief River Falls was defeated by only one majority. Crookston being again named as the next meeting place.

Our Missionary, A. P. Nelson from Minnapolis will preach at this service.

We do not claim that the method which God adopted for dealing with our race was the only one open to Him, but we do claim that the fact that the Divine Wisdom selected this method of dealing with Adam's race is an assurance that in some respects, at least, it is the wisest method, but best adapted to the Divine purpose of developing the race and testing its members and their worthiness for life eternal—and also the best method for exhibiting the various qualities of the Divine character to angels and men.—PASTOR RUSSELL.

The Bible is the most wonderful Book in the world; assaulted both by friends and foes, it has withstood them all and still stands the great Divine Monument and record of the purposes which God purposed in Himself before the foundation of the world! We hold that the Bible is not, as is generally supposed, a collection of wise and unwise rules, regulations, statements, etc., but that it is a Divine record so arranged that when its various parts and their relationship to each other are discerned, it reveals the wonderful outlines of the Divine purpose.—PASTOR RUSSELL.

While the masses of me nare today boldly challenging both the civil and ecclesiastical powers of Christendom to prove their claims of Divine authority to rule, neither they nor the rulers see that God has granted, or rather permitted, a lease of power to such rulers as mankind in general might choose or tolerate, whether good or bad, until "the Times of the Gentiles" expire; that during this time God has permitted the world largely to manage its own affairs and take its own course in self-government, to the end that, in so doing, all men might learn that, in their fallen condition, they are incapable of self-government, and that it does not pay to try to be independent either of God or of each other.—PASTOR RUSSELL.

SUIT TO COMPEL DISSOCIATION

Government After Coal and Railway Companies.

SECOND MOVE IN NEW FIGHT

Action Brought to Compel Bona Fide Separation of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company From the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company—Case Parallels Recent One Against the Lehigh Valley.

Washington, July 18.—A government suit to compel a bona fide dissociation of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway company from the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company was filed in the federal court in Philadelphia. The action parallels a recent one against the Lehigh Valley and is the government's second move in its new fight to separate the coal carrying railroads from their virtual control of the coal business.

As in the Lehigh Valley suit the government charges that the coal company and its subsidiaries are buying anthracite from independent operators along the line of the Philadelphia and Reading railway with the object of removing competition, transporting it to market at a loss and there regulating the selling price. The coal company loses on such transactions, the government alleges, that the railway company may profit from the freight charges.

As a further evidence that the coal company is not a bona fide corporation, but a mere adjunct of the railroad and a device for evading the commodities clause of the interstate commerce law, the government charges that the officers of the railway company and the coal company are the same and that the railway company has advanced more than $70,000,000 to the coal company, which is carried as an open charge.

The government cites that the railway company has paid as high as 4 per cent for money for the coal company's operations, while the coal company has seldom paid any interest at all and never more than 2 per cent to the railway company.

SURPRISE FOR ATTORNEYS

Federal Suit to Separate Coal and Railway Companies.

Philadelphia, July 18.—Attorneys for the three Reading companies appeared surprised when informed that the government had instituted action to dissociate the Philadelphia and Reading Railway company and the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company in the mining and transportation of anthracite coal.

The Reading, in its answer to the government's suit some years ago, declared the railway company did not own one share of Reading Coal and Iron company stock; that the stock was owned by the Reading company, a holding corporation and not a transportation company. When final argument came up the Reading companies were not called on to defend themselves; and the decisions of the circuit court and the United States supreme court did not include the Reading companies.

GREED OF ICE COMPANIES

Reason Given for High Price in New York City.

New York, July 18.—From the facts as they are alleged to have been found in an investigation by Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo "it would appear that the present high price of ice is largely due to the greed of the ice companies in refusing to take necessary measures to supply the city's wants."

In reporting his findings to the mayor the commissioner says that of 430 independent ice dealers interviewed 229 complained of prices charged by the larger wholesalers; that about July 1, when the hot weather set in the largest of the New York companies—the Knickerbocker Ice company—raised the price from $2.25 to $3 and at one East Side house more than doubled the price to [illegible]75 a ton.

Gasoline Is Fatal to Five.

Grand Junction, Colo., July 14.—O. J. Williams, a pumpman on the Rio Grande and Western, his wife and three small daughters are dead as the result of a gasoline explosion at Ruby, Colo. Mrs. Williams attempted to clear out bugs which had infested the cracks of the floor.

HOUSE MAY ORDER INQUIRY

Charge That the Move to "Get" Wiley Was Instituted by the "Interests" to Be Probed.

Washington, July 15.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley will not be separated from his job as chief chemist without an upheaval such as the administration has never known before, according to indications here.

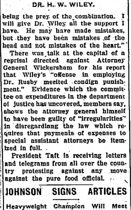
Progressive Republicans joined with Democrats of the house to urge an immediate probe into the report that a move to "get" the chief food expert was instituted by the "interests."

The house committee on expenditures in the department of agriculture made plans for immediate action. Another schism of the Ballinger-Pinchot type is predicted by Wiley's friends.

As reprsesenting the general indignation among Democratic members over the plan to oust Wiley, Representative Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.) said:

"Dr. Wiley is one of the few champions the people have had. He is the most valuable man in the government service. I do not think the administration will make the mistake of dispensing with his services. He has done monumental work for this government and its people in protecting them from the food adulterators, patent medicine concerns and canned food manufacturers.

"The people have a champion in Dr. Wiley. He has kept them from being the prey of the combination. I will give Dr. Wiley all the support I have. He may have made mistakes, but they have been mistakes of the head and not mistakes of the heart."



©1910, by American Press Association.

DR. H. W. WILEY.

There was talk at the capital of a reprisal directed against Attorney General Wickersham for his report that Wiley's "offense in employing Dr. Rusby merited condign punishment." Evidence which the committee on expenditures in the department of justice has uncovered, members say, shows the attorney general himself to have been guilty of "irregularities" in disregardinng the law which requires that payments of expenses to special assistant attorneys be itemized in full.

President Taft is receiving letters and telegrams from all over the country protesting against any move against the pure food official.

JOHNSON SIGNS ARTICLES

CHARGES WILL BE PROBED

Alaskan Delegate Says Attorney General Permitted Fraud.

Washington, July 15.—After secret consideration of charges made by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that Attorney General Wickersham deliberately permitted the statute of limitations to run against agents of the Alaska syndicate who defrauded the government through perjury to the extent of $50,000 the house committee on judiciary has determined to report favorably a resolution of inquiry offered by Delegate Wickersham.

The resolution would call upon the attorney general to furnish the house with all documents, affidavits and testimony in his possession relating to an affidavit submitted to him more than a year ago and sworn to in 1908 by H. J. Douglas, former auditor of the Alaska syndicate.

PUBLICITY BILL PASSES SENATE

Measure More Drastic Than It Came From the House.

Washington, July 18.—The most drastic campaign publicity legislation ever passed in either branch of congress was adopted by the senate practically without a dissenting vote. Using the pre-election publicity bill passed by the house of representatives as a basis the senate constructed a proposed law with the following important features:

No candidate for the senate or house shall spend in the election more than a sum equal to 10 cents for each voter in his district or state.

No senatorial candidate shall spend a total of more than $10,000 in the primary and general election and no candidate for the house shall spend more than $5,000.

Publicity must be given to all primary campaign contributions and expenditures.

All general election expenses must be made public before the election, beginning fifteen days before election, and making publication each six days until election.

All promises of political jobs must be made public.

The bill further makes it illegal to promise political places in order to obtain election support, or to aid in influencing the election of any member of a state legislature.

SENATE AGREES UPON DATE

Will Vote on Canadian Reciprocity Bill July 22.

Washington, July 15.—An agreement to vote on the Canadian reciprocity bill on July 22 was adopted in the senate without opposition. Agreements also were made for votes on other measures which will carry the session "through the legislative day" of Aug. 7, immediately after which congress will adjourn.

The agreement in full, reached at a conference of the various elements of the senate and later adopted in the senate, calls for votes as follows:

July 22—Canadian reciprocity.
July 27—Wool revision bill.
Aug. 1—Free list bill.
Aug. 3—Reapportionment bill.
Aug. 7—Arizona-New Mexico statehood bill.

EVELYN ARTHUR SEE.

Chicago's Self-Styled "God-Man" Convicted.

FOUND GUILTY OF ABDUCTING GIRLS

Founder of Absolute Life Cult Convicted at Chicago.

Chicago, July 14.—Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the Absolute Life cult, the chief tenet of which was said to be the establishment of a perfect race, was found guilty of the abduction of Mildred Bridges, seventeen-year-old disciple. The jury was out only forty-five minutes and is said to have taken but one ballot.

The jury also returned a verdict of guilty of contributing to juvenile delinquency, which had been incorporated in the abduction charge.

The jurors were instructed to retire and return with a single verdict. Counsel for See offered the claim that the return of two verdicts necessitated a new trial and made an immediate appeal for a retrial.

See's flat, the home of Absolute Life, named in the cult publications as "the House of the Lord," was raided in January. See was arrested and two girls, Mona Rees, aged twenty-one, and Mildred Bridges, aged seventeen, who had been living in the apartment, were taken into custody.

PLAGUE CLAIMS ONE VICTIM

No New Cases, However, Reported in Gotham in Twenty-four Hours.

New York, July 18.—The cholera situation at quarantine was reported as reassuring by Dr. Alvah H. Doty, health officer of the port, and his assistants.

During the last twenty-four hours there has been one death, but no new cases have been reported and several of the eighteen persons in the Swinburne Island hospital are convalescent. Some of these now suffering from the plague are seriously ill, however, and the death list may be swollen within the next few days.

When Cricket Playing Was a Crime.

Until a century and a half ago our great national pastime in fact figured in the statute book as a crime. The game was declared illegal in the time of Edward IV., owing to its having become so popular as to interfere with archery, the then sport of kings. The law against it was vigorously enforced, and every person convicted of playing the game was fined £10 or sent to prison. It was not until the formation of the famous Hambledon club in 1740 that the statute was repealed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

FINANCE KINGS FACE INQUIRY

Steel Committee Will Probe Ore Rates to Pittsburg.

SOME FIGURES OUTRAGEOUS

Thorough Investigation to Be Made of Alleged Agreement Between James J. Hill, John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan by Which Ore Rates to Independents From Minnesota Were Made Four Times What They Should Be.

Washington, July 18.—A thorough inquiry into an alleged agreement between James J. Hill, John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan by which ore rates to independents from the Mesaba and adjacent ore fields to Pittsburg, it is charged, were made four times what they should be, is about to be begun under the direction of the Stanley steel committee.

Members of the committee believe that the alleged Hill-Rockefeller-Morgan agreement offers the most fruitful subject of inquiry yet undertaken and that it will be demonstrated that as a result of long time contracts with the independents the steel trust is in control of the situation so far as fixing the price of manufactured steel is concerned.

The steel committee will go to New York Aug. 27 to stay several weeks. Hearings will be held there daily and it is expected that J. Pierpont Morgan and other men of great prominence in the financial world will be called as witnesses.

Morgan is expected home from Europe about Aug. 1 and while Mr. Stanley would not say that it was his intention to call him it is nevertheless understood that both the Democratic and Republican steel probers desire to hear what he has to say under oath concerning the formation of the United States Steel corporation and the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company. In fact, nothing could be learned concerning the witnesses the committee will call, although it is known that a list has been made up.

Long Executive Session.

The committee had a long executive session and concluded that before going to New York it would be well to hear the testimony of Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations under the bureau of commerce and labor, whose reports on the United States Steel corporation, compiled by experts of the department after several years of investigation, was recently published. It is also probable that the experts who did the actual work of inquiry will likewise be called.

As a result of Chairman Stanley's recent trip to Pittsburg the steel committee unanimously adopted a resolution directing F. H. McRae, the committee's expert accountant, to proceed to that city to inspect the minutes of the steel corporation's executive committee and the books of the concern, with a view to determining the cost of production of the various kinds of steel products.

More important than this, however, is the committee's direction to Mr. McRae to make a particularly careful inquiry into the ore rates on the steel corporation's lines from the Mesabi and contiguous ore fields to the Great Lakes and from the lakes to Pittsburg. Some members of the committee assert that there is at present on hand in the committee's files conclusive proof of violations of the law by these roads in connection with the carriage of ore for independent concerns.

VALUES DOUBLE IN DECADE

Census Returns Show Increase In South Dakota Stock.

Washington, July 18.—Statistics relative to the domestic animals, poultry and bees reported on farms and ranges for the state of South Dakota at the thirteenth decennial census, April 15, 1910, are contained in an official statement issued by Acting Director Falkner.

The aggregate value of all domestic animals, poultry and bees in 1910 was reported as $127,047,000, as compared with $65,155,000 in 1900, the amount of increase being $61,892,000 and the rate 95 per cent.

The total value of the domestic animals was reported as $124,658,000 in 1910, as against $64,287,000 in 1900, the increase amounting to $60,371,000, or 93.9 per cent.

The poultry was valued at $2,357,000 in 1910, as compared with $857,000 in 1900, the gain being $1,500,000, or 175 per cent.

The bees were valued at $31,600 in 1910 and $10,100 in 1900, the increase amounting to $21,500, or 213.1 per cent.

Senator Terrell Resigns.

Washington, July 18.—Senator Terrell of Georgia has ceased to be a member of the United States senate. Acting upon his telegraphic request to Vice President Sherman the senate ordered that Mr. Terrell's name be stricken from the roll of the senate, leaving his seat vacant until Governor Hoke Smith qualifies as his successor.

A Mighty Big Can.

An Irish harvester found himself in a small Scottish town. At the gas works he saw a gasometer for the first time in his life and stopped a countryman who was passing to ask, "What's that big round thing there standing on end?"

The Scotchman scratched his head and replied, "A dinna ken."

"Get out with you," said the Irishman. "You never saw a dinner can as big as that in your life."

A Curious Swiss Custom.

In one part of the canton of Ticino, Switzerland, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best" and, accompanied by as many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride. Finding the door locked, he demands admittance. The inmates ask him his business, and he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden. If his answer is deemed satisfactory he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids, some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of whom he rejects with scorn amid general merriment. The bridegroom, whose temper is sometimes sorely tried, is then informed that his ladylove is absent and is invited to come in and see for himself. He enters and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress ready to go to church. Then all his anxiety is at an end, and the nuptials are duly celebrated.

FOREST BLAZES UNDER CONTROL

Known Dead in Northern Ontario Totals 122.

LIST MAY BE AUGMENTED

Fire Sweeps Section of Country Three Hundred Miles Wide and Unknown Length.

Toronto, July 14.—Reports from Northern Ontario points are that the forest fires, which for several days have swept over a section of country extending 300 miles northward from North Bay and covering a wide section east and west, have either been extinguished or are under control.

No further extensive damage or loss of life is expected. The towns of Cochrane, South Porcupine and Pettsville have been obliterated. The fire swept clean the townships of Langmuir, Eldorado, Shaw, Deloro, Ogden, McArthur and Cripple Creek districts.

The known dead total 122, the majority of whom lost their lives at South Porcupine. There are believed to have been many other fatalities and estimates based upon unverified reports run as high as 400.

A relief train left North Bay for Porcupine with supplies. Plenty of funds have been subscribed in this city for immediate help.

Refugees from the burned area say that it covers 10,000 square miles, comprising a district that housed 20,000 people. From every quarter have come fugitives who escaped the flames, many of them badly burned.

It is evident that it will be some days and perhaps weeks before any accurate idea of the total number of dead is available. Many of the terror stricken fled into the interior woodlands. They have not been heard from since. Others who possibly survived the storm of fire are believed to have died from exhaustion.

Some survivors are coming in with their clothing torn and their limbs cut from their mad rush through the woods. Some told of stumbling over bodies of those who had died on the way.

The number drowned in Porcupine lake is about forty. Some bodies were found in shallow water, showing that exhaustion had overcome the victims as they reached the cooling water.

PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

Immense Damage Done by Brush Fires in Michigan.

Detroit, July 13.—The destruction of the twin villages of Au Sable and Oscoda and the $500,000 fire at Alpena, which were not due to forest fires, probably caused exaggerated reports of heavy damage and possible loss of life from forest fires in the northern counties of the Southern peninsula of Michigan.

Towns along the Detroit and Mackinac railroad, from Posen, in Presque Island county, to Onaway, in Cheboygan, suffered considerable damage but many towns that were reported burning are now reported safe. These include Lewiston, Turner and Alger.

Reports of loss of life at Au Sable and Oscoda are persistent, but it is impossible to confirm them. Most of them originated from the stories of panic stricken refugees who in their mad rush from the burning towns saw many people fall from exhaustion and counted all these as inevitably lost, some of the reports estimating the dead as high as fifty.

Six towns between Alpena and Cheboygan that were thought to be threatened with destruction, escaped with serious property losses when the forest fires invaded their precincts.

TWENTY-ONE ARE KILLED IN MINE

Explosion Occurs in Colliery at Sykesville, Pa.

Dubois, Pa., July 17.—Twenty-one miners were killed in an explosion in the shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke company's mine at Skyesville, nine miles from here

All the dead but three are foreigners. The explosion was slight as evidenced by the small damage done in the mine, but the deadly afterdamp is responsible for most of the deaths

OLEO FRAUDS ARE ALLEGED

Twenty-four Indicted By United States Jury.

Chicago, July 14—Two revenue officers and a former government official are charged with accepting bribes in indictments returned by a federal grand jury. Twenty-one officers and employes of butterine manufactories are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government out of the butterine tax, the bribery of government officials, it is charged, being a part of the conspiracy.

The Way of a Woman.

"She passed me on the street yesterday without speaking."

"She did?"

"Yes, the stuck up thing."

"I wouldn't say that. Perhaps she didn't mean to snub you."

"Of course she meant to snub me. You see, I had on my old hat."

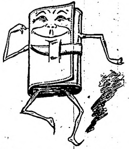
"That wouldn't make any difference to her."

"Oh wouldn't it? Once before when I happened to have on an old [illegible] she didn't speak to me either. Now I'm through with her. If she [illegible] care enough for me to [illegible] when I am in my old clothes [illegible]

THAT COUNTY FAIR

W. W. Junior, one of the youngsters too, is going to great exertion to see that this thing goes thru.

John and Gus are on the job morning, noon and night, and now its up to YOU to finish the thing up RIGHT.



The man with a fat wallet need lose no sleep, Chief Lang will see, that what he doesn't spend, he will keep.

TRAMP! TRAMP! TRAMP!

Pennington county fair people from all the walks of life are certain to be there.

TO THE WISE EMPLOYER

Give your employees a holiday. All work and no play means less accomplished every day.

SAVE TROUBLE and let them go, after a holiday, they will not be so slow.

GIRLS;

If he's away come any way. The school teachers being absent the supply of eligible bachelors will be without limit.

in presenting to you this page is to tell you in a few words and many illustrations, which are sometimes better than words to impress facts, that the fair this year is going to be "some fair." The management has been turned over to the younger generation and the plans are being pushed with the natural resulting vim. It will have all the good points of a real old-time county fair and to this will be added the newest ideas in clean amusement. It will be a judicious mixture of fun and education with the right amount of each as prescribed by the youthful but competent officials. Your attendance can but result in your returning to your everyday labors with that satisfied feeling of time and money well spent.

Pa says I Can't go.

Ma says the whole family is going

And dont you forget it

The youthful secretary, well known to every maid, is certain that the fair, will be a great success "indade."

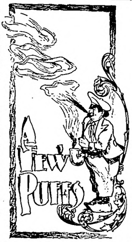
Doc is a well known hustler and is hustling this year "for fair," He's attending to the finances and he trusts you'll all be there.

You need not be afraid of being stung by the local merchants. Read their ads for fair-week in the Press. Note the special offerings. Kill two birds with one stone. Do your shopping in the forenoon, get your amusement in the afternoon and evening.

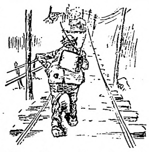
You will forget all about the flight of time, and will never regret the spent money

PENNINGTON COUNTY is undoubtedly the future banner farming county of the state What little wild land remains is now being drained and turned into productive farms. In richness of soil it can "put it over" any other section.

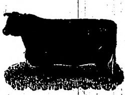
THIEF RIVER FALLS is the commercial centre of Northeastern Minnesota with a population of over 5000. Unexcelled shipping facilities are making it a noted distributing and shopping centre. At present it enjoys the service of 10 daily passenger trains and another road is being built from the Northeast.

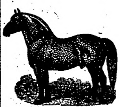


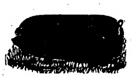
We know that three cent fare is hard lines but this is a dry season and walking is good, besides, when you see the air ship flights, you will realize that the day is not far distant when the railroads will have competition.



The exhibits this year should be an enjoyable feature of the fair. Not as a result of the material matter represented in prizes offered, as all combined, the prizes would not total a fool's ransom, let alone a king's. If the success of this part of the fair, which is the main future, depended on the few exhibitors who came forward tempted solely by the money offered it would result in a flat failure. It is the praiseworthy spirit of competition and desire to show others what we haxe accomplished that must be depended upon to bring out these exhibits in all lines. Premium Lists may be had of any of the progressive local merchants.







Everybody WILL BE THERE. Can you afford to miss it?

ELECTRIC LIGHT SUNDAY NIGHT

Dynamo Arrives Today And Everything Is Ready For Its Installaton.

When the Great Northern freight arrives today, Pete Bekken, cashier at the Great Northern depot, says that it will have on it the dynamo recently ordered from Chicago.

The dynamo will be connected up with the saw mill engine, the same as last winter. All the belts, pulleys, wiring, the foundation, and engine conviences are now in readiness. With it will only require two days to install the dynamo, and at that rate we will again have a well lighted city by Sunday night.

Sufficient light will be furnished for street lamps, business houses and dwelling houses; and enough power to run all the machinery that was formerly depending on electricity—and then some.

The city council are to be commended on the prompt and efficient manner in which they have gone about and are handling the present lighting problem. The street lights have been in operation through the courtesy of the Northwestern Drainage Company.

Back from Norway

Magne Haukaas of Randen P. O., who has been back to Norway visiting the past seven months, returned from there to this city Tuesday. He stated to the Press reporter that he had had a very enjoyable trip and visit, but said that while he disliked to encourage men to leave Norway for America, yet that was certainly the very best thing they could do for their own individual advancement. Over there the workmen can save up practically nothing. They live from hand to mouth. After paying for board and room at lodging places that would be considered too poor by a workman here, they have perhaps two or three crowns left of the week's wage. Many, he said, keep their families on small farms near the factories, where by their labor in field and garden they can help the head of the household to eke out a living. Beef and other meats are a rarity among laborers. Fish, however, is the more common form of animal food. So Mr. Haukaas evidently looks upon this as the land of promise as much now as he perhaps did the first time he set sail for it.

Burglarized

Sometime between Saturday afternoon and Monday morning a burglar entered Dr. Penney's dental office and carefully removed all the gold that is wont to be about such places. The gold taken amounted to about $100, but nothing else was touched.

How the robber entered is not known because all the doors and windows were left locked as usual, and everything about the office was in the same condition as when the doctor left it Saturday afternoon. In fact so neat and gentlemanly about the matter was the thief that Penney did not discover his loss until he reached into the customary place to get some gold to fill a lay's tooth. The robber has not been apprehended as yet.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

The blanks for taking school census in the districts are sent out this week. The destribution of the blanks were delayed because they were delayed by the printer. Time will be saved in a large measure in this office if this matter of taking school census is attended to at once. Report must be in by Sept. 1st.

School clerks will kindly remember to foward Annual report at once. See that items and figures are correct. It will save the returning of reports for corrections.

Respectfully submitted,
E. A. MOSTUE,
Co. Supt. of Schools.

Thieving Babes

Monday night Christ Moore, 9 years old, and Bennie Lundahl, 10 years old, broke into Edward Iverson's hardware store on Main street and took out and hid away at various places three rifles, a sack of B. B. shots, a few boxes of 22 caliber shells, and 60 or 70 cents in small change.

Tuesday morning they were haled into police court on suspicion and there Lundahl broke down and confessed—Moore also admitting his part—to the theft.

The county commissioners will meet August 2d and decide whether the boys are to be sent to Owatonna or to Red Wing. This is not their first offense, either, and as their parents fail to do anything toward bringing them up in the observance of law and order it is considered the only fair course by the boys. At either of the aforementioned places they will be taught many useful things—chief among these in importance, obedience and discipline.

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE

Meeting Is Called Sept. 6th on State Fair Grounds. All Farmers Invited.

All the farmers of the Northwest, or as many of them as can comply, are requested to be at the State Fair September 6th and join in a great Farmers' Equalizer meeting to be held in Institute Hall on the Fair Grounds at 2 p. m., for the purpose of organizing the farmers of Minnesota and the Northwest. The proposed purpose of the organization is that "farmers get together as farmers, for farmers and to fight farmers' political betrayers, no matter of what political party."

It will not be a new political party, nor a boost for an old one, but it is to be a "Farmers' Equalizer League."

There will be a brass band and it is not going to play the "Dead March of Saul" either. And there will be speakers who are in touch with farmers and who will be alive with enthusiasm.

Does any farmer suppose that if in every state there had been a close, compact shoulder-to-shoulder "Farmers' Equalizer League," comprising even a quarter of the voting farmers, that the Canadian Reciprocity conspiracy would have dared walk with its spiked heels over the head of Agriculture, as it is doing? Not much!

Reciprocity has passed! The farmers had no power to throttle the grafters who have conspired to pass it. They were unorganized. But there is a day of reckoning to follow. The worm will turn and sting the heel that treads it. Farmers at bay will fight, and the fighter must fight with a united front—fight as a drilled army, not as a headless mob.

The fight is only just begun. Reciprocity found farmers unwarned and unprepared. This was the Bull Run, but there will be a Gettysburg and an Appomatox. There is a "slow enthusiasm," but a deadly earnestness among Northwestern farmers, which the sneerers and scoffers of Washington do not dream of.

Let every farmer be there. You must learn to "hang together or you will all hang separately." Come!

The Minneapolis Tribune of July 20th contains the following article:

FARM LANDS BEING SOUGHT

Rotterdam Man Would Find Site for Dutch Colony.

A. Van Der Spek, president of the Association of Dutch Farmers, with headquarters at Rotterdam, was in conference with George Welsh, state immigration commissioner, regarding Minnesota lands.

A. Van der Spek, president of the organization that is looking for homes for a large colony of Hollanders somewhere in the United States or Canada, and Mr. Welsh spent considerable time explaining to him the advantages of living in Minnesota. He laid special stress upon the value of the cut-over and half timber lands of northeastern Minnesota, where people of small means can make a start and gradually build up a home and have a profitable farm.

The association which Van der Spek represents has a membership of about 1,000 farmers. He did not give any definite information as to when or how many of them will come here, but said that he was simply looking for information where to find the kind of land they wanted, what it would cost and what it would produce.

ARE YOU READY FOR THE PENNINGTON COUNTY FAIR?

Every Thing Is In Readiness For You---Down Town and at The Fair Grounds. Aerial Flights, Horse Races, Balloon Ascentions, Shows, Ball Games, Free Acts.

There are only five more days left before the big Pennington County Fair to be held at Thief River Falls on August 2d, 3d and 4th. Everything indicates that there will be the largest crowd ever in attendance at the county fair. Every citizen of Pennington and surrounding counties, who is interested in what northern Minnesota is raising in the way of high quality farm produce and prize stock, will certainly be there. In no other year has conditions been so favorable for showing what this section of Minnesota can produce. Any special information desired in regard to the fair can be obtained from W. W. Prichard, President or W. H. Akre at First National Bank.

Ample provision has been made for the entertainment and enlightment of the public. A delegation from the fair association attended the aeroplane flights given at Grand Forks the latter part of last week in honor of the Minnesota Auto Club while on its tour to Helena, Montana. The aeroplane which is booked for the Pennington County Fair made two flights.

During the first flight the machine circled around over the heads of the crowd in about a mile circle and alighted in 10 minutes. The second flight was made immediately after the first and extended from the Dobmeier farm, four miles west of Grand Forks, to the state fair grounds where flights are being given this week during the state fair. Two flights will be given here each day, one at 2 p. m., and the other later in the afternoon.

There will be plenty of good horse races. Aside from the local horses, several fast horses from Roseau, Warren and Crookston will be here.

A purse of nearly $600 will be distributed.

The following are scheduled:

2:17 trot or pace
2:30 trot or pace
Farmers 'race (running)
Slow race
Gentlemen's driving race.

Considerable enthusiasm is rampant among local horse-men. We have inside information that the gentlemen's driving race is going to be the most hotly contested race ever pulled off in Minnesota.

Three Free Acts will be located on the Fair Grounds to entertain the people between horse races, aeroplane flights, etc.

Each evening there will be a balloon ascention in the down town district.

Those who wish entertainment later in the evening can attend the street shows. Nothing but clean shows, morally, will be allowed to come in.

On August 3d the "Indians" will play the Warren ball team. There will be a big bunch of rooters from Warren accompanied by the band. On August 4th the "Indians" will play Red Lake Falls. Both of these games will be interesting from statt to finish. The "Indians" have broken even with both teams so far this year. The purse is $75 for each of these games.

The Crookston and Thief River Commercial Travelers will entertain the public the first day with a few new wrinkles in baseball science.

School Election

It does not appear, from reports, that the school election, which was held the 15th of July, has settled the question of filling the vacancies on the school board. That is, all are not of one mind as to how the vacancies have been filled. Through an error in the announcement of election made by G. A. Penney, the clerk, it was stated that there were two vacancies to be filled, while in reality, there were three. One through the resignation and termination of office of C. C. Jackson, one through the termination of office of Emil Zeh and one through being disqualified to hold the offices both of State Representative and school director, that of D. P. O'Neill. Then the question arises, if there were three vacancies and only three candidates were not all three candidates elected? A negative answer could not be given to this question because of the fact that the clerk has failed in his duties to apprise the voters of the fact that there were three vacancies to fill, as the law expressly states that the failure of the clerk to specify the business shall not affect the validity of any business to be acted upon. It is contended by the friends of Mrs. Bishop that the voters meet to fill all vacancies on the board at the regular annual election as is required by law, and that, therefore, she is elected as she was one of the three candidates running.

Not knowing what action might be taken by the board in this matter a notice of a special election has been posted calling for an election on next Friday, August 4th. This question may be decided before that time and no election held.

Mill Not Sold

Reports to the effect that the saw mill has been sold are false. Up-to-date there has been no intention of selling the mill and no negotiations for that purpose have been under way.

The amount of timber on hand now is sufficient to furnish one full year of cutting. The mill will not run any more this year, but steps will be taken to insure the sawing of the present supply of logs next summer.

J. J. Crowe and Charles Nason will leave Monday for Rose Lake, Idaho to continue work for the same firm in a saw mill at that place. Rose Lake is 70 miles from Spokane and is reported to be one of the live towns of the state. The Crowe and Nason families will remain here until later in the summer, or until favorable enough reports reach them from Rose Lake to induce them to go out.

House Burned

C. O. Wallin, living near Torgerson, had the misfortune of having his house burned to the ground with everything in it a week ago yesterday. Mr. Wallin was at work in the fields and his wife was in the garden when the fire, presumably started by the children at play in the house, manifested itself by a smoke from the house. Mrs. Wallin rushed in and succeeded in rescuing their three children, but she could save no more, the fire spread so rapidly.

Mr. Wallin is one of the leading citizens in that neighborhood, is public spirited, holds an interest in both the creamery and the store, and is well liked by his neighbors. No sooner had he suffered this loss than these neighbors hitched their teams to a vacant house not far away and drew it in on his building plot, thus relieving the need of the hour for the homeless ones. Among the neighbors present the Press reporter noted the following: E. Aakre, N. P. Olson, M. Solberg, Frank Sornsky, John Skaard, H. Solberg, T. Nelson and Ed. Hanson. Quicker relief never came to anyone—but more would not be amiss.

Mrs. Joe Maudt who has been visiting at the Lewis Popenhagen home left Monday morning for her home at Edinberg, N. Dak.

Public Statement

At this time the public has a right to a statement of my relations with the school board in permitting the Independent School District Number 18, which includes the City of Thief River Falls with some surrounding territory in addition thereto to use any property for agricultural purposes. I have donated free of any charge, whatsoever, this year, either offered or expected, the use of all of the realestate which I own that the board could use for agricultural purposes, and all that could be cared for by the agricultural department was used this year to good advantage by the school board go and look at their gardens and I have paid all of the taxes and interest on the investment that I have had in the lots. The school board has invested $1200.00 in first cost in some land they bought from Hansen & Barzen, not from me, south of the City, but the land is new and not fit for gardening this year and the periods for recitation are 45 minute periods and the children could hardly take time to till the soil on the lots across from the school this last spring and I did not think the gift of the use of my grounds while I paid my own taxes and interest on my money invested would be misconstrued by any of the children in school or their parents. It has been stated that I would sell my lots to the school board. I will never sell any lots to any school board of this state without the voters of the district voting on the proposition as required by law until the law permits them to buy without a vote of the people. The school board has already invested in first cost $1200.00 for the aforesaid ground south of the City. But I think they should be excused not being familiar with the law and perhaps thinking that a school board has the same power as a city council, the city council having power to both buy and to sell without consulting the voters, but it is not the same with a school board. The law requires them to first be empowered to buy by the voters of the district.

J. M. BISHOP.

C. A. Baker came up from Oganah Thursday morning to spend a few days in the city looking after business matters.

Dustless Streets

Last Friday, under the direction of street commissioner Melby, the city started to apply number 4 road oil to eight blocks in the business district. The oil is made on a forty per cent asphaltum base, the remainder being crude oil with most of the inflammable substances removed.

The loose dirt is removed from the surface of the street after which a supply of oil is put on and spread out thoroughly with fiber brushes. In about eight hours after application of the oil, pure sand is sprinkled over to absorb and work in with the surplus oil. After forty-eight hours the streets are opened to traffic.

The oil keeps the water out of the ground, so no mud can be formed after a rain. The streets of Thief River Falls are in especially good condition for the application of oil on account of the oval shape which has been given them by constant dragging.

The use of road oil is an experiment here, but in the cities and thruout dusty states like California it has been giving perfect satisfaction for several years. The oil is supposed to wear for a year, each successive year taking less oil than the preceeding one. Once in awhile a year can be skipped.

This year the city ordered about 8000 gallons at a cost of 5¾ cents a gallon. Next year the cost will be much less on account of the lesser amount of oil required. It looks now as though the cost of keeping down the dust the new way will be eventually much cheaper than the old way of sprinkling. If it keeps the dust down it will have accomplished something that sprinkling never did, because sprinkling helps for a few minutes at a time only.

LAND OPENING AUGUST 22nd.

Official announcement has been received from the land department at Washington of the opening on Aug. 22 of the Chippewa lands, including the Red Lake Indian reservations, and of the Fond du Lac Indian reservation. The Chippewa lands include only two townships in the Red Lake reservation namely, 157-28 and 159-29, and 45,779 acres of cut-over land, the opening to be made at Cass Lake land office.

The Fond du Lac lands include 8,884.39 acres in townships 49 and 50, range 17, and townships 49, 50 and 51, range 18, entry to be made at the Duluth office.

The time for the filing is 9 o'clock a. m. At this time the land is also open to actual settlers, who may enter the land on or after that time, with claims to it. Prior settlement, however, will not be recognized.

The lands in Winnibigoshish, Cass Lake, Chippewa of the Mississippi, or the Leech Lake reservations, not included in this opening, will be opened to homestead entry when the timber upon them has been removed.

In all there are 91,104.47 acres opened for settlement, of which 82,220.08 are in the Cass Lake land district and 8, 884.39 acres in the Duluth district.

Besides making regular payments for fees for the filing upon the land, the entryman must pay $1.25 per acre, in five equal payments at the end of each year. The requirements for entry upon the lands is the same as that required at other land openings. Bemidji Pioneer.

Mrs. Robert Mercier, who has been visiting at the home of her mother for the past two months, left Sunday morning for her home at Calgary. She was accompanied by her brother, Tom Lonson who went as far as Winnipeg returning on Monday.

Chester Barden came down from Baudette Tuesday and will spend a couple of weeks here visiting friends before going to his Wisconsin home.

LAND SHOW OPENS DEC. 12

To Continue 12 Days in St. Paul Auditorium. Purpose: Boost Northwest.

From December 12 to December 23, inclusive, the Northwestern Land Products Show will be held in the St. Paul Auditorium under the auspieces of the Northwestern Development league.

These dates were announced today after advices had been received from the various Western states and the dates of other shows and expositions had been considered. The dates selected give those who will exhibit in Chicago an opportunity to bring their exhibits here. The Chicago show closes December 9.

The entire enterprise has but one object in view, according to officials of the league, to aid in the development of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Alaska.

More Than a Mere Land Show.

It is more than simply a land show, hence the incorporated name will be the Northwestern Land Products Exhibit, and it may include not only those things grown but things taken from the soil. The show will be more than a mere instrument for the use of the land man in selling land. It will show graphically what can be produced on land in territory west of the Twin City, what it costs to produce the crops and the profits.

St. Paul and Minneapolis business interests have pledged their co-operation on the theory that every man and every dollar put to work in the states interested, will be a direct benefit to the local markets.

An Educational Movement.

The Northwestern Development league is defined by Secretary Will A. Campbell as "an educational movement," and he says, "after all, a booster is an educator, seeking to make people acquainted with the facts, and only the facts, about a certain section, state or city."

"Launched on these lines," Mr. Campbell said, "the land show to be given in St. Paul is to be void of selfish interests. It is not to make any money, and the Northwestern Development league has nothing to sell, its only object being to attract settlers, arouse interest and educate people who are moving West to the advantages of making their homes in one of the states represented in the league. It matters not to this organization whether a man with his family and capital settle in Minnesota, go on to the Dakotas, or choose a home on the far Pacific coast—just so they stay in Twin City territory."

Officials of the League.

It has been decided that H. H. Bigelow and Eli Warner of St. Paul, with P. L. Howe of Minneapolis, will constitute the finance committee, and that Will A. Campbell, secretary of the league, will be general manager of the show. He has been instructed to secure the necessary experts, and work is under way for the show.

Some interesting exhibits are already in sight, including a unique exhibit from Alaska, which will be shown in the way of an Alaskan village. There are to be entertainment features which will make the show an attractive mid-winter amusement for the half million people of the Twin City.—Dispatch.

Dr. Booren spent a few days this week at his summer home in Vergas.

House Lost

Fire burned Saave Brekke's house to the ground Wednesday with nearly everything in it. The fire was presumably started by the children playing down stairs, while Mr. Brekke himself was upstairs. The fire spread rapidly and gave little time for rescue work. It is not known at this writing whether the house was insured or not. The loss of their home calls forth the sympathy of the many friends of the stricken family.

F. H. KRATKA,
Postmaster.

Mrs. Louise Cerny, 318 Markley Ave., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "The statement I gave for publication three years ago, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills was correct in every detail. I gladly confirm it and add that I have had little kidney trouble since. This complaint bothered me for several years. At times I had backache and dull pains in my back and I was often nervous and weak. The kidney secretions were unnatural and my health was all run down. My supply of Doan's Kidney Pills was procured at Curtis' Drug Store and the good work they did, convinced me of their merits."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milbourn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Sprains require careful treatment. Keep quiet and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely. It will remove the soreness and quickly restore the parts to a healthy condition. For sale by all Druggists.

STOKKE—OLSON

Last Thursday afternoon, July the 20th, 1911 at 4 o'clock occurred the marriage of Miss Mathilda Stokke to Mr. Carl J. Olson, both of this city.

The affair was a quiet one, only a few friends and neighbors being present.

Miss Mary Evenson was bridesmaid, while Gust Crown acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. T. Aastad at the parsonage.

The bride is well known in the city and highly respected among her friends and all who have made her acquaintance.

The groom needs no introduction as he is well known, having worked at the art of photography at Lundgren's gallery for the past year, and is well liked by all.

The happy couple will make their home in this city for the present. The Press joins with their many friends in extending congratulations and wishing them a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.

BOYS' JUDGING CONTEST

A Chance For Youngsters To Show Their Skill.

For the first time in the history of the Minnesota State Fair the boys of the state will be given an opportunity to show their practical knowledge of live stock. The ones with the most knowledge will be liberally rewarded.

The boys' judging contest, as arranged by Secretary Simpson has been enthusiastically received by officials of the farm schools, those most interested in the agricultural development of Minnesota and by the boys themselves. Owing to the fact that the contest is a new feature it is difficult to get the information concerning it into the hands of all those who wolud be interested. For this reason the state fair management would appreciate it if any boy who desires to enter the contest or any person knowing such a boy or boys, will send the names to Secretary J. C. Simpson, State Fair Grounds, Hamline, Minn.

Eleven scholarships in the agricultural schools of St. Anthony Park, Crookston or Morris will be awarded to the boys who do the most efficient work in judging classes of horses, cattle, swine and samples of corn and wheat, assigned for the purpose and writing reasons substantiating their judgment.

The contest will take place in the live stock pavilion on the state fair grounds, beginning promptly at 9 a. m., Monday, Sept. 4, 1911. President C. W. Glotfelter is superintendent of the contest. The rules and regulations are as follows:

Rules and Regulations Governing Eligibility of Contestants

1. Any boy living in the state of Minnesota under 21 years of age who is entitled to enter one of the Schools of Agriculture and who has never been regularly classified in any college or having taken any more than one year in any school of agriculture may enter this contest; this restriction to in no way apply to those who have attended four week short courses.

2. All constestants must report to the superintendent in charge at the stock pavilion, not later than 8:30 a. m., Monday, Sept. 4.

Governing Entries

3. All entries must be made on regular entry forms, attached hereto.

4. All entries must be in the hands of the secretary not later than Friday evening, Sept. 1.

5. An entrance fee of fifty cents will be charged each contestant, and must be forwarded with the entry application. Upon receipt of same a contestant's ticket will be issued which will entitle him to admission to the fair grounds on the day of the contest.

6. Each contestant will be given an entry number by which he will be designated throughout the contest.

Governing Classes to Be Judged.

7. Each contestant will be required to judge two rings each of horses (draft and driving), cattle (dairy and beef), and swine, consisting of three or more animals, not less than two varities of corn, of ten ears each, and two varities of wheat.

8. All contestants will be allowed twenty-five minutes to place and write reasons substantiating their judgment on corn and each class of animals. No additional credit will be given for papers completed before the expiration of the alloted time.

9. Regular printed forms will be furnished each contestant upon which to make written reports of the classes judged, and any contestant writing his name, or placing any other indentifying mark other than the number assigned him, on his written reports, will be excluded from the contest.

10. Referring to text books, or other data, or giving or receiving of opinions by contestnats among themselves or from any other person, on any class thereof, being passed upon, or to be passed upon, or before written judgments of all contestants are in the hands of the superintendent, is strictly prohibited and a disregard of this rule may expel an contestant or contestants, a party thereto, as may be determined by the superintendent.

Basis for Making Awards.

12. Each contestant will be required to write his decisions, placing the first three animals/ samples of corn and of wheat, and giving reasons substantiating same, on the regular printed forms provided.

13. All conestants reports on the different classes will be graded on the basis of 100 points for each division, to be divided as follows:

Correctness of placing ... 60
Reasons substantiating the placing 40

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, JULY 28 1911.

And three Democrats voted against the Reciprocity Treaty.

A baby that couldn't cry wouldn't be much good anyhow.

You may not succeed in doing what you want to do; but you ought to be doing something.

The vote in the U. S. Senate on the Reciprocity Treaty was 56 for and 27 against. Our protests out here in the Northwest look like little potatoes to the Big Guns in the East.

It is certainly disgusting to see the subsidized city press berate our Northwest progressives in congress because they dared stand up for the people and oppose Reciprocity. But, bear in mind that they are paid for it by the lumber, steel and milling industries, and besides expect to get cheaper paper. They are now after the scalps of these progressives. What are you going to do about that? Are you going to let them hoodwink you into believing that these progressives have been untrue to you? If that is the way you pay your faithful servants, you will not have many more of that kind.

The Democrats are wily politicians. Look at this showing if you doubt it: On the protected list are cotton, sugar, rice and Texas cattle; all produced by Democratic farmers. On the unprotected list are wheat, barley, butter, eggs, hogs, sheep and northern cattle; all products of Republican states. The Democrats have taken care of their farmers in fine style, while the farmer of the North is betrayed into the hands of capital by his Republican party. It is not difficult to foretell what the farmers will do with Taft on the ticket in 1912.

ELECTION IN CANADA

The best news we have to offer our farmer friends is embodied in a dispatch from Ottawa, Canada, dated July 25, and reads as follows:

That reciprocity with the United States will have to get the indorsement of the voters of Canada was the decision of a party caucus of the Conservation today. "No backdown, but continued obstruction of the reciprocity measure until the government is forced to dissolve parliment and go to the country," was, in effect, the attitude.

The Liberal caucus thereupon decided that the election should be held as soon as possible.

This may delay the bad effects of the reciprocity treaty in some measure till after our farmers market their fall grain.

JAIL FOR TRUST LAW-BREAKERS.

Attorney-General Wickersham's announcement that the government has distinct plans for criminal action against trust magnates will be greeted with a dismal squeal from the "interests."

The trouble with these men is that they have never grasped the idea that one's rewards ought to be in proportion to one's service to humanity, and no more.

The trouble with the great majority of modern fortunes is that they are not gained by producing anything, by introducing efficiencies or making a saving for the public. A certain type of men have learned that by shuffling the cards that represent other men's production, they can always slip a certain portion of them up their own sleeves, which do not represent anything saved for the public.

The disposition of the trusts to drive other people out of business goes against the inmost grain of American temperament. Our people have a fatal weakness for money grabbing. But there is at the same time a strain of independent idealism running in their blood that demands for every man a fair chance in the race.

When our fathers revolted from England, an economist might have been able to argue that it would have been cheaper to take whatever crumbs King George felt good natured enough to hand out to us. But this strain of idealism revolted against a submission which however much more profitable it might seem from a money view point, ran up against this idealistic love of liberty and fair play.

Similarly, the right of any man to engage in any business, to obtain meanwhile the same privileges that are granted to the big fellow, to be subjected to no unusual competition on account of the small size of his business, touches the heart of our political idealism. Sooner or later, our people will place those who deny that right in the same quarters as other thieves.

MUZZLING THE NEWSPAPERS

Newspapers are a mighty unhandy thing to have around, just as the police are. At least, for people who have deals to put through in the dark, or burglaries to commit.

The latest attempt to gag the newspapers is in Ohio, where a bill has been favorably reported in the Legislature to put editors and publishers in jail, if they exact a promise from candidates for office. There is also a fine of $100 to $500.

It is a newspaper's business to record the buyings and sellings in the market, and legislators whose votes are put up at auction will no doubt favor a law that will harass honest publishers.

No doubt some men will vote for such a bill thoughtlessly, or from honest motives. Gov. Harmon favors the proposed law, and no doubt he honestly thinks it will remove an evil.

Let such men think how such a proposal would hamper the publisher seeking to defend the rights of the people.

The people naturally want to know how their representatives are going to vote on important public matters. Any citizen has a perfect right to ask a candidate to pledge himself to vote a certain way. The candidate has a perfect right to make such a pledge, or to decline to make it, just as he sees fit.

Newspapers naturally want to know something about a candidates's point of view before wasting their good space on supporting him just as the voter hates to cast his ballot for a man who afterwards acts against his wishes.

The question whether candidates should or should not pledge themselves in advance is not one that can be settled in an sweeping way. As a general thing, the independent legislator keeps his mind open until the final show down, and disikes to tie himself up in advance. But occasionally there come square issues of right and wrong, where the voters want the sheep and the goats lined up before the ballot box by definite pledges. In seeking to secure such pledges, the newspaper is simply the agent of the people.

We would call every farmer's attention to the article on the first page, calling a meeting for organization of the farmers on Wednesday, Sept. 6th in Institute Hall on the State Fair grounds. Now that all others are organized it is absolutely necessary for the farmers to be so, if they want to escape finally being reduced to the condition of serfs and paupers. There is no industry more necessary than farming and therefore none more honorable. But farmers, for lack of organization, fail to assert themselves and will fail more and more to get just consideration at the hands of law-makers as other industries attain to more perfect organization. This is an age when we must insist on our rights or lose them.

With all the talk about the cost of high living, and the accusation that the farmers are getting too great a share of luxurious prosperity, it is well to keep in mind the fact, as testified by the Department of Agriculture, that the farmer receives only 69 per cent of what the consumer pays for eggs, even if the consumer buys in full case lots. The farmer receives only 48 per cent of what the consumer pays for cabbage, only 56 per cent of the consumer's price for apples; 49 per cent for strawberries. That is, when the consumer in the city pays 20 cents a box for strawberries, the man who raises the strawberries gets only about 9 cents of it and the middlemen who handle the strawberries get the other 11 cents.—N. W. Agriculturist.

16. The State Agricultural Society will deposit the money herein provided for prizes in this contest with the treasurer of the State Agricultural School chosen by the winner. This applies to schools at St. Anthony Park, Crookston and Morris, with instructions that the same is to be paid to the boys winning the contest, at not to exceed $25 per month, until the full amount as awarded each has been paid, providing the conditions hereinafter named are complied with.

17. The first prize of one hundred dollars will be awarded to the boy having the highest total number of points in all classes and divisions of contest combined, as illustrated in Section 15 hereof.

18. The second prize of ninety dollars will be awarded to the boy having the second highest total number of points.

19. The third, fourth, fifth, sixth seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh prizes are $80, $70, $60, $50, $40, $30, $25, $25, respectively, and are awarded in the same manner as the first and second prizes.

20. The boys who are awarded the scholarships herein provided must be enrolled and classified at the school selected not later than one year after such awards have been made or forfeit their rights thereto. In such an event the prizes will be awarded to the contestant or contestants next in rank.

21. In case of sickness or any other good reason which will necessitate the leaving of school before the end of the school year, the unused portion of such scholarship will be in force for one year from date of contestant student's departure, after which date it will revert to the State Agricultural Society.

Special $50 Prize.

Recognizing the important aid given by various persons and associations in furthering the boys' judging contest, the state fair management hereby offer a special prize of $50 to any person within the state of Minnesota who shall be instrumental in bringing into the contest the largest number of competitors. Fair associations are also eligible to this prize.

Rules Governing Such Competition.

Secretary Simpson will furnish entry blanks to interested persons or associations. Such persons or associations will on receipt of these, indorse same and hand to the boys they have encouraged, induced or coached to enter the state fair contest.

At the conclusion of the contest a check will be made on the entry cards of the competitors, and the $50 special prize will be paid to the person or association responsible for the largest number of competitors.

The purpose in offering this special prize is to make it worth while for interested persons or associations to make a special effort in calling attention to the liberal scholarship prizes offered by the state fair.

Whistler's Eccentricities.

Whistler's remarkable genius is no doubt responsible for his many eccentricities. He quarreled indiscriminately with friend and foe, and for him the public were a set of ignoramuses who had no right to any opinion whatever.

Especially well known is his quarrel with John Ruskin, who in his "Ars Clavigera" had heaped scorn on one of Whistler's "Nocturnes" in the following language. "I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now, but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." The artist promptly sued for damages, and in the celebrated trial which followed he was awarded one farthing, which coin he triumphantly wore as a watch charm ever afterward.

In his art work, as in his own personal appearance, Whistler was fastidious. His palettes were beautifully wiped, his brushes faultlessly kept, and as for his general behavior it was foreign, one may even say exotic.

Why Thackeray Was Moved to Tears.

A lady, an intimate friend and a frequent visitor at the Thackeray home, called late one afternoon. She was shown into the study, and on entering perceived the novelist himself seated at his desk, his head bowed upon his arms. Fearing she was intruding in the presence of some great and unknown grief, she paused, hesitating. Then, thinking she might be of some help or at least express her sympathy, she stepped forward. Just then Thackeray looked up. His shoulders were shaking, the tears streaming from his eyes.

"Little Nell is dead," he said brokenly.

"Little Nell?" his visitor interrogated.

"Yes, Little Nell," was the answer. "She is dead. I've just been reading it." Before him on his desk lay an open copy of "Old Curiosity Shop."—Ladies' Home Journal.

When Lobsters Were Common.

The lobster was not always the aristocrat of the supper table and the most costly of delicacies. A man who used to live in Maine, but now lives in Ohio, has this reminiscence, according to a writer in the Cleveland Leader: "One day here in Cleveland I took a friend out to luncheon, and suddenly the old appetite for lobster came back to both of us, as we were both born on the Maine coast. We had two full portions, and the bill was $2. And yet as a boy I've seen my father standing on the wharf, bargaining with a fisherman for his lobster catch of the day, and often, for $2 I've seen the lobster fisherman turn over to my father the entire catch, and the whole boatload—250 or 300 big, black lobsters, perhaps—would be dumped on the landing and taken back on our old farm as feed for the pigs.

What He Was Showing.

A young man sitting in a subway car with legs crossed and one foot showing a highly polished shoe and silk sock extended so far into the aisle as to make it almost impossible for people to pass without coming in contact with the obtruding member was brought to a sense of his disregard for others by three young women who sat opposite. One said, "I wonder if he is showing his foot or his shoe?" The second said loud enough to be heard above the car clatter and of the amusement of others, "I think he wants to show his clocked socks—watch it." "No," said the third, "he's only showing his bad manners." The foot came down and was lost in the crowd which got off at the next station.—New York Tribune.

Laughter.

Laughter, while it lasts, slackens and unbraces the mind, weakens the faculties and causes a kind of remissness and dissolution in all the powers of the soul, and thus far it may be looked upon as a weakness in the composition of human nature. But if we consider the frequent reliefs we receive from it and how often it breaks the gloom which is apt to depress the mind and damp our spirits with transient unexpected gleams of joy, one would take care not to grow too wise for so great a pleasure of life.—Addison.

THE SMUGGLER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Aunt Jane Roe, wife of Uncle Joe Roe, farmer, was a conscientious woman. That was the chief reason why there were no screens at doors or windows to keep the flies out in summer. She thought insects ought to have a chance the same as human beings.

Aunt Jane had fifty hens. She divided their food in fifty equal portions. If one hen got a kernel of corn too little it was made up to her. She would have no mousetraps about the house, and she believed all tin peddlers honest.

This good woman had been conscientious for almost fifty years, when two startling episodes occurred in her life. Uncle Joe sold a horse and out of the money bought her an alpaca dress, the first she had ever had. It wasn't made up, but there were twelve full yards of the shiny goods. Some day when the linings and trimmings could be had she would make it into a best dress.

The second episode was a letter from her sister Nancy, entreating her to pay a visit to the home in Canada. Moreover, Nancy sent the money for the journey. That clinched the matter with Uncle Joe, who had only the average conscience. He said, "Get ready and go and stay two weeks," but Aunt Jane answered:

"How can I even think of such a thing? You'd let the clock run down the very first night I was gone, and you'd let them two roosters eat up all the corn for twenty hens!"

After talking matters over for a week, however, and after remembering that Sister Nancy was a good dressmaker it was decided that Aunt Jane should pay the visit. It was a straight run to Sister Nancy's. All she had to do was to keep her seat and ask the conductor every fifteen minutes if they were most there. The rails kept their place, and the cars stayed on the rails, and in due time Aunt Jane and Sister Nancy were landed in each other's arms. After three or four days the trimmings were bought and work started on the new dress. Aunt Jane was wearing it when she reached home.

One day two weeks later, as Uncle Joe was hoeing potatoes in the field, he heard the dinner horn blow. It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and that tooting could only mean danger of some kind. He dropped his hoe and hiked. Aunt Jane awaited him at the kitchen door. She was palefaced and weeping and wringing her hands.

"Well, what is it?" was asked.

"I've got to go to prison for the rest of my life!" was the sobbing reply.

"Nonsense! What you been doing?"

"And if I don't go to prison the fine will be at least $1,000!"

"For what? Why in tarnashun don't you tell me?"

"Gimme a little time, pa. I'm all shook up. The truth of the matter is I'm a smuggler!"

"As how?"

"I took that dress goods over to Canada and didn't say a word about it. There I had my dress made up and wore it home and didn't say nothing. That's smuggling, and smuggling is an awful thing."

"No, 'twan't. It was jest a slip. 'Tain't like hiding a stone in the bottom of a butter crock. Now, you jest shet up about it and don't skeer me to death blowing horns out o' time."

When Uncle Joe came up to [illegible] he saw that Aunt Jane was still [illegible] [illegible] seams and whipped it up. He refused to open the subject again, and that night he knew she didn't sleep a wink. For the first time in twenty years the clock was left unwound. He was ready to go to the field when he asked:

"Are you going to keep this thing up right along?"

"Yes, unless it's fixed," was the tearful reply.

"Then I'd better board in the barn!"

"But it's my conscience, pa—my conscience. I've tried to forget it, but I can't. If I go to sing I hear a voice saying to me:

"'Aunt Jane, you are a smuggler, and you dasn't look one of your own hens in the face! You've robbed Canada, and you've robbed America, and you deserve to be sent to state prison!'

"That's the way the voice keeps saying, pa, and what am I to do?"

"Tell it to go to Texas!"

For a week Aunt Jane was the most miserable woman in the state. She was ridiculed and scolded by turns, but when Uncle Joe realized that there was no other way to bring back her peace of mind he said:

"Waal, tie another string around the bundle, and I'll go along with it and have it over with. It'll cost $4.50 to go and come, but if I don't go you'll be flat in bed in a week or more."

And a trip was made to the border, and the bundle was put into the hands of a customs officer with the explanation. He looked at Uncle Joe for a long minute and then returned the bundle with a remark. The remark was saved up until the farmer got home. Aunt Jane saw him while he was yet afar off, and she was at the gate to meet him and ask:

"Is it all fixed?"

"Yes."

"Am I to go to prison?"

"No."

"What did the man say?"

"That you must be an idiot!"

"Anything more?"

"And that I must have come out of the same barrel!"

Old Time Strawberries.

Strawberries have improved very much in flavor since the fifteenth century. Until then the only strawberries eaten were wild strawberries of a kind which would never find a market nowadays. By 1480, however, they were beginning to be cultivated, for Holinshed records under that date a particularly fine crop grown by the bishop of Ely in the grounds of his palace, now covered by Hatton garden. He quotes the Duke of Gloucester as saying to the bishop: "My lord, you have very good strawberries in your garden in Holborn. I require you to let us have a mess of them." This speech was copied almost verbatim by Shakespeare in "Richard III." Still, even the bishop's fruit would not appeal much to modern connoisseurs, for the garden strawberries at that period were only transplanted wildlings, the plants being sold at about fourpence a bushel.—London Standard.

Origin of the Piano.

The pianoforte was directly evolved from the clavichord and the harpsichord. In 1711 Scipione Maffei gave a detailed account of the first four instruments, which were constructed by Bartolommeo Christofori. It was named by him the pianoforte and was first exhibited in 1709. Marius, in France, exhibited harpsichords, with hammer action, in 1716, and Schroter, in Germany, claimed to have invented the pianoforte between 1717 and 1720. Marius was at first generally credited with the invention. Pianos of that period were shaped very much like the modern grand variety. The first square piano was constructed by Frederica, an organ manufacturer of Saxony, in 1758. The first genuine upright piano was invented in England and the United States by John Isaac Hawkins, an Englishman, in 1800.—Detroit Free Press.

The First Money.

Money is mentioned as a medium of exchange in Genesis, chapter 23, and is supposed to refer to a time as far back as 1800 B. C. The coinage of money is ascribed to the Lydians, a people of Asia Minor. It is, of course, quite impossible to fix any definite date for the first coinage. Long before any one thought to coin money it was made out of any durable substance that came to hand, such as leather, iron, tin, bronze and even the hard bark of the trees and stones of the fields. The Hollander, so late as the middle of the sixteenth century, made money of pasteboard. In fact, pretty nearly everything in the shade of lasting material has at one time or another been used as the medium of trade known as money.

Suiting the Action to the Word.

At a lecture a well known authority on economics mentioned the fact that in some parts of America the number of men was constantly larger than that of women, and he added humorously, "I can therefore recommend to the ladies to emigrate to that part."

A young lady who was seated in one of the last rows of the auditorium got up, and, full of indignation, left the room rather noisily, whereupon the lecturer remarked, "I did not mean that it should be done in such a hurry."—Judge.

White Specks In Butter.

White specks in butter are sometimes simply fine particles of milk curd, resulting from lack of care in skimming. Sometimes they are small specks of dried cream, having been scraped from the sides of the pan and being too dry to thoroughly soften and mix with the rest.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"Waiter, these eggs are as hard as a stone. I told you not to boil them more than three minutes and a half."

"Yes, sir; that's just the time they were in to a second, but the—aw—water was hard, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the [illegible] that brains and time and [illegible] severance have achieved [illegible] of industry.

To make it a mirror [illegible] resources and Minnes[illegible] advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Monday, Sept. 4th, Labor Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Minneapolis Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 6th, Farmers' Day.
Thursday, Sept. 7th, St. Paul Day.
Friday, Sept. 8th, Pioneers and Soldiers' Day.
Saturday, Sept. 9th, Children's Day.

THE BIGGEST CHEESE.

One of the biggest cheeses ever made is now being constructed for exhibition at the Minnesota State Fair. This mammoth dairy product will weigh between five and six thousand pounds, will be approximately six feet in diameter and will stand about forty-four inches high. It will be made of full cream American cheese of the best quality. As a novelty it will be attractive and is expected to stimulate the cheese making industry in Minnesota and the Northwest.

Friday, Sept. 8, has been designated as Grand Army day at the Minnesota State Fair. Veterans wearing the regular Grand Army badge or regimental reunion badge will be admitted free on that day.

A Challenge

By REGINALD D'HAVEN

Monty Sherman was ambitious to fight a duel.

Monty was still young when he married and went on the Mediterranean trip to Italy for a wedding tour. He talked so fiercely about what he would do if he had any trouble with any one in foreign lands that his bride was nearly scared to death.

In Rome Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were constantly to be seen [illegible] engaged in sightseeing, [illegible] their favorite sidewalk outside [illegible] in the Piazza Colonna, the lady [illegible] something, the man [illegible] cigarettes. One day Monty wished to go a short distance around the corner to buy some cigars, and his wife chose to remain where she was till he returned. While he was gone an Italian faultlessly dressed stepped up to the bride and, raising his hat politely, said something in Italian which she did not understand. She turned away from him, and he passed on.

When her husband returned, forgetting his duelistic propensities, his wife told him of the occurrence. He at once became very [illegible] excited.

"But the man was very polite."

"That doesn't matter. He shall apologize."

Mrs. Sherman tried to reason with him, but to no purpose. He rushed into the cafe and asked the proprietor if he had seen the man who had spoken to his wife. The proprietor said that he had not, but called several of the waiters who happened to notice the episode, one of whom said the man was Signor Capponi, who came to the cafe every afternoon.

Monty could not wait for the next afternoon to avenge the insult to his young bride, so he asked the proprietor for Capponi's address. The proprietor gave it as No. — Via Nationale. He tried to say something else, but Monty did not understand him. Indeed, he was so hot that all he wished to know was Capponi's street and number, which he received written on a card.

Then Monty took his wife to their hotel on the Via Cavour and, leaving her there, went to the number on the Via Nationale given him, where he found a store for the sale of books and stationery. Monty, who was bent on doing things as he had always read of their being done in affairs of honor, entered the store and asked a clerk who advanced to meet him if he spoke English.

"Si, signor, a leetle."

Monty thereupon told him that he wished to see Signor Capponi. The clerk managed with difficulty to tell Monty that Signor Capponi was out. Then Monty told him to tell Signor Capponi when he came in that he had insulted a lady and there must be an apology or a fight. Then he threw down his card on the counter. The clerk took it up and began to talk to Monty about it in a mixed language of three-fourths Italian and one-fourth execrable English. He got out the words "How much?" to which Monty replied, "Immediately." The clerk made a pencil mark on the card, and Monty, taking it from him, wrote Grand Hotel on it. Then he stalked out, saying that he would await a reply at the address given.

Now, if there is a matter of life and death on the tapis it is better to have an interpreter. The clerk had not understood one word of what Monty had said, and vice versa. Monty returned to his hotel, where he tried to act before his wife as if nothing of importance had happened. But the eye of love is not to be deceived. Mrs. Sherman worked upon him till he confessed that he had challenged Signor Capponi to deadly combat. She was in despair. She was sure he would be killed. She was so troubled that he half regretted he had been so precipitate, especially since his wife, who understood a little Italian, said she thought the man asked her if he might not take an order for some merchandise.

Monty received no reply to his challenge that evening, and before he went to bed his wife secured a promise from him that if Signor Capponi did not accept he (Monty) would let the matter drop. The next day passed, but still Capponi sent no representative to arrange a meeting. The bride was beginning to hope that the trouble had fallen through when a waiter announced that some one wished to see Signor Sherman in the reception room. Mrs. Sherman insisted on going down with her husband, and he was unable to prevent her. Entering the reception room together, an Italian, handsomely dressed, arose, poking a card at Monty.

Mrs. Sherman gasped and clutched her heart. Monty looked at the card and was surprised to see that it was the one he had left at Capponi's, pencil marks and all. Then the visitor handed him a little packet. Monty pulled off the cover and found a hundred of his own visiting cards. Then the man shoved a bill under his nose for 10 francs.

Mrs. Sherman gave a sigh of relief. "Oh, how fortunate!" she exclaimed. "They must have mistaken the card you left for a sample and supposed you wished some cards printed."

Monty smiled a sickly smile.

The next day at the cafe on the piazza colonna they saw Capponi soliciting orders for visiting cards.

All of which goes to show that men who send challenges for deadly combat should do so in the language of the country.

A SENSITIVE PAIR

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

This is a story of the old army in ante civil war times.

Among the graduates of the West Point Military academy class of 18— was Paul Lambert. He was adjutant of the corps, which is a prominent position among the cadets, and was graduated in the engineers. There was present at the graduating exercises that year Florence Rutherford, a young lady equally prominent with Lambert. The two had met there in June once before and had been much together.

Perhaps there is no place more conducive to lovemaking than a military post, and for the purpose West Point stands pre-eminent on account of the youth of those assembled. The cadets are in camp near the hotel, and when they are on leave couples may be seen on the piazza or starting up to old Fort Putnam or down Flirtation walk—indeed, anywhere they like within "bounds."

Paul Lambert and Florence Rutherford were one of these couples and much observed for their physical beauty. As soon as Lambert was given his commission he made a proposition of marriage to Miss Rutherford. He had been in doubt as to his acceptance, for the girl, though she permitted his attentions whenever he talked "spoon" —to use a slang phrase—was very chary of a response. But every lover is in doubt until he receives a consent. Lambert when he was refused received as great a blow as if he had been sure of an acceptance.

The girl was very conscientious and the man very sensitive. She took too much pains in interrogating her feelings, and he attached too much importance to her refusal. Had he persevered she would have yielded. But our paths in life are determined often by some small incident. The worlds of these two persons were determined by Lambert's failure to ask the same question twice. A consent upon the second asking would have made him inexpressibly happy. The reason he did not ask again was because he had been so sure of himself that he considered that the girl could not fail to recognize her own feelings. Had she felt toward him as he felt toward her there could be no mistaking the emotion.

The consequence of this reasoning on both sides was that two persons who seemed to have been made for each other were kept apart and consequently entered upon lives the honey of which had been extracted. Lambert never dreamed that Miss Rutherford regretted her decision the moment it had been made, and she could not understand how, if he loved her, he should be content without her. And if he was not content without her he must surely try to win her. This similar reasoning in each, though nothing in itself, served to make a chasm between them.

Five years passed, during which neither of the lovers married. Then Miss Rutherford, being assured by a friend of Lambert that he would never marry, taking the reason for granted, wrote her lover a note, reopening the case.

But what was her surprise to receive a reply ignoring what she had intended. All her pride revolted at having so demeaned herself. She considered that she had been served aright for attempting to recall a man she had refused, and she did not blame him for having declined what was virtually an offer.

Nothing could have been more touching than the note written by Lambert. There was the same melancholy in it he had shown ever since he had been refused. He did not refer to that refusal or its consequences. He referred to life as inexpressibly depressing in his case, but made no intimation as to the cause. Had he done so it would have left a loophole for another communication from Miss Rutherford that might have led to a union between the two. As it was, it sealed her lips on the subject.

There was one suspicion in Miss Rutherford's mind that made her think that Lambert had a reason for not reopening the affair with her. At the time her letter was sent Lambert was in attendance upon his father, who was [illegible]. She fancied [illegible] that he should [illegible] nothing [illegible] with [illegible] all his [illegible]. Then she heard that the father had died, and a faint hope sprang up in her breast that if there had been such a cause it was now removed. But time passed, and she heard nothing from her lover. Then she settled down to the belief that Lambert had grown away from his love for her.

But he certainly could not have come to love any one else, for he became a recluse. He left the army and shut himself up in a house by himself. When the Cuban-American war came on he re-entered the service, and by the way he exposed himself his brother officers suspected that he was trying to get himself killed. Finally during the last fighting before Santiago he was mortally wounded and died in a few days.

Miss Rutherford, though she did not put on widow's weeds, considered herself a widow. One day she was notified that she was heir to a considerable estate left her by Paul Lambert. With the papers handed her was a letter informing her that his father previous to his death had informed him that he (Paul) was illegitimate.

SPOKANE WINS FREIGHT CASE

Commerce Commission Settles Important Rate Controversy.

ORDERS MATERIAL SLASHES

Railroads Have Exacted From Shippers to Intermediate Points Higher Rates Than Were Charged to San Francisco, Seattle and Other Pacific Coast Points—Decision Fixes Rates and Gives Lines Until Oct. 15 to Adjust Tariffs Accordingly.

Washington, July 25.—In what are known as the Spokane-Reno-Pacific coast cases the interstate commerce commission ordered material reductions in freight rates from the East to points between Denver and the western terminals of the great transcontinental railroads.

For many years the railroads have exacted from shippers to intermediate points, such as Spokane and Reno, higher rates on eastern freights than were charged for the much longer hauls to Seattle, San Francisco and other Pacific coast points. The theory has been that the railroads must meet water competition to the Pacific coast. The higher rates to intermediate points, arbitrarily fixed, have been defended by a comparison with the coast rates plus a theoretical back haul from the coast to the inland stations along the line.

The commission recognizes the right of a railroad to meet water competition to Pacific coast points, but practically wipes out the back haul rates to inter-Rocky mountain territory. It lays down what it considers would be fair and just rates to various freight zones in the West and gives the railroads until Oct. 15 to adjust their tariffs accordingly.

The commission also lays down the important principle that hereafter railroads will not be permitted to fix arbitrary market limits and that hereafter commercial conditions rather than the will of railway traffic managers shall control rates on transcontinental transportation.

The decisions announced are of far reaching importance. They affect directly all freight rates between the Atlantic ocean and the Pacific coast. Particularly they affect the rates in the territory lying between Denver and Pacific coast points. Hereafter the rates paid by shippers will be governed by a strict interpretation of the long and short haul clause.

HEARING ON GRAIN RATES

Commerce Commission Takes Testimony at Superior.

Superior, Wis., July 25.—The hearing of the Superior Commercial club's grain rate case, in which unreasonable and discriminatory rates from parts of the Dakotas, Montana, Iowa and Nebraska in favor of Chicago and Minneapolis are alleged, was held before the interstate commerce commission here. Commissioners E. E. Clark and B. H. Meyers presided.

An array of half a hundred traffic experts and attorneys representing several big railroad lines, the Duluth board of trade, Chicago board of trade, Minneapolis chamber of commerce, Milwaukee chamber of commerce and other interests were in attendance.

At the conclusion of the testimony the case was set over indefinitely for final decision, until the Duluth and Milwaukee hearings are considered.

HEARST IS FOR HARRISON

Hopes to Line Up California, Illinois and New York in Support.

Chicago, July 25.—When A. M. Lawrence returns to Chicago from his trip to the coast he will have in his pocket, according to the expectations of the "Hearst-Harrison" Democrats, a signed pledge from the leaders of California's Democracy to support Mayor Carter H. Harrison for president at the national convention.

When Mr. Lawrence returns he will not remain, but will leave the Hearst interests here in other hands and proceed to New York, where he will try to repeat the performance he is accredited with having put on in California.

Hearst leaders here believe they can swing the Illinois delegation for Mayor Harrison and they figure that with New York and California on the band wagon at the start they will have little trouble in nominating Harrison.

Such a Thoughtful Woman.

When the man and woman started down the subway stairs the man felt in his pockets for tickets.

"By George!" he said. "Isn't that a shame? I've got to stop in all this mob and buy tickets."

"Oh, no, you haven't," said the woman. "I have them. When I came downtown I remembered what you said about those people who buy only one ticket at a time making such a nuisance of themselves, so, as I had 15 cents to spare, I bought three tickets. I have two left. We can go right on through."

So the man and the woman drifted along with the pushing crowd to the point where the ticket chopper held them up and demanded tickets. Then the woman looked in her purse for the tickets. Suddenly her face assumed a painful blankness.

"I—I haven't got them," she faltered. "I was in such a hurry when I came through that I must have dropped all three tickets into the uptown box."—New York Herald.

A Note That Was Paid.

History is constantly repeating itself. Once upon a time a landlady in Washington called on President Andrew Jackson and told of a government clerk who owed her a big bill for board. In those days it was easy to have access to the White House. President Jackson listened to her story and advised her to get a promissory note from the clerk and put it in bank. She replied:

"I've done that twice, general, and he won't pay even then."

"Is that so?" said the president in surprise. "Now you go and get his note and bring it to me. I simply want to see it, and I'm sure that the clerk will pay that note. Go and bring it to me."

The landlady did so, and soon returned with the promissory note. The president turned it over and wrote across the back of it his own indorsement: "A. Jackson."

That note was paid at maturity.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Waves In Solid Metal.

As illustrating the advances in metallurgy and engineering it has been demonstrated that solid metals may reveal by their structure the vibrations to which they have been subjected. In explaining this phenomenon experiments have been shown proving that a beautiful wave structure can be imparted to the surface of mercury by the vibrations of a tuning fork, and that even the surface of solid lead which had been subjected to similar vibrations possesses a structure resembling that of a vibrating surface of mercury. Mild steel has been defined as a "solid solution" of iron and carbon, free from cinders. Metallurgists have doubled the strength of steel as it was known in its early days.—Scientific American.

Relieved.

"Where did you get these examples of faultily constructed sentences?" asked Dr. Campbell, the great rhetorician, of a student.

"Out of one of your books, doctor."

"What? Where? Out of one of my books?"

"Yes, sir; out of your 'Rhetoric.'"

"Out of my 'Rhetoric'!" roared the doctor. "[illegible]. Never did I make use of such language. You are mistaken, badly mistaken. But—but—where in my 'Rhetoric' did you find such composition?" he demanded angrily.

"In the part, 'Sentences to be Corrected.'"

"O-h-h-h-h! A-h-h-h-h! Yes, yes," said the relieved doctor.—Philadelphia North American.

Too Much For Her.

Calling one day to see an old friend who was visiting her married son, I inquired of the colored maid who answered the bell, "Is Mrs. Smith at home?"

"Yas'm, she home," the girl replied, showing no inclination to invite me in. "She here, all right, but she got a misery in de haid."

"Mrs. Smith senior?" I asked with concern.

"Seen me!" she exclaimed suspiciously. "Cose she seen me. Huccome she ain' see me w'en she hire me las' night huh own self?" And she indignantly shut the door.—Lippincott's.

The Worst.

"My wife has been having some trouble with her throat," confided a friend, "and I got pretty worried about it and sent for a doctor. He examined her and looked very grave, and that scared me even worse. So I said, 'Tell me the worst at once, Doc,' and he whispered, 'She will recover her voice.' And my wife overheard the question and the answer, and now Doc and I are both in bad."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Resentment.

"Did you say I was a cheap trickster?" asked the ward worker.

"No, I didn't," replied the man who is close to the boss. "I merely said you were a trickster."

"Well, that's all right, but don't you ever insinuate that I am doing a cut rate business."—Washington Star.

A Tragedy.

"How did you like my new tragedy?"

"Tragedy? I thought it was comedy."

"So did I till I got my check for the profits."

RESOLUTION

At a regular meeting of the City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, in the County of Pennington and State of Minnesota, held on the 18th day of July A. D., 1911 at 8 o'clock p. m., in the office of the City Clerk of said City of Thief River Falls, and a quorum thereof being present, Alderman J. C. Berg of said City Council offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLVED, First: that it is expedient and necessary to issue and sell bonds of said city to an amount in the aggregate not exceeding Forty Thousand Dollars, bearing interest at a rate not to exceed six (6) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, the proceeds of said bonds to be used in making an enlargement and improvement of the electric light plant now owned and operated by said city. That said bonds be issued under authority of the appropriate provisions of Chapter 8, General Laws, Minnesota, 1895, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be made payable twenty years from their date and bear such date and be in such denominations and in such form consistent with law as may hereafter be determined by this city council.

SECOND: That the question of issuing said bonds be submitted for ratification or rejection to the electors of said city at a special election which is hereby called for that purpose, which shall be held on the 25th, day of August 1911, and at which the polls shall be open at six o'clock a. m., and closed at nine o'clock p. m.

THIRD, that the ballot to be used at said special election shall have printed thereon the following:

Shall the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota issue and sell its bonds to an amount in the aggregate not exceeding Forty Thousand Dollars ($40,000.00) payable twenty years from their date, bearing interest at a rate not to exceed six (6) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, for the purpose of making an enlargement and improvment of the electric plant now owned and operated by said city, pursuant to the resolution of the city council of said city adopted July 18th 1911.

YES ________ ☐
NO ________ ☐

and that on each printed ballot, in advance of the question, shall be printed instructions to voters in the following language:

(The voter will express his choice by making an X in the square opposite the word "Yes" if he favors the proposition, or in the square opposite the word "No" if he is against it.)

FOURTH, that the City Clerk cause ballots in said form to be prepared and give the notice of said election required by law.

Which resolution being duly seconded by Alderman Jens P. Jensen of said City was read and put to a vote of said City Council and the Aldermen of said City voting Yes were: Emil Sedlacek, Milton Forder, G. W. Booren, Jens P. Jensen and J. C. Berg, and the Aldermen of said City voting No: were none, and said resolution having received five votes in its favor and no votes against it, the same was duly passed and adopted and so declared.

Dated July 18th, 1911.

Milton Forder,
President of the City Council.

Approved July 22nd, 1911.

RECIPROCITY VOTE DECISIVE

Bill Passes Senate by Fifty-three to Twenty-seven.

MANY ROLL CALLS TAKEN

Preceding Passage of the Measure All Amendments Offered Are Voted Down.

Washington, July 23.—The Canadian reciprocity bill passed the senate without amendment by 53 to 27. All amendments had been previously defeated. It becomes law upon the president's signature, the senate measure being the bill that passed the house.

The final vote on the bill came at the close of a lively session. There were numerous roll calls on the various amendments, but no attempt at any time to delay final action. The senate chamber was well filled, many members of the house having gathered in the rear of the hall.

News of the passage of the reciprocity bill was telephoned at once to the White House. President Taft made no attempt to conceal his pleasure. Following was the vote on the measure:

Republicans Against the Bill—Borah and Heyburn, Idaho; Bourne, Oregon; Bristow and Curtis, Kansas; Burnham, New Hampshire; Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Clark and Warren, Wyoming; Crawford and Gamble, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Dixon, Montana; Gronna and McCumber, North Dakota; La Follette, Wisconsin; Lippitt, Rhode Island; Lorimer, Illinois; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Page, Vermont; Smith, Michigan; Smoot, Utah.

Democrats Against—Bailey, Texas; Clarke, Arkansas; Simmons, North Carolina.

Senators Who Voted for Bill.

Republicans for the Bill—Bradley, Kentucky, Brandegree and McLean, Connecticut; Briggs, New Jersey; Brown, Nebraska; Burton, Ohio; Crane and Lodge, Massachusetts; Cullom, Illinois; Guggenheim, Colorado; Jones and Poindexter, Washington; Nixon, Nevada; Penrose, Pennsylvania; Perkins and Works, California; Richardson, Delaware; Root, New York; Stephenson, Wisconsin; Townsend, Michigan; Wetmore, Rhode Island.

Democrats For—Bacon, Georgia; Bankhead and Johnson, Alabama; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Chamberlain, Oregon; Chilton and Watson, West Virginia; Culberson, Texas; Davis, Arkansas; Foster, Louisiana; Gore and Owen, Oklahoma; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Johnson, Maine; Kern and Shively, Indiana; Martin and Swanson, Virginia; Martine, New Jersey; Myers, Montana; Newlands, Nevada; O'Gorman, New York; Overman, North Carolina; Paynter, Kentucky; Pomerene, Ohio; Reed and Stone, Missouri; Smith, Maryland; Smith, South Carolina; Taylor, Tennessee; Williams, Mississippi.

An analysis of the vote showed that twenty-four Republicans voted against the bill and twenty-one in favor of it; while three Democrats voted against and thirty-two in favor.

FIVE THOUSAND BUILDINGS BURNED

Part of Foreign Section of Constantinople Destroyed.

Constantinople, July 25.—More than 5,000 buildings were destroyed and many thousands of persons rendered homeless by an incendiary fire which raged in the Stamboul, or native quarter of Constantinople, for nearly twenty-four hours.

Cherket Pasha, minister of war, and one of Turkey's most famous generals, was injured by a falling beam while directing successful efforts to save the ministry of war building.

The fire is said to have been started simultaneously in six places. Official circles attribute it to opponents of the present government.

WICKERSHAM CALLS IT A FALSEHOOD

Denies Charge Made by Alaskan Delegate.

Washington, July 25.—The name of Senator Nelson of Minnesota was brought into the discussion before the house committee on the judiciary, which held a hearing in the matter of charges brought against Attorney General Wickersham by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska.

Attorney General Wickersham denounced as an absolute falsehood the charge recently made before the committee by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that the attorney general "purposely did shield and defend the Alaska syndicate criminals from crimes against the government in instances wherein I personally gave him the evidence which would justify him in finding indictments."

The instances mentioned by the delegate had to do with a contract for supplying coal to United States forts in Alaska, and the alleged bribery of witnesses at the Hazey murder trial. Delegate Wickersham charged that in the coal contract case the attorney general disregarded the proof furnished to him and permitted the statute of limitations to run.

At the conclusion of the attorney general's statement Representative Martin W. Littleton of New York, a member of the committee, demanded that Delegate Wickersham either prove his charges against the attorney general or withdraw them. The delegate asked for a few days to prepare a statement and the committee allowed him until next Monday.

ALDRICH DENIES HINES' EVIDENCE

Declares He Did Not Select Lorimer for Senator.

TESTIFIES AT INVESTIGATION

Declares He Simply Informed Lumber Baron That Lorimer Was "Not Objectionable."

Washington, July 21.—Former Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island told the senate Lorimer committee of the part he and President Taft took in the election of a senator from Illinois in 1909.

Instead of telling Edward Hines of Chicago, the storm center in the present Lorimer investigation, that he and the president were anxious to have Lorimer elected, Mr. Aldrich declared that he said Lorimer's candidacy was "not objectionable." When attorneys for Lorimer on cross-examination tried to show that the former senator might have said "acceptable," Mr. Aldrich emphatically declared that he said "not objectionable," and that he meant that word and nothing more. He added that he knew Hines would use the information given him at Springfield.

Mr. Aldrich also denied he had told Hines that he considered Lorimer the only man who could be elected. He declared that he did not ask Senator Penrose to bring Hines to consult with him in regard to the Illinois election and added that he did not believe Senator Penrose brought Hines to his room.

Discussed President's Attitude.

According to Aldrich all the conversations he had with Hines in regard to the senatorial situation were regarding the president's attitude toward candidates, first, Hopkins, then Boutell and finally Lorimer. The senator denied that he told Hines he wanted a senator elected because of the prospective close vote on the tariff.

The regular procedure of the committee was interrupted to allow Mr. Aldrich to take the stand. He shook hands with members of the committee, taking particular pains to greet Senator Lorimer, who had listened to his testimony.

Hines had testified that Aldrich sent for him about May 1, 1909, to ask about the possibility of the Illinois legislature electing a senator; that eventually, after repeated conferences, Aldrich had asked him to urge Lorimer to become a senatorial candidate and that after a night conference at the White House, Mr. Aldrich had returned to his home, where Hines was waiting and told Hines to inform Governor Deneen that the administration was anxious to have the senate vacancy filled and believed Lorimer could be elected.

ANOTHER TALE OF BRIBERY

Witness Tells of Efforts to Buy Votes for Hopkins.

Washington, July 25.—A detailed account of a reputed attempt to buy enough Democratic votes in the Illinois legislature to re-elect Albert J. Hopkins to the senate was told on the witness stand before the senate Lorimer committee by James Keeley, general manager of the Chicago Tribune.

It was the sensation of a day of sensations in the hearing. It followed Mr. Keeley's testimony as to how he happened to buy the confession of Charles A. White, the legislator whose story about grafts at Springfield resulted in the Lorimer investigation.

It was subsequent to testimony by Edward Hines that Henry S. Boutell, now American minister to Switzerland, told him President Taft would assist in the election of Lorimer to the senate. Mr. Hines had been placed on the stand to tell about visits he paid last winter to E. H. Gary, R. S. Lovett, successor to E. H. Harriman, J. S. Bache & Co., and others in New York. None of these visits, the witness said, had anything to do with the Lorimer case.

BRYAN STRIKES AT HARMON

Fires Opening Gun in Fight Against Ohio Governor.

Lincoln, Neb., July 22.—In defending himself from an attack by Douglas county Democrats, who assailed him for bolting the gubernatorial candidacy of Mayor Dahlman last November, William Jennings Bryan, in the current issue of the Commoner, fired what is regarded as his opening gun in his fight to prevent Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio from securing the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1912.

Bryan declares the attack upon him is made by Omaha brewers through the Douglas county Democracy, which, at the same time, endorsed Harmon, "who bolted the Democratic national ticket in 1896 and used his influence to help elect Mr. McKinley, the Republican candidate."

THREE HIGHWAYMEN GO THROUGH TRAIN

Hold Up the North Coast Limited Near Buffalo, N. D.

Fargo, N. D., July 21.—Three masked highwaymen held up the North Coast limited No. 2 on the Northern Pacific road near Buffalo, N. D., searched the passengers, shot and wounded the engineer, E. D. Olson of Fargo, and escaped with cash and valuables estimated at between $500 and $1,000.

The North Coast limited, eastbound, stopped at Highbridge, between Valley City and Buffalo. The three men, armed and wearing masks, entered a day coach. One held the train crew at bay, while the others lined up the passengers and took their valuables. The sleepers and dining car also were invaded and few passengers escaped the search.

Completing their work in the train the robbers crawled over the baggage car to the tender of the locomotive. They ordered the engineer, Olson, to stop the train. He refused. Two shots were fired into the engine cab. One bullet inflicted a flesh wound in the side of the engineer. The other went wild. The engineer stopped the train and the highwaymen dropped off the tender and fled.

TAFT TALKS TO BLUE AND GRAY

President Makes Plea for Peace on Bull Run Battlefield.

Manassas, Va., July 22.—Mud bespattered after a strenuous trip from Washington by automobile, over flooded roads and swollen creeks, Mr. Taft faced an audience made up in part of veterans who wore the blue and the gray, within a few miles of the scene of the first great conflict of the Civil war, and was applauded and cheered when he made a plea for international peace.

The president declared that a general arbitration treaty both with Great Britain and with France probably would be signed within ten days. He added that he hoped within a few days to announce that three other powers would enter into similar agreements with the United States. It was generally believed he referred to Germany, Italy and The Netherlands. Japan ultimately may come into the far-reaching peace pact, but the negotiations with that empire as yet are said to be merely tentative.

Middletown, N. Y., July 25.—Edward D. Crans and wife, a middle aged couple, were found dead in their home here. They had carried out a suicide pact by drinking carbolic acid, after making all arrangements for a funeral. Mrs. Crans was dressed in her bridal clothes, which she had saved for more than a score of years.

LAURIER ISSUES AN ULTIMATUM

Canadian Premier Says Permit Vote or Go to Country.

CONSERVATIVES FAVOR DELAY

Chief Obstacle to Holding General Election at Present Time to Determine Whether Dominion Favors Reciprocity Agreement With the United States Is That Under Pending Census Western Canada Will Gain Twenty or More Members.

Ottawa, July 25.—"Permit a vote to be taken in parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people on it without delay," was the ultimatum Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed to the Conservative opposition in parliament.

The chief obstacle to holding the general election at this time is that under the census which is just being taken Western Canada will be entitled to twenty or more additional members. The census will not be completed until October and a law giving the West its increased representation cannot be passed for some weeks after that.

If an election is held before the law is enacted the West will be under represented in parliament for at least four years and the political leaders believe it will show its resentment to the party which it holds responsible for this.

With this situation confronting them there was a sharp debate when consideration of the agreement was resumed. A. S. Middleboro (Conservative) said that fifty-five Conservatives have not spoken on reciprocity who have the right to speak without obstruction being charged. He declared that the government should have taken the census two months earlier.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

"My honorable friend," replied Premier Laurier, "tries to convince the house and the country that the opposition is not obstructing. Neither the census nor the redistribution are before the house to be dealt with. We do not want reciprocity to wait. We want it to pass either in this house or before the country.

"The opposition say that they want an election, but when we take steps to have one they protest. But we understand this. The last thing the Conservatives want is to go before the people of Canada in opposition to this question. Well, there is but one way for them to escape that and that is by allowing a vote to be taken on the agreement and pass it so that the Canadian farmers may have access to the American market for their crops this fall."

Opposition Leader Borden replied that as Canada had waited forty years for reciprocity it could afford to wait six months longer and allow redistribution to give the West its proper representation.

MANY CHILDREN IN PERIL

Fire Destroys Kansas Hospital for Feeble Minded.

Wichita, Kan., July 25.—Word reached Wichita from Winfield that the state hospital for feeble minded is on fire.

Reports from Winfield say that the two main buildings are burned. Both were filled with feeble minded children and attendants.

Later reports from the scene of the fire at Winfield say that the fire is practically under control. No lives were lost.

The fire started from electric wires in the northeast corner of the main hall.

Labor Men Must Face Trial.

Washington, July 25.—Declaring that the attack made upon him before a congressional committee by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor left him no alternative but to proceed with the trial to the end Justice Wright of the District supreme court reiterated his refusal to certify the contempt cases of the three labor leaders, Messrs. Gompers Mitchell and Morrison, to some other member of the court.

There was a reunion of the famous Curbstone Quartet last Sunday night, which set a new record in the line of reunions, and those who were fortunate enough to be in on the festivities will hold the doings of that event long in memory. The function was pulled off at the residence of Wiley Phillips on South Ash street, and there were no doubts left as to Mr. Phillips' ability as a host. A spread of rare sumptuousness was spread and ample justice was done to its deliciousness. The evening was spent in the rendition of the familiar airs which in the past made the quartet the pride and joy of this community. One of the rare hits of the evening was an attempted duet between Joe Wessel and Delort Toutant. The honor guest of the occasion was Bill Krause, formerly of Crookston, later of Thief River Falls, more later of Alexandria, and now of Minneapolis. Those who enjoyed Mr. Phillips' hospitality were: Bill Krause, Joe Wessel, D. J. Toutant, C. A. Hitchcock, Clayton Final, John J. Kelly, James Powers and S. W. Wheeler.—Crookston Times.

The Motto on the Clock.

The old Temple clock in London bears a curious inscription, the origin of which is ascribed to a chance remark.

Some 200 years or so ago a master workman was employed to repair and put in a new face upon the clock. When his work was nearly done he asked the benchers for an appropriate motto to carve upon the base. They promised to think of one. Week after week he came for their decision, but was put off. One day he found them at dinner in commons.

"What motto shall I put on the clock, your lordship?" he asked of a learned judge.

"Oh, go about your business!" his honor cried angrily.

"And very suitable for a lazy, dawdling gang!" the clockmaker is said to have muttered as he retreated. It is certain that he carved "Go about your business" on the base.

The lawyers decided that no better warning could be given them at any hour of the day, and there the inscription still remains.—Harper's Weekly.

The Exceptional Young Man.

The exceptional young man, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine, is the one who looks upon his employer's interests as he would his own, who regards his vocation as an opportunity to make a man of himself, an opportunity to show his employer the stuff he is made of, and who is always preparing himself to fill the position above him.

The exceptional young man is the one who never says, "I was not paid to do that." "I don't get salary enough to work after hours or to take so much pains." He never leaves things half done, but does everything to a finish.

The exceptional young man is the one who studies his employer's business, who reads its literature, who is on the watch for every improvement which others in the same line have adopted and which his employer has not, who is always improving himself during his spare time for larger things.

Labrador's Short Summer.

How brief is the summer on the highlands of Labrador! says Hesketh Prichard in the Wide World. Snow does not melt till July, then with a rush midsummer comes. Grasses and leaves grow almost visibly, the wild cotton soon flings out its little white pennons, millions of berries ripen on the ground, the loon cries, the ptarmigan calls, and you may even see a butterfly balancing in the warm wind. But then also wakens the countless army of hunchbacks, lean and gray mosquitoes, piping blithely for blood. So summer reigns. Then suddenly one day at the end of August, after the sun has sunk behind the barren crags through a balmy warmth of evening, one may wake up to find everything transfigured and the first snow of another season already falling.

Found Out His Man.

A southerner who was visiting St. Louis wandered into the dining room of the hotel and, seeing a negro servant who had all the importance of an army officer standing near the door, asked him who the "head nigger" was around there. The negro stretched himself to his full height and pompously replied that "there ain't no niggers in St. Louis, sah. We is all gem-men of color."

"Well," said the southerner, drawing a $100 bill from his pocket and fingering it, "I expect to be at this hotel for some time and want to make sure that I will be taken care of."

"Oh, sah," said the negro, whose eyes were popping from his head, "did you want to know who the head 'nigger waiter' is? That's me."—Allentown Call.

Civilizing the Indian.

The following is from "The Soul of the Indian," a book by Dr. Charles Alexander Eastman, himself an Indian:

"Long before I ever heard of Christ or saw a white man I had learned from an untutored woman the essence of morality. With the help of dear nature herself she taught me things simple but of mighty import. I knew God. I perceived what goodness is. I saw and loved what is really beautiful. Civilization has not taught me anything better. As a child I understood how to give. I have forgotten that grace since I became civilized. I lived the natural life, whereas I now live the artificial. Any pretty pebble was valuable to me then, every growing thing an object of reverence. Now I worship with the white man before a painted landscape whose value is painted in dollars. Thus the Indian is reconstructed, as the natural rocks are ground to powder and made into artificial blocks which may be built into the walls of modern society."

Bigness of Big Ben.

Big Ben, which marks the hours for parliament at the top of the clock tower at Westminster, is bigger than it appears from below. Looking at the dial of Big Ben from the northern footway of Great George street or from the Thames embankment, it appears as if its diameter might be equal to the space that a man of medium size could cover with outstretched arms. As a matter of fact, however, the diameter of the dial is twenty-three feet. From the ground the minute marks on the dial look like ordinary minute marks and as if they were close together. Really they are a foot apart. The numerals are two feet long. The minute hand, with its counter balance—the heavy piece of metal that projects beyond the center of the dial—is fifteen feet in length. This hand is so massive that during a snowstorm the clock is sometimes retarded by the weight of the flakes that alight on it.—London Mail.

He Took the Cue.

He was a man who gave little and got much. Today, for instance, he had got a clothes brush, a basin of water, a towel and a shine, and he had given nothing at all.

Tr-r-r-ring! went his bedroom bell. The hotel attendant smiled sourly. This was the fourth time he had been summoned, and he did not hurry.

"I thought you were never coming," exclaimed the visitor when the attendant appeared at last. "Are you nicknamed 'Slowcoach?'"

"No, sir," answered the attendant. "They call me 'Billiard cue.'"

"Billiard cue!" repeated the visitor, frowning. Then an inspiration dawned. "Ah! Because you're such a stick, I suppose?" he asked.

"Wrong again, sir!" returned the attendant. "It's because I work better with a good tip."—London Answers.

A Herculean Katydid.

Experiments conducted by a naturalist attached to one of the government's scientific bureaus at Washington adduced an interesting example of the strength of the katydid. He harnessed a katydid to a kind of sled made by folding a piece of ordinary notepaper, and then loaded the sled with various articles. The insect proved able to draw, in addition to the original paper, twelve paper sheets each 3 by 4½ inches, a large screw, two steel pens, a stone weighing two ounces and three and a half lead pencils. When the weight became too heavy to draw otherwise the katydid got its fore feet over the edge of the table for a better hold, and on the addition of another weight it increased the adhering power of its feet by moistening them in its mouth.—New York Tribune.

Not a Parallel Case.

A writer in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post tells of a big over grown, bashful booby of a farmer's boy who was afraid even to speak to a girl, and whose father one day finally lost patience and scolded him roundly for not looking about and finding some girl to marry. "Why," he said, "at your age I had been married three years and had a house and farm of my own!"

"Well, but dad," complained the boy, "that ain't the same thing at all. You only had to marry mother, while I've got to go and hunt up some strange girl and ask her to marry me!"

Conferring a Title.

While he was governor of Kentucky Proctor Knott sent to the Hon. Stoddart Johnston a certificate, officially signed and bearing the impress of the great seal of the state, duly commissioning him as "Mister," which he said was a distinctive and honorable title that no Kentuckian had ever previously borne.

Light Men.

At a certain hotel in Liverpool an Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotsman were arguing as to which of their respective countries had the lightest men.

The Irishman led the argument by saying:

"We have men of Cork!"

"That may be," said the Scotsman, "but we have men of Ayr."

"Well," said the cockney, "that is very light, but we have 'lighter' men on the Thames."

ONE OF THOSE TUNNEL KISSES

By J. BERRY CRAPE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There is a woman whom I bitterly hate. She is both young and pretty, and yet I hate her. Why so? I will tell you.

I was traveling with my friend Bob Caruthers—both of us bank clerks—going on our minute vacation of one-twenty-fourth of the year. We were on the train to Cheltenham Beach and both feeling pretty good. We were young, and youth is not overwise. We talked too much, and we talked too loud. In other words, we were fresh.

There was a party of four in the two seats next in front of us, one back being turned to face the other. It consisted of a young woman, two children and a negro nurse. The children, two little boys, were doing pretty much as they pleased, sometimes insisting on riding forward, at other times backward. This kept the lady changing her seat. When she rode backward she faced us, when forward she sat with her back to us, but in the next seat in front.

While she was facing us I made a discovery. I learned to my satisfaction that she would flirt. There are different grades of flirtation, from the little miss who passes her handkerchief over her lips to the lady who simply darts her eyes about, flashing them at rare intervals, and but instantaneously, on the fellow she flirts with. This was the kind of flirter the girl was who sat in front of us. That she was not married was evident from the fact that the nurse called her "Miss." The children called her "Aunt Carrie."

After a considerable play of eyes I made up my mind that Aunt Carrie was full of Old Nick. I began to talk to Bob about her, expatiating upon her beauty, naming different features—her eyes, her nose, her chin—any one of which would make a model for an artist. As for her lips, I pronounced them the most kissable I had ever seen. All this I said quite loud enough for her to hear, at the same time pretending to talk in a low tone.

Then Bob put an idea into my head.

"Why don't you kiss her?" he remarked.

"Kiss her? Do you suppose I would profane those sacred lips without permission?"

"You might steal a kiss."

"Would that I dared and found an opportunity!"

"The opportunity will present itself shortly. There's a tunnel on this road."

"Don't tempt me."

"Faint heart never won fair lady."

We kept up this conversation, intentionally speaking loud enough for the young lady to hear what we said. I dwelt on the delight there was in a stolen kiss and the inexpressible bliss I would derive from pressing my lips to those of the girl in question. Bob told me all about the tunnel; said we were approaching it and dared me to take the kiss while we were in it, adding that since it was not a long tunnel and the only one on the road the lamps were not lighted in passing through it. Presently he said:

"This is Markham Station we're passing. We'll reach the tunnel in five minutes."

Notwithstanding that the young lady must have heard the most of what we said she resolutely kept the seat next in front of us. I argued that if she didn't wish to be kissed she would take the other seat, where I could not reach her. Indeed, I construed her remaining where she was for a direct challenge.

Suddenly the train shot into the tunnel, and within ten or a dozen seconds the car was black as midnight.

"Now's your chance," cried Bob.

"I dare not."

Nevertheless I half rose from my seat and threw my arms about the neck of the woman sitting in front of me. I expected a box on the ear, but instead two arms were thrown about my neck and a pair of lips glued to mine.

Scarcely had we embraced when the darkness began to disappear. I attempted to unwind the arms from around my neck, but they refused to be unwound. It grew lighter, and in a few seconds more the train shot out into broad day.

Great heavens! I was held tight by the negro nurse.

I can yet hear the burst of laughter that came from the passengers. I can see the eyes of Aunt Carrie dancing a jig. I can see the horrible face of the black wench as she released me of her own accord and hear the horrible yah-yah! And I still feel in my heart the shame, the mortification of having been made a spectacle before a car full of passenegrs.

Bob—the villain—lay back in his seat and roared. I struggled between a desire to throw him out and punch his head where he sat. As for the girl, my admiration was turned to gall. I longed, and long today when I think of her trick in changing seats with the negress, that we might be back two or three centuries and I might accuse her of witchcraft, to see her burned at the stake.

P. S.—Since writing the above I have met the young lady who played me the shabby trick and have been introduced to her. She recognized me at once as the man she had punished and was so repentant that I determined to forgive her. In fact, the result of my second meeting with her is an engagement.

The Puzzle of the Press.

There used to be an aged elevator man who operated one of the lifts in the house wing of the capitol. Most of his passengers were either representatives or newspaper correspondents. The old man got to know all of the correspondents very well and always had a cheerful greeting for them. It was often noticed, too, that he seemed to be greatly interested in their conversation.

One afternoon, as three of them stepped out of the elevator, Sereno Payne of New York stepped in. As the car went down the old elevator man turned and said:

"Mr. Payne, I can't understand about those newspaper men. They puzzle me."

"What's the trouble with them?" asked Mr. Payne.

"Well, Mr. Payne, every day they ride in this car one feller will turn to another and say, 'What do you know today?' And the other fellow will answer, 'Not a —— thing. What do you know?' Then the first feller will answer, 'Nothing.' And yet, Mr. Payne, the papers are just full of news every day. It beats me where they get it."

"It beats me too," said Mr. Payne.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Where Bluebeard Lived.

Most of our readers have heard of Bluebeard, the enterprising gentleman who made a hobby of marriage and had a way of his own for getting rid of superfluous wives. Probably very few people, however, know that the story has any sort of basis in fact. Yet on the banks of the world famous Bosporus near Constantinople there is situated a picturesque old medieval fortress known as "Bluebeard's castle" and, which is said to have been the abode of a terrible old pasha, whose playful little ways gave rise to the story.—Wide World Magazine.

The first calculating machine was invented and constructed by Blaise Pascal, a Frenchman, in 1642, in which year he was but nineteen years of age. It was made by him with the aid of one workman and was presented to the chancellor of France. During the revolution it was found in a junk shop at Bordeaux and at present is the property of M. Bougouin, of that city. All of the four simple mathematical operations can be made with it.

Commissioners' Proceedings

Thief River Falls, Minn.,
July 10, 1911.

Pursuant to law the board of county commissioners of Pennington county, Minnesota, met in regular session in the office of the county auditor, in the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., at 10 o'clock a. m.

Members present, Aubol, Shaw, Hedeen, Wold, Larson.

Members absent, none.

Minutes of the meetings of April 22, 1911, and May 15 and May 16, 1911, were read and accepted as read.

The following is a statement of the county funds submitted to the county board by the auditor.

To the county board of Pennington county, Minnesota:

The following is a correct statement of the condition of the respective funds of said county at the close of business on the 30th day of June, 1911, showing the amounts levied for various purposes for thecurrent year, together with the actual cash balance and amounts unpaid on contracts of the board:

Name of Fund	Amount Levied	Actual Cash Balance	Amount Unpaid on Contracts
Revenue Fund..	$11,054.00	$2,661.71	$5,442.37
Road and Bridge	4,400.	2,706.05	1.10.
Interest Fund...	2,200.	1,353.02

Dated July 10, 1911.

Respectfully submitted,

A. H. FASEL, County Auditor.

The following resolution, offered by Commissioner Shaw and seconded by Commissioner Hedeen, was adopted unanimously.

Whereas; after due consideration, this board has estimated the necessary expenses of the county for the ensuing year to be as follows:

County Purposes $17,500.00
Road and Bridge Purposes.... 4,400.00
Bond and Interest Purposes... 2,200.00

Therefore be it resolved that to meet such expenses the following sums be levied on the taxable property of Pennington county as a basis of taxation for the year 1911.

County Revenue Fund........$17,500.00
Road and Bridge Fund...... $4,400.00
Bond and Interest Fund..... 2,200.00

In the matter of the petition of R. J. McKercher and others for a county road; the following resolution was offered by Commissioner Wold, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Aubol;

Whereas, on the 10th of July, 1911, a petition signed by twenty-four freeholders of said county was presented to us praying for the laying out and establishing of a highway running into more than one town of said county, and not within the incorporated limits of any city, and described as follows:

Beginning at the northwest corner of the northeast quarter of section number thirteen (13) in township number one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-four (44) west, and running thence east on the section line between sections twelve (12) and thirteen (13) in the township number one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-four (44) west and sections seven (7) and eighteen (18) in township number one hundred fifty-two [152] north of range number forty-three [43] west, a distance of one [1] mile, to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter [N. W. ¼] of section number eighteen [18] in township number one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three [43] west, and to be connected with other roads as follows: The state road running north and south through said sections seven [7] and eighteen [18] in said township number one hundred fifty-two [152] north of range number forty-three [43], and terminating at the northeast corner of the northwest quarter [N. W. ¼] of section number eighteen (18) in township number one hundred fifty-two [152] north of range number forty-three (43) west.

And the board of county commissioners of said county having determined that in the judgment of a majority of its members said petition is reasonable on its face.

It is hereby ordered that a day of hearing be had on said petition at the auditor's office of said county on the 1st day of September, A. D. 1911, at 1 o'clock p. m., at which time and place said board will hear all that may be said in favor of and against granting of said petition.

It is further ordered that Peter Hedeen, Peter C. Wold, and Daniel Shaw, members of this board, be and they are hereby appointed a committee to examine said proposed establishment of said road, and that said committee meet upon the route of said road at the house of R. J. McKercher on the southwest quarter (sw¼) of section twelve (12), township one hundred fifty-two (152), range forty four (44), in said county, on the 5th day of August, 1911, at 1 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of examination of said proposed establishing of said road and make report thereof at said meeting of said board hereinbefore specified, and that notice thereof be posted and given as prescribed by law.

The Board of County Commissoners of Pennington County, Minnesota.

ED. A. AUBOL,
Chairman.

A. H. FASEL,
County Auditor.

Motion made by Commissioner Shaw, seconded by Commissioner Hedeen. that the engineer on Ditch No. 32 be instructed to place a culvert on the range line between section 19, township 153, range 41, and section 24, township 153, range 42, where said ditch No. 42 crosses said range line.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Wold, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Larson:

Resolved, That the following sums be and the same are hereby appropriated from the county road and bridge fund, as follows, towit:

To the town of Clover Leaf the sum of $150, to aid in repairing and improving highway on section line between sections 30 and 31 of said town.

COUNTY FAIR BEST EVER

Everything Started Fine Wednesday Morning. Big Crowd, Fine Exhibits Of Farm Produce.

The tenth annual exhibition of the Pennington County Agricultural Society started out Wednesday morning with the indication of being the most gigantic and successful fair of them all. Already on Monday the crowds began to pour in and by Tuesday night everything was in full sway so far as the amusements were concerned. Never before was there such a good attandance for the first day. All of the agricultural exhibits were in and nicely displayed, and the ladies department was a vertiable dreamladn of nice things. A goodly number of race horses were in their stalls being made ready for the races to be held yesterday and today. The noted aviator, after much delay caused by a high wind and backward engine, late in the evening actually got his machine to leave the ground a couple of times. With conditions more favorable for flying it is expected that he did better the last two days.

The exhibt which far and away exceeded all the rest, and made the people stop and marvel the most, was that of the farm produce raised in Pennington County soil. It is safe to say that anybody who saw that exhibit will forever feel like living in this country. A person would have to be exceedingly particular if they looked for anything better in paradise. The following are some of the products, the like of which would delight the eye of the most fanciful theorist: Celery, cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower, tomatoes, citron, cucumbers, squash, grapes, apples, onions, rhenbarb, potatoes, roots of all kinds, corn, flax, wheat, barley, oast, rye, timothy, red top, red clover and alsike.

Thursday the big day

About four thousand people assemled on the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to view the sports and examine Pennington County products. The grand stand was packed, but by far the larger number were crowded along the race track and on whatever elevations were suitable for viewing the races. Yesterday the big event was horse racing. There were four races, the gentlemen's driving race, the 2:30, the 2:17 and the 2:15. Horses were entered from St. Hilaire, Red Lake Falls, Anges, Courtany, Crookston, Warren and Grand Forks. The races promised to be exceptionally interesting.

The entertainment features were out of the ordinary. The Warren band furnished delightful music during the interims and during the Meier Bro's. stunts. The Meier Bro's., elicited lots of applause while going thru their acrobatic novelties and illustrating the "human elevator."

The display of stock was very good. The majority were Jersies, short-horned Durhams and Guernseys. Mr Woolson had a fine collection of registered Guernsies, and Mr Carlson had a registered herd of short-horns In the sheep department there were mostly Shropshires. The hogs were mostly Yorkshires, most noticeable among them being a registered lot brought in by Mr. Woolson. The chicken row was handsomely represented by Rhode Island Reds, Plymoth Rocks, Light Brahmas, White Minorcas and Brown Leghorns. There were also good representatives from the goose, duck, turkey and pigeon families. C. Gustafson and son had in operation an excellent lot of 20th century farm machinery.

The piece of farm machinery that took the cake was Bundy's 1913 model automobile manure spreader.

LYCEUM COURSE FOR THIEF RIVER.

Prof. K. M. Hagestad, of Leeds, N. Dak., representing the Mutual Lyceum Bureau of Chicago, has been in the city the last few days endeavoring to interest the public in a Lyceum course. He represents the largest Lyceum Bureau in the West, and has has a splendid list of entertainments, concerts and lectures to offer. A committee has been formed to take charge of the matter, and a subscription list for Season tickets has been put in circulation.

Judging from the interest aroused and especially from the ready sale of the season tickets, the course is going to be highly successful. The season tickets for the entire series of five entertainments selected by the committee, are being sold at $3.00 per ticket, two tickets for $5.00. In the neighborhood of 200 season tickets hvae already been disposed of, showing that a course of this kind is going to be appreciated. Certainly, it is worthy undertaking, and should have the support of all who want good clean attractions, instructive as well as entertaining. The tickets have been placed at an unusually low one ought to refrain from subscribing for at least two tickets. Season tickets entitle the holder to a choice of seas at the Auditorium. The following attractions havebeen selected by the committee, at a total price of $700.00: Turolian Alpine Singers and Yodlers, Castle Square Entertainers, The Cambrian National Glee Singers, from Wales Gt. Britian, all musical entertainments of unquestioned merit: As lecturers, Victor Berger, Milwaukee, and Ralph Parlette, the famous humorist, on either of whom comment is unnecessary.

LOSES LEG THRU ACCIDENT

Employer on Dredge Gets Clothing Caught In Cog Wheel.

Fred Blake, a young man who has been working on a N. W. Drainnge Co's. dredge about twelve miles west of Grygla, had the misfortune to have his trouser leg caught in a gear which crushed his leg very severly. Dr. Melby went out and brot the unfortunate man to this city. It was found upan a careful examination that the leg was so badly torn and mangled that it would have to be removed several inches below the knee. The operation was subsequently performed and now Fred is resting easy. The young man's brother also a workman on the same dredge is here with him. His father came over from Deer Creek, but returned this week after the amputation had been performed and his son was out of danger. Fred will be laid up the rest of the summer. He is well-cared-for at the Atlantic Hotel by his brother.

THE HOODO IS BROKEN

"Indians" Came To The Front Sunday and Defeated Red Lake Falls 5 to 4.

At the fair grounds last Sunday the "Indians" once more proved that they are a real baseball team, and wiped out the disgrace of last week's antics. It was a good, exciting game all the way through and none of the fans evidenced any desire to go to sleep.

Things looked a trifle dubious up to the sixth, but after that it was all for the locals. Several hits and some weak fielding allowed Red Lake Falls to cross the plate four times in the fourth and fifth innings. The "Indians" got five good ones during the fifth and sixth innings. At this stage of the game Garceau's support was pretty ragged, but he did not lose heart, and finished by shutting out the locals.

All of the pitchers did good work, especially Mattson, who allowed but one bit and had the opposition at his mercy at all times. The feature of the game was Mattson's two-bagger. The Thief River lineup was considerably strengthened with Holstein behind the bat. Holstein is an excellent catcher, has lots of ginger, and holds the men on the bases.

DOING A BIG BUSINESS

Sash and Door Factory Now Employing 14 Men and Crowded With Work.

It would no doubt surprise the citizens of Thief River Falls to take a peek into the sash and door factory located on the Great Northern railroad tracks, and have revealed to them the amount and quality of the work that is being turned out. Fourteen men are kept busy filling the orders, in fact so much work is coming in that they can hardly handle it. The factory started up this spring and already four carloads of lumber have been worked up. One full car of yellow pine alone has been used and another is on its way here.

They do all kinds of wood-work. At present theye are truning out house furnishings complete, making store fixtures, bank fixtures and store fronts. Later on they will make certain kinds of furniture. An expert cabinet maker is at work now. The new store front where Pat Roark's saloon is located was gotten out in this factory. The factory has just started on a $1500 job to be shipped to Fargo.

There is a good experienced bunch of men handling the business end of the factory. That's why things are humming. T. O. Ostbye, the general manager, has been for years engaged in the contracting business in Fargo. He is closing up his business there preparatory to moving here. C. O. [illegible] Johnson, treasurer and engineer, has been in the past engaged in the hardware business at Wauban. He has purchased the brick house on Main Ave., formerly owned by Geo. Diebel, and will move his family here this month. J. P. Grothe, secretary, used to be in the newspaper business at Wauban, with Widsien as partner. The vice-president, C. G. Dosland, is one of the leading attorneys at Moorhead.

The factory does not depend on electric power any more to run its machinery. A forty-five horse power steam engine has been installed and it furnishes all the power that is necessary to the different machines running. It was hard work to get the factory started, but now that it has once got going there is no question about its being a great success.

Great Northern Depot Robbed

Early last Friday morning robbers broke into the Great Northern depot. They rifled the express packages of a dress, took about eighty cents in cash and also carried away with them the agent's revolvers. The robbers obtained entrance by breaking a window pane and then reaching in and loosening the catch so that the window could be raised. No trace of the maranders has been obtained.

A. N. Lundgren made a business trip to Grand Forks in his auto last Monday.

HELD MEETING YESTERDAY

Progressive Republican Meet and Effect Organizations Officers Elected.

At a meeting of Progressive Republicans held yesterday the following trite resolutions were adopted:

RESOLUTIONS

As Republicans we are heartily in favor of the success of the Republican party fully realizing that in the past it has been the party of progress, and we fully agree that the many reforms that our country stand in need of today; can we think be best realized through the party which has served us so well in the past.

The progressive ideas and deeds of our former President, Theodore Roosevelt we heartily commend; and it is with extreme regret that we cannot extend the hearty commendations to the present administration.

If the success of the party is to continue, we are fully of the opinion that the , so called, progressive element must prevail in the party councils and progressive men with progressive ideas must lead next year. To this end we favor the nomination for president of some man of honor and action who will favor reforms and principles such as are now advocated by Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin and others.

For over forty years the farmers of the Northwest and of Minnesota in particular have consistently been in favor of the principles of a protective tariff. They accepted as a fact that protection would build up a home market for the products of the farm and that ultimately the farmer would come to his just reward.

Such a condition is about to be realized, and we condemn as unjust and unreasonable and a direct violation of faith; the Canadian Reciprocity Pact which the present administration has just forced by the use of patronage, the aid of the Democratic Party, and other unjust and unlawful means; through our congress.

We are fully of the opinion that if protection is good for the eastern manufacturer it is equally as good for the Western farmer and we again reassert that the Canadian Reciprocity Pact is an unfair, unjust discrimination against the American farmer, and in favor of the trust protected manufacturer.

The farm stand taken by our United States Senators, Honorable Knute Nelson and Honorable Moses E. Clapp and by our Representative in Congress, Honorable Halvor Steenerson in their fight against the Canadian Reciprocity Pact meets with our heartiest commendation, and we respectfully ask that they continue the good fight that in the end the trust protected manufacturer receive no more protection than does the American farmer.

Respectfully submitted,
H. E. Ives
E. L. Quist
W. G. Hunt.

The permanent organization elected was:

President, Andrew Trovaton,
Secretary, E. L. Quist,
Members of Executive Committee.
1st Dist. W. G. Hunt.
2d, Dist. Harry E. Ives,
3d, Dist. Emil Ness,
4th, Dist. D. Patterson,
5th, Dist. Peter Hedin.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the executive committee.

Some reports say that some woman in the southern part of town was held up yesterday afternoon. Particulars are wanting.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Commission Plan Is Spreading Fast In Most States. Do We Want It?

As a city grows the manner of its government becomes more and more a problem which should be given the closest attention by the city's ablest business men. The larger a city the greater and more important are the problems it has to solve, and, therefore the better its system of government should be.

A city in the management of its affairs is practically up against the same business proposition as are the big industrial concerns scattered thru out the United States today, and the same essential business principle will apply.

The idea introduced into the most successful industries we have today has been to concentrate responsiblity and power. This is done by selecting a few competent men, giving them a great deal of power, and then holding them responsible for the success of the business.

Out of this idea introduced by large business concerns has grown the idea of city government by commission.

The first practical illustration of the commission plan, in a rough form, was given in the year 1900 at the time of the Galveston flood. A few men came forward, took charge of things and saved the city from wreck and ruin. This arbitrary manner of doing things shocked the public at large, but the results were such that people genrally began to sit up and take notice.

The next of the larger cities to adopt the commission plan were Houston and Des Moines. The forms chartered by these cities are somewhat different from one another. At present over half the states have passed, and many are considering, a law enabling cities to vote on the commission form of government. Minnesota has such a law. Mankato adopted the commission form of government in 1910, she being the first to do so. Now the proposition has been voted upon, or is about to be, in several other cities in this state. Later on information will be furnished as to how the plan is working out in cities where the commission form is now in operation.

Some Features of the Plan

A brief outline of the plan will be given now, and followed later by more detailed explanations. The following is suggestive:

The division of the city into wards, for the purpose of choosing aldermen or councilmen, is done away with.

There are no political conventions and party names, so far as the city is concerned; in fact, politics are completely eliminated.

There is no city ticket, like formerly, on which there was a long list of officers to be voted for.

Under the new system nobody is elected but five commissioners. One of these is called mayor, and presides over the commission; but he has only one vote, and no veto.

Any qualified elector can become a candidate for a mayor or commissioner by securing the petition of twenty-five qualified electors.

The names of the candidates for mayor and commissioners are arranged alphabetically on the ticket and without political designation.

The commission chooses by ballot all other officers and employees, mostly from competitive examination list.

The administrattive powers are distributed among five departments, each headed by a commissioner, as follows:

1. Departmetn of public health, sanitation, public and general welfore, headed by the mayor.

2. Department of accounts and finances.

3. Department of parks; public grounds, buildings and fire protection.

5. Department of water works and sewers.

4. Department of streets and alleys.

The above is a division according to the Mankato charter.

The mayor and commissioners are paid a salary and devote either all or a part of their time to the duties of their office.

The mayor and each councilman give bonds to the city, with some legally authorized surety company.

Each commissioner has complete charge in his department, and runs it the same as though he were the executive head of a department of a large business concern.

The five, acting as a commission, make policies, pass ordinances, prepare the budjet, levy taxes and do anything else that is necessary in a well-regulated city. However, they can not give away a public franchise.

The charter contains the initiative, referendum and recall; the meaning and operation of which will be explained in an early issue.

SCHOOL ELECTION TODAY

Special Election to be Held This Afternoon at 3 o'clock at Central School.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Central School House. The special election to fill the vacancy on the board of education, caused by D. P. O'Neill's election to the legislature will be held. This office was vacant at the regular election held July 15, but no opportunity was given the public of voting on this vacancy at that time.

Up to yesterday the contest was between Mrs. J. M. Bishop and Mrs. D. K. Bryant but now Mrs. Bryant has withdrawn.

This is very unfortunate that only one lady is now a candidate as the mothers ought to be entitled to be represented on the school board.

The remaining candidate Mrs. Bishop is well qualified to fill this position, as she is a University graduate, has been a teacher and is the mother of school children.

All women are allowed to vote at school elections.

Soo Line Some Busy

The Soo Line is certainly doing some business these days. Monday was the biggest day they ever had o nthis line. Twenty-nine freight trains passed thru here on that one day. When the northern wheat is put on the market business will probably be still better. A great deal of the present increase in business is due to the fact that the Canadian Pacific rail road has a strike on at its mines in Canada and is now having coal shipped in from the docks at Superior. The Soo will carry thru here three thousand carloads of coal at the rate of about fifty cents a day. Passenger traffic is especially heavy these days, too. It looks now as tho there would be something doing next year in the way of a depot.

Road Leveling To Let

"We want to sub-let 200 miles of road leveling in Marshall, Roseau and Kittson Counties in Northwestern Minnesota along the line of drainage ditches we are constructing in said counties.

We will let out this road leveling in sections in whatever number of miles any parties want to take. It is good work for any parties having four or five teams with a plow and road leveler, who could take part of these roads or for a contracting firm with about twenty teams who could do a large amount of this work. SOME DRY

An old time resident of the city whose business forces him to considerable time on the road was in South Dakota last week and conditions there resulted in the following:

July 22d.

Friend Joe; I thought I would write you and let you know how dry it is down here. The little city of P——— is here yet but the lake is nearly dry. They are using the lake bottom for an auto race course. When I asked the waiter this morning for soft boiled eggs she replied that they could not spare water to boil eggs and that anyway they did not have the eggs as the hens, not being able to get hay or straw enough to build a nest, had quit laying. A farmer at the table remarked that he had dug a well on his place 1100 feet deep and the water was so dry he could not drink it. Drinking water is $25 a barrel. When I was in a candy-store a little later and asked for a glass of lemonade the clerk said he had the lemon but could not supply the ade,———Now Joe don't let those fellows read this and tell you it isn't so as you know I would'nt write you anything that wasn't true.

July 23d.

Well, will write you a little more. I expect to get out of this dry country in a day or two. I am working nights when it is cool and resting day times. I and another fellow rode over to Chamberlain yesterday in an auto. As we were passing a lake I saw a big smoke coming right out of the water. We drove into a farmers nearby and asked him the cause. He said that while he was fishing yesterday he had dropped his pipe in the water and it sunk to the bottom and the moss was so dry that it caught fire and he was afraid the bottom would all burn out of the lake. Friday night we stopped at Greenwood lake. I and another fellow started out to take a boat ride. But when we got out on the lake a little ways I saw that I was raising so much dust with the oars that I would soon have my new suit spoiled so I was forced to give it up. When the train arrived that night a car had caught fire from a hot box and they could not spare the water to put it out. But a preacher came to the rescue with a case of beer and the police then arrested the preacher for boot-legging. This will maybe give you some idea of how dry it is.

WOULD BE CITIZENS TAKE NOTICE

Those Intending to Take Out Citizen Papers Should Read Following.

Department of Commerce & Labor.
St. Paul, Minn., July 27, 1911.
Mr. H. E. Ives, Clerk.
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to the circular letter sent to you by Chief of the Division of Naturalization, dated June 10, 1911, with which he enclosed forms (No. 2226, Request for Certificate of Arrival), to be filled out by aliens who arrived in the United States after June 29, 1906, and who desire to file a petition for naturalization, I wish to call your special attention to the fact that it is not necessary for the alien to come personally to your office to procure one of these forms. You may, very properly, on his request, send him one of these forms (No. 2226, Request for Certificate of Arrival) by mail, and he may fill it out at his home, and mail it to the Chief of the Division of Naturlization, Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C. That official will, on receipt of the form properly filled out by alien, giving the necessary information, take steps to procure from the proper official source a certificate of the alien's landing in this country, and send it to the clerk of the court in which the alien proposes to file his petition. The alien will also at the same time be advised by the Washington office of the fact of the certificates having been sent to the clerk of the court.

In any case where the alien did not arrive in the United States until after June 29, 1906, the clerk should not accept the petition for second paper until the certificate of landing has been received by him from Washington, for the law requires that in each case where the petitioner arrived in this country after that date, the certificate of the Department of Commerce and Labor showing the date of his landing must be attached to the petition; and in each such cases where I do not find the official certificate of landing attached to the petition, it will be necessary for me to move its dismissal.

I will be glad if you will give the widest possible publicity to the fact that the petitioner need not incur the expense of coming personally to your office to procure for his use one of these forms (No. 2226, Request of Arrival). Of course, it would be useless to furnish the alien one of these forms—even though he did arrive in the United States after June 29, 1911, —if he is not prepared to prove by two credible witnesses that he has resided in the United States continuously for five years next before the date he files petition, and in the State for one year next before the date he files petition; and unless he is also prepared to furnish the clerk his declaration of intention, executed at least two years before the date of the petition.

Please be careful to remember that it is Form No. 2226 (Request for Certificate of Arrival), and not Form 2214, that aliens who arrive in this country after June 29, 1911, must fill out and send to Washington.

In those cases where the petitioner alleges in the petition his arrival in the United States before June 29, 1906, the Government will seek to verify such statement also from the records of the port of entry; but in such cases no official certificate of landing need be furnished the clerk. When, therefore, a party proposes to file a petition for naturlization in your court, it is of first importance to ascertain at once whether he arrived in this country before or after June 29, 1906.

I desire to call your attetion to the fact that in some instances clerks of court have been found negligent in the matter of affixing the seal of their office to petition for naturlization and declarations of intention. Please bear in mind that such papers are not complete and official unless the seal is attached. The failure to attach the seal may embarrass the petitioner or declarent in future. I request that you will attach the seal to all such papers heretofore executed in your office in which this formality was inadvertently omitted.

Attention is further called to the fact that the law requires that in the public posting of notice of petitions for naturlization the date of hearing should be given; and it is not legal, or within the intent of the law, to have a petition heard and acted on before that date. Please note, also that the statute says that final action cannot be taken on any petition until at least ninety days "have elapsed" after the filing and posting of notice of same: Therefore, in computing the ninety days, both the date of filing and posting and the date of hearing should be excluded. The law requires that notice of the petition must be posted "immediately" after it is filed.

I request that you will advise all witnesses on petitions for naturalization, who are themselves naturalized citizens, to bring with them to the hearing their certificates of naturalization.

Yours very truly,
ROBT. S. COLEMAN,
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

RESOLUTION

At a regular meeting of the City Council of the City of Thief River Falls, in the County of Pennington and State of Minnesota, held on the 18th day of July A. D., 1911 at 8 o'clock p. m., in the office of the City Clerk of said City of Thief River Falls, and a quorum thereof being present, Alderman J. C. Berg of said City Council offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

RESOLVED, First: that it is expedient and necessary to issue and sell bonds of said city to an amount in the aggregate not exceeding Forty Thousand Dollars, bearing interest at a rate not to exceed six (6) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, the proceeds of said bonds to be used in making an enlargement and improvement of the electric light plant now owned and operated by said city. That said bonds be issued under authority of the appropriate provisions of Chapter 8, General Laws, Minnesota, 1895, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be made payable twenty years from their date and bear such date and be in such demnominations and in such form consistent with law as may hereafter be determined by this city council.

SECOND: That the question of issuing said bonds be submitted for ratification or rejection to the electors of said city at a special election which is hereby called for that purpose, which shall be held on the 25th, day of August 1911, and at which the polls shall be open at six o'clock a. m., and closed at nine o'clock p. m.

THIRD, that the ballot to be used at said special election shall have printed thereon the following:

THE FLOWER LADY

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am a globe trotter. I have visited every country on the earth, but I have had only one adventure worth telling. Being in Palermo, in the island of Sicily, I desired to visit the temple of Ceres, the mythological goddess of the crops, from whom the word cereal is derived. Sicily is still more or less in the power of the brigands, and the location of this temple is one of their operating grounds. A visit to the spot is, or was at that time, equivalent to capture by them and having to put out a goodly sum for ransom. There were several Americans at Palermo who wished to see the temple, so we made up a party to go together.

The dangerous part of the trip was a drive we were obliged to take from the end of the railroad to the temple. We telegraphed ahead to the authorities to learn whether we could not get policemen or soldiers for a guard. We received a reply that we would be taken care of.

When we reached the terminal we found that the way we were to be taken care of was this: A daring and wily brigand named Giovanni Tarantola had sent the police word that any party going to the temple of Ceres would be robbed. Tarantola always acted alone, and the police concluded to send several of what we would call plain clothes men with us, who would catch Signor Tarantola in his own trap.

All our tourists except myself backed out. The reason I stood my ground was that in all my travels I had had no marked adventure, and I needed one to liven up my accounts of places I had visited. When I reached the terminal I found a little bit of an old stagecoach, drawn by three mules, in which we were to make the journey. The paint had long ago been worn off it, all except the words Rigie Poste (royal mail), for which it had formerly been used. It held four persons inside and three outside.

Three policemen and myself occupied the inside, two of the former being dressed as women. We were all armed and ready for Tarantola. We had gone but a few leagues when our royal mail coach was stopped by a woman who wished to take passage with us.

Sicily abounds in beautiful flowers, and the woman who joined us held a large bouquet of them in her hands. It is always warm on the island, but this person said she had a bad cold and asked if any of us would object to her having the windows closed.

The Italian ladies are pretty while young, but there are many hags among the lower classes, especially those past middle age. Our passenger, though she was of large build and must have been forty years old, was not bad looking. She was bedizened with jewels and tinsel, and her face was profusely painted and powdered. Some women in Italy have very coarse voices, and this woman's was of the coarsest.

When we told her that Tarantola had sent word that he would attack any party going to visit the temple she appeared to be very much frightened. She demanded a return of the fare she had paid that she might get out. But a Sicilian never returns anything that comes into his possession except by force, and the policeman who had taken her money refused to give it up. She said she could not afford to lose it, so she remained with us.

She was very liberal with her flowers, giving each of us one and poking her bouquet constantly under our noses. I observed that the perfume was having a visable effect on the policemen, and I began to feel drowsy myself. One of the so called ladies reached out a hand to lower a window, but the woman with the flowers stopped her and, shoving her bouquet under her nostrils, held it there till the object of this attention sank back unconscious. A policeman tried to open the window, but the flower lady instead of shoving her bouquet under his nose put the muzzle of a revolver there.

The next thing I knew I heard the words, "Wake up, Senor Americano," and I was roughly shaken. Opening my eyes, I saw the flower lady smiling at me.

"Give my compliments to the chief of police on your return, and tell him that when Tarantola says he will do a thing he keeps his word. These beggarly policemen have no money to repay me for my trouble, so I shall leave them. But I must trouble you to come with me. Any attempt at resistance and you will never see your beloved land again."

He stopped the coach and drove me before him into a wood, paying no attention to the driver of the royal mail and the policeman outside, except to turn and say, "I am Tarantola." Since he covered them they did not dare to draw a weapon.

Tarantola bade me write a note instructing my bankers to send 50,000 francs in gold if I wished to live. I was obliged to have a cable message sent to New York, not having so much money abroad, so I remained a prisoner in the catacombs for a month before my ransom arrived. Tarantola treated me very well, furnishing everything for which I asked, which he could well afford to do at the price I paid. When the money arrived I bade him adieu, and he charged me not to forget his message to the police.

I delivered it with unction.

A CARD PROPOSAL

By GROVE J. GRIFFIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

They were sitting on the porch overlooking the ocean. Waves were rolling in, breaking and sliding the foam glistening in the sunlight upon the beach. A table stood between them, and on it a pack of cards.

"Shall I [illegible]" he asked.

"If you [illegible]

He took [illegible] and shuffled them. She [illegible] what method he would tell her fortune, and he said he learned it from an Indian princess. The truth is he knew no fortune telling method. He intended to propose to her through the cards and to make up the process as he proceeded. He began to throw them off on to the table face up. The first turned was the two of hearts.

"You have two lovers," he said. She knew that she had three, not counting several uncertainties. He knew that he had one rival whom he feared. He went on throwing off the cards till he came to the knave of diamonds.

"That's the principal lover," he said. "He has the inside track. No one else has much of a show. He is tall, good looking and has an excellent opinion of himself. Just the man for a heart smasher. And these diamonds falling so near together indicate that he is the favorite with— Hello! The queen of hearts! That's you. The knave of diamonds and the queen of hearts are connected by a lot of small cards of the same suit, showing very plainly that there is an affair between them."

"How old is the knave of diamonds?" she asked.

"Thirty-five or thirty-six."

"Can't a younger lover be got out of the cards?"

"Well, here's the knave of clubs. He's one of the kind who uses a big stick for accomplishing anything he undertakes. Nothing suave or politic about him."

"I should think he would have a better chance than the other. I like a helter skelter kind of man; most girls do."

"Well, this knave of clubs is not exactly bad; but on the other hand, he isn't very good. He's neither one nor the other. He adores you, though, and if it turns out that the knave of diamonds gets you the knave of clubs will have the breath knocked out of him."

"That would be too bad, wouldn't it? Who's that queen of spades you just turned?"

"That? That's a rival you have for the favor of the knave of diamonds."

"Haven't I a rival for the knave of clubs?"

She asked this in a subdued voice.

"Not a rival. He loves you alone. But these low diamonds coming in between the knave of diamonds and the queen of spades indicates that she has considerable hold upon him."

"She may have him for all I care."

"Here comes the king of hearts. He stands for your papa. Low diamonds following him so closely indicate that the knave of that suite is your father's favorite. When the queen of hearts comes out we shall see whom she favors. She's your mother, you know."

"I thought I was the queen of hearts."

"So you are! I forgot that. Well, we'll call your mother the ace of hearts. That's a good idea; the ace is the highest of its suit, and whomsoever your mother favors—you consenting—takes the trick."

"I think that whoever I favor will take the trick."

"Right you are. These clubs—the two, three and four—indicate that the knave of clubs has loved you four years. Ever since that summer at"—

She was supporting her head with her hands, her elbows resting on the table. At this point she shaded her face with her fingers, so that he saw very little of it. He couldn't very well tell her, even through the cards, that he had loved her longer than that, for he hadn't known her longer. She was waiting for him to name the place where she had met the knave of clubs, but he didn't.

"He was walking on the beach with a couple of other knaves. She was coming toward him with three other queens, walking two and two."

"I acted very silly on that occasion."

"What did you do?"

"I giggled."

"And we were trying to get up a flirtation."

"But we are getting away from the fortune telling. How could the knave of clubs have loved the queen of hearts ever since that day? There were three other queens with her."

"They were not his queens. None of them was. His queen was the queen of hearts. He loved her the moment he saw her and has never swerved from that love since."

After this they talked so low that a couple lying under the porch in the sand could hear no more. Two young men passing on the beach surprised one couple above sitting hand and hand over a table, peering into each other's eyes, and another couple underneath on the sand, who started on being caught eavesdropping.

"This place is full of chaps and girls," remarked one of the passers.

"Yes," said the other, "it's only another fellow and another girl."

Official Paper of The City.

FRIDAY, AUG. 4 1911.

Every man and woman that takes in the "Fair" this week will be more convinced than ever that the country tributary to Thief River Falls was originally the location of the Garden of Eden.

One of our exchanges has the following editorial:

"The average small boy views with alarm the calendar. August 1 and school opens September 1." If such is the case, what is the matte with our schools?

Ex-Forester Gifford Pinchot put his finger on a vulnerable point in the president's armor when he asked why the usual 30 or 60 days notice was not given before opening the Controller Bay lands in Alaska to filing last October. Taft is cowed; he cannot answer. Yet he has the audacity to seek your support for renomination!

Representative Payne of New York leading minority member of the ways and means committee expressed opposition to the proposed Democratic Cotton Schedule, "because it does not furnish protective duties for a great American industry and it is frankly admitted that it is not intended to do so." It does not appear that he made the same objection to Canadian reciprocity. But, then, that did not effect manufacturers, and what does he and his kind care about the farmer!

The following clipping from the Willmar Tribune is interesting to us for three reasons. The city of Willmar is the county seat of the editor's boyhood home; The city is just the size of Thief River Falls and the man who spoke the words was none other than our own Prof Hay:

"Director J. H. Hay closed with a very complimentary talk about Willmar. He said that he believed that Willmar was the cleanest and most prosperous city of its size in the state and he had been very favorably impressed with the city and its people during the five weeks of his stay here."

Taft is dogmatic. He seems to think that we may not question his "say so." The mere fact that he makes a vehement statement, should banish doubt. But does he forget how he defended Ballinger, the Payne-Aldrich tariff act and, later, Reciprocity with Canada? Now he is equally certain that he was right in betraying the public in the controller affair in Alaska. He failed to give the usual 30 or 60 days notice before filings could begin on the forest reserves that he threw open. This gave the Morgan-Guggenheim interests the advantage, because they were on the grounds and quite likely knew the order was coming for they stood in well with Sec. Ballinger,—the president's mongrel pet—and, of course were kept informed. The order went forth and the billionaires got wh they wanted and there is nothing good left to the public. The part of the shoe that is fit for harbor purpose is small and was immediately snapped up by a representative of the Morgan-Guggenheim interests. Taft has served these interests and presumally got what he asked for doing so. Now he turns on the public in a long defense and tries to browbeat them into believing that he issued that order of last October in the interests of the "dear people." And, of course, his billionaire friends are supporting him by buying up all the great papers of the country and teaching them to sing Taft's praises. Already these have cornered every Twin City daily except one. Money talks, indeed. Will you allow yourself to be hood-winked? Remember, they are going to try to do it.

NATIONAL BIRD PROTECTION

A constitutional amendment to give Congress power to protect migratory birds has been offered in Congress by Senator McLean of Connecticut.

To some minds it will seem hardly consistent with our venerable constitutional forms, that Congress and 46 state legislatures are asked to devote their official dignity and highly paid time for the benefit of little insignificant "chipbirds."

And yet, the Department of Agriculture, in those formidable black books that look so solemncholy that one can not imagine them as fibbing, tells us that the board bill for the Hessian fly in two states in 1909 alone was $24,000,000, and that the chinch bug has a record of eating up $60,000,000 of our farm products in one year. And that is saying nothing of the damage by the bollweevil, the gypsy moth, the canker worm, and scores of other foes, as a factor in high cost of living.

It is the testimony of most farmers that these pests are vastly more destructive than in their youth. And all country people will agree that wild bird life, thanks to the gunners and the small boy, is decreasing. Who can doubt that the latter condition is cause, and that the sway of the pests is the effect?

In California the agricultural interests are realizing this situation so keenly, that a state bird farm was created two years ago, which from this year is expected to turn out annually 4000 to 8000 wild birds for distribution about the state.

One big fruit ranch handling 11,000 acres was one of the first to apply for fledgeling birds for breeding on its lands. They did not ask for those birds merely as targets for their work men on Sundays and holidays.

There being no uniform laws on the subject, migratory birds not specially valued in one state may there be wantonly slaughtered for mere sport, when crops elsewhere which they would naturally protect if allowed to multiply, are being slaughtered by insects. There needs to be either a national bird law, or uniform state legislation, if insect pests are to be fought successfully.

SPEAKER FAVORS EXTRA SESSION.

Speaker H. H. Dunn of the Minnesota house, favors an extra session of the legislature, but he would subscribe conditions says The Minneapolis Tribune. He says if there could be a short, snappy session, accompanied by the passage of several measures, he would favor it.

His program of legislation for an extra session includes the following measures: The passage of a 5 per cent gross earnings tax for railroads; a distance tariff law; a state wide primary; the Spooner waterways laws; re-apportionment; local option for cities of the fourth class, and a recall bill, including judges and everything.

The speaker does not believe it necessary to wait until the supreme court has passed on the Minnesota rate cases.

"What's the use?" said the speaker. "We can have an extra session now just as well as later. If we pass the measurers I have outlined we will make a record that will take the state by storm."

The speaker failed to explain why these measures were not passed at the last session, whirbn kakakaa the last session, when his organization was in perfect order, nor why the gross earnings tax law was not passed when it was up in the house following the rulings of Master in Chancery Otis.—Lake City Graphic Republican.

The steadily- increasing attendance at existing Schools of Agriculture and the demand for more such schools, in addition to the demand for agricultural instruction in the common schools, show that farmers are awake, as never before in history, to the fact that the size of their incomes from the soil is largely a matter of education. The man who knows when to plow, and why; when to plant, and why; when to reap, and why, is seen to have a decided advantage over him to whom the time for each of thes fuctions is a mere "happenstance" and who ever concerns himself with the "why?" Scientific exactness is becoming the rule on the farm as well as in the laboratory and the mahcine-shop; and exactness comes only with the mastery of principles.—C. R. B.

Do not neglect to spray the orchard trees and berry-bushes this year. A little time and attention now will be worth dollars at the harvesting period. If for any reason the early sprays have not been given, apply the later sprays. Make a start at the spraying problem, and see how every little attention given the plants in applying proper sprays during the season pays.

ECONOMICS OF HARVEST

It is possible for careless help to leave a considerable portion of the grain crop in the field by neglecting to gather up scatterings, loose bundles, etc., and by hauling grain on open-bottom racks. From a few pounds to a few bushels of grain may be saved every day, during stacking, by using a tight-bottom rack, or a convas over the rack that will catch all of the grain that is shattered out of the heads. In seasons when the grain shatters badly, a surprisingly large amount of grain can be saved in this way.—A. D. Wilson, Minn. University Farm.

Likely to be Steam Plant

A committee, composed of mayor Hamre, Sedlacek, Peterson and G. Torrison, went down to the cities last week to investigate the comparative merits of the steam and gasoline or oil engines as a means of furnishing power to run the proposed new electric light plant. They looked over several oil engines, but in no case were they able to get a satisfactory guarantee on a 400 horse power engine—the kind that will have to be installed here. It is quite likely, therefore that the old standby, steam, will be recommended for use. There are features in favor of either engine, but the oil engine is the much newer invention and in many cases has not given complete satisfaction. The proposition of bonding the city, for the purpose of raising bonds to enlarge and improve the present electric light plant, will be submitted to the voters on August, 25th; and, if it carries, bids for the installation of the plant will be received from the various manufacturers.

FAKE HOLD-UP

Reports were circulated this week that Arvid Peterson was held up on the bridge by a couple of highwaymen. It was so believed until the culprits were brought before Judge Bishop and examined by attorney Stanton. Nothing could be done with them because Arvid admitted that he had not really been held up, and was only fooling. It seems that Arvid met these desperadoes on the bridge, they being partly intoxicated, and stopped and talked with them. During this time a man crossed the bridge and one of the "bad" men said jokingly "let's hold him up." This gave Arvid his idea. He came up town and told Farr that he had been held up on the bridge. Farr went down and captured the fellows and took them to jail. It was all right to have the men put in jail, but it was carrying the joke a little too far to have them arrested as hold-up men.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES, JULY AND AUGUST.

Trim any apple or plum trees that are over-bearing. It pays.

Allow no weeds to go to seed. This will make cultivation easier next year.

Seed onions should now have produced plants big enough for bunch onions.

Boards should be used for bleaching early celery. Soil is apt to cause it to decay.

The last of July or first part of August is a good time to bud apple or plum seedlings.

Cut out sprouts about shade trees, plums and apples. They only take strength from the main plant.

Keep the sweet peas picked. It is better for the plants, and the house can be made more attractive by their use.

Save seeds of trees and shrubs, as they ripen, and plant them. This is one way to multiply your ornamental plants.

Keep the new strawberry-bed clean cultivated until the runners are matted too much to permit the cultivator to go through.

Cabbage and cauliflower will grow better if frequently cultivated. Tie the leaves about the cauliflower heads to keep them white.

The wild high-bush cramberry, common in many marshy districts of the state, is good both as an ornament on the lawn and for making jelly.

Keep the windfalls in the plum and apple orchards picked up. They often harbor insects. Pigs turned in among the trees will rid the ground of windfalls. If they are fed occasionally, there is little danger of their injuring the trees.

Do not market poor or dirty fruits. Put good healthy fruit in a clean, neat package and you will get a good price. The attractiveness of a package often aids greatly in selling Never put apples or plums in a sack to take to market. Always use a box or basket.

Be careful to whom yo ugive your order for more nursery stock. It is safer to deal with a nursery near home, or at least within the state. In a good many cases the outside nursery is only a tramp concern, visiting a locality but once, while the hoem nursery is anxious to build up a business.

Whistler's Eccentricities.

Whistler's remarkable genius is no doubt responsible for his many eccentricities. He quarreled indiscriminately with friend and foe, and for him the public were a set of ignoramuses who had no right to any opinion whatever.

Especially well known is his quarrel with John Ruskin, who in his "Ars Clavigera" had heaped scorn on one of Whistler's "Nocturnes" in the following language. "I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now, but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." The artist promptly sued for damages, and in the celebrated trial which followed he was awarded one farthing, which coin he triumphantly wore as a watch charm ever afterward.

In his art work, as in his own personal appearance, Whistler was fastidious. His palettes were beautifully wiped, his brushes faultlessly kept, and as for his general behavior it was foreign, one may even say exotic.

Why Thackeray Was Moved to Tears.

A lady, an intimate friend and a frequent visitor at the Thackeray home, called late one afternoon. She was shown into the study, and on entering perceived the novelist himself seated at his desk, his head bowed upon his arms. Fearing she was intruding in the presence of some great and unknown grief, she paused, hesitating. Then, thinking she might be of some help or at least express her sympathy, she stepped forward. Just then Thackeray looked up. His shoulders were shaking, the tears streaming from his eyes.

"Little Nell is dead," he said brokenly.

"Little Nell?" his visitor interrogated.

"Yes, Little Nell," was the answer. "She is dead. I've just been reading it." Before him on his desk lay an open copy of "Old Curiosity Shop."—Ladies' Home Journal.

When Lobsters Were Common.

The lobster was not always the aristocrat of the supper table and the most costly of delicacies. A man who used to live in Maine, but now lives in Ohio, has this reminiscence, according to a writer in the Cleveland Leader: "One day here in Cleveland I took a friend out to luncheon, and suddenly the old appetite for lobster came back to both of us as we were both born on the Maine coast. We had two full portions, and the bill was $2. And yet as a boy I've seen my father standing on the wharf, bargaining with a fisherman for his lobster catch of the day, and often, for $2 I've seen the lobster fisherman turn over to my father the entire catch, and the whole boatload—250 or 300 big, black lobsters, perhaps—would be dumped on the landing and taken back on our old farm as feed for the pigs.

What He Was Showing.

A young man sitting in a subway car with legs crossed and one foot showing a highly polished shoe and silk sock extended so far into the aisle as to make it almost impossible for people to pass without coming in contact with the obtruding member was brought to a sense of his disregard for others by three young women who sat opposite. One said: "I wonder if he is showing his foot on his shoe?" The second said loud enough to be heard above the car clatter and of the amusement of others, "I think he wants to show his clocked socks—watch it." "No," said the third, "he's only showing his bad manners." The foot came down and was lost in the crowd which got off at the next station.—New York Tribune.

Laughter.

Laughter, while it lasts, slackens and unbraces the mind, weakens the faculties and causes a kind of remissness and dissolution in all the powers of the soul, and thus far it may be looked upon as a weakness in the composition of human nature. But if we consider the frequent reliefs we receive from it and how often it breaks the gloom which is apt to depress the mind and damp our spirits with transient unexpected gleams of joy, one would take care not to grow too wise for so great a pleasure of life.—Addison.

A Straightforward Answer.

J. B. Lippincott once ventured to ask Ouida, the novelist, how she came to know so much about clubs, camp life, barracks, gambling houses and other places which are only visited by men. She placed her hands upon her knees and, looking straight at her questioner, said, "It is none of your business."

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the best that brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in [illegible] of industry.

To make it a mirror of the [illegible] resources and Minnesota's [illegible] advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Monday, Sept. 4th, Labor Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Minneapolis Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 6th, Farmers' Day.
Thursday, Sept. 7th, St. Paul Day.
Friday, Sept. 8th, Pioneers and Soldiers' Day.
Saturday, Sept. 9th, Children's Day.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR AND EXPOSITION SEPT. 4 TO 9

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the voters of Independent School District No. 18.

Last week I was announced as a Candidate for Director at the election held on the 4th, inst., to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. O'Neill. I was urged to become a candidate in order that the ward in which I live should have equal representation with less important sub-divisions of the City. As the candidacy of Dr. Melby removes my reason for being a candidate, and having in view the unfortunate nature of the controversy which this small matter has given rise to, I hereby announce my retirement in favor of Dr. Melby, and thank my many friends for their assurance of support, which I am convinced would have elected me by a large majority.

Mr. and Mrs. John Collins are the happy parents of a boy born to them last Monday.

Miss Clara Lodwell of Grand Forks is the guest of Miss Gertrude Nelson during fair week.

Miss Katherine Spellman came up from Red Lake Falls Monday to take in the Pennington County Fair.

Mrs. Wm. Farner returned from Bemidji Monday where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex Uhres.

Miss Lulu McCrum returned Saturday from a visit with fiends at Crookston.

Miss Hattie Swanson of St. Hilaire visited friends in the city Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Miss Marie Cadieux of Red Lake Falls was the guest of Miss Ida Ove this week.

Miss Katherine Uhres came over from Bemidji last week for a visit with her aunt, Mrs. John McKinney.

Miss Cleo Amble came up from St. Hilaire Wednesday to attend the Pennington County Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Larson are the happy parents of a ten pound baby girl, born Wednesday morning.

C. O. Christensen, from Warren, will preach at the Svenlie school, Sunday 10:30 a. m., and 8:00 p. m.

Miss Eva Gobler returned from Ft. Francis last Friday and will make her home here in order to re-enter school.

Otto Olson of St. Hilaire is a guest at the Wilson home this week that he may be present at Pennington County's Fair.

Miss Rene Zaiser came up from Red Lake Falls Wednesday and will visit with Miss Abbie Miller for a few days.

C. R. Winslow of Grand Forks, vice-president of the Thief River Grocery Co., was here on business for a few days this week.

Among the crack shots who will be there are Barber, using Dead Shot shells; Ferguson, using Winchester shells; Stair, using Peter's shells; and Trent, using the U. M. C. Ashley, Anderson and Spooner will me among the local contingent to help make some high score records.

To Tour Westward

Dr. and Mrs. Penney will leave Sunday on an automobile tour thru the west. They are bound for no place in particular, but will take the tourist route towards Helena, Montana, and may go as far thereon as Calispel. The round trip will cover about three thousand miles. They have a folding tent and complete cooking outfit. It is their intention to pitch their tepee wherever night overtakes them or wherever fancy dictates.

A WELL-LIGHTED CITY

At a meeting of the city council, held Tuesday evening, it was decided that Thief River Falls has become such a metropolitan city and its business interests so large and varied that it is absolutely necessary that the power and light be on both day and night. The first day-power came on Wednesady afternoon, and power and light will be furnished from now on both day and night with as few stops as possible. In this twentieth century age electricity has come to play such an imoprtant part in the happiness and welfare of the people that its absence completely upsets any city of any size. Nature plays some aggravating tricks on the human race, but it looks now as tho it wouldn't be able to slip one over on this city with any great success.

Hanson and Barzen have it

The Hansen and Barzen Milling Co., have solved, for the present at least, the problem of running their flour mill. They are taking advantage of all the water they can get and at the same time are using as auxiliary power Elias Erickson's steam engine. Between these two sources they manage to get in a good day's run once in awhile. The engine furnishes 30 horse power and it's up to the river to furnish the rest. If J. Pluvious doesn't completely forsake this section of the country, the mill will run the same as tho nothing had ever happened. The ingenuity of the American people in a case of emergency is certainly hard to beat.

VAUDEVILLE AT GRAND

The Grand is putting on a high-grade show this week with special vaudeville attractions, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. Reed and Ferguson are high class comedians and come here direct from the show-houses in the east where they made a big hit.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

The Teacher's Training school colsed at Red Lake Falls on Friday, July 28th.

A reception was tendered the faculty Thursday evening at which it was my good luck to be present. It was a most interesting and enthusistic gathering. It is a matter of congratulation to Mr. Anderson and the city of Red Lake Falls which vied with one another to make school one of the best held in the country. The faculty was a strong one, and it is to be commended for the efficiency of the work done. The inspiration we will cary with us in our work for another year.

A goodly number of teachers have taken the examinations this year. If certificates are returned in response to applications made we should have teachers enough for our schools. Indications are, however, that there will be a scarcity of teachers holding first and second grade certificates. The reason for this is the change in the laws permitting state aid to Class C. schools or those having seven months school during the year.

It will be advisable for school Trustees to have teachers engaged in time for opening schools in the fall. Let me know your wishes and I shall try to attend to them. Kindly look to the repairs of your schools in time so as to insure a successful school year.

How are you getting along, boys and girls, with your contest work? Grains and garden vegitables should do very well this year—yes even corn should grow well. Do not forget that we will have a contest coming in October.

Let the girls plan to bring in for exhibits the best display of needle work ever shown in any county.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

SENATE PASSES THE WOOL BILL

La Follette Measure Agreed to as a Compromise.

LINE UP WAS 48 TO 32

Said President Taft Will Veto Bill When It Reaches Him for His Approval.

Washington, July 28.—The compromise wool tariff bill offered by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, a modification of both his own and the house bill, was passed by the senate, 48 to 32, by the union of Democrats and Republican insurgents. Upon this middle ground the Democrats, having secured a record vote on the original Underwood bill, joined with the Republican insurgent forces. Those who voted for the bill were:

Republicans—Bourne, Oregon; Bristow, Kansas; Brown, Nebraska; Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Crawford, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Gronna and McCumber, North Dakota; La Follette, Wisconsin; Poindexter, Washington; Works, California.

Democrats—Bacon, Georgia; Bailey, Texas; Bankhead and Johnstone, Alabama; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Chamberlain, Oregon; Chilton and Watson, West Virginia; Clark and Davis, Arkansas; Foster and Thornton, Louisiana; Gore and Owen, Oklahoma; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Johnson, Maine; Kern and Shively, Indiana; Martin and Swanson, Virginia; Martine, New Jersey; Myers, Montana; Newlands, Nevada; O'Gorman, New York; Overman and Simmons, North Carolina; Paynter, Kentucky; Pomerence, Ohio; Reid and Stone, Missouri; Smith, Maryland; Smith, South Carolina; Taylor, Tennessee; Williams, Mississippi.

Bill Certain of Veto.

Proceedings in the senate and developments that are to follow the resolution for the wool bill, however, will be futile so far as any addition to the statute books is concerned. It can be said upon highest authority that President Taft will veto the wool bill if it ever gets to the White House and there are not a sufficient number of votes in its favor to pass it over the veto.

One of the interesting bits of gossip in connection with the result is in regard to the effect it may have on the future of the farmers' free list bill. There is a firm belief among the Republican leaders that the farmers' free list bill is to be put through by practically the same coalition and this was one of the considerations upon which the Democrats finally consented to become a tail to Senator La Follette's presidential kite.

Not only will a considerable number of progressive Republicans be ready to vote for the farmers' free list bill, but there are at least two regular Republicans who are peeved over the passage of the Canadian reciprocity bill and who are ready, it is believed, to join with the Democrats in passing the farmers' free list bill as a complement of the Canadian pact.

MARSHAL KILLS ONE BANDIT

Three Highwaymen Raid First National Bank at Harlem, Mont.

Harlem, Mont., Aug. 1.—One bandit is dead and armed posses are scouring the country between here and the Bear Paw mountains in search of two others who escaped after they attempted to rob Senator Everett's First National bank of this town.

But for the quick work of Marshal J. Q. Taswell, who is also a deputy sheriff of Choteau county, the bank would have been looted, but his deadly aim killed the man who was looting the vault and caused the man who was guarding the cashier and others in the bank office to flee.

JOHN W. GATES NEAR DEATH

Condition of Financier Is Critical and Physicians Have Little Hope.

Paris, Aug. 1.—The condition of John W. Gates is critical. He is semi-conscious most of the time.

His physicians say that the pneumonia which has attacked both lungs has not increased. This was a good sign, they declared, and added that if the lungs began to clear up there may be a hope, although a very faint one, for Mr. Gates' recovery.

Girl Awakes After 105 Days.

Vandalia, Ill., Aug. 1.—After sleeping almost continuously for 105 days, Miss Hazel Schmidt, the eighteen-year-old girl whose strange case has puzzled physicians for weeks, was awake for five hours and ate three meals. She said that she felt no ill effects from her slumbers.

Bailey Quits Committee.

Washington, July 28.—Because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations Senator Bailey resigned from the committee on privileges and elections. He made no explanation and the resignation was accepted.

Civilizing the Indian.

The following is from "The Soul of the Indian," a book by Dr. Charles Alexander Eastman, himself an Indian:

"Long before I ever heard of Christ or saw a white man I had learned from an untutored woman the essence of morality. With the help of dear nature herself she taught me things simply but of mighty import. I knew God I perceived what goodness is. I saw and loved what is really beautiful. Civilization has not taught me anything better. As a child I understood how to give. I have forgotten that grace since I became civilized. I lived the natural life, whereas I now live the artificial. Any pretty pebble was valuable to me then, every growing thing an object of reverence. Now I worship with the white man before a painted landscape whose value is painted in dollars. Thus the Indian is reconstructed, as the natural rocks are ground to powder and made into artificial blocks which may be built into the walls of modern society."

Bigness of Big Ben.

Big Ben, which marks the hours for parliament at the top of the clock tower at Westminster, is bigger than it appears from below. Looking at the dial of Big Ben from the northern footway of Great George street or from the Thames embankment, it appears as if its diameter might be equal to the space that a man of medium size could cover with outstretched arms. As a matter of fact, however, the diameter of the dial is twenty-three feet. From the ground the minute marks on the dial look like ordinary minute marks and as if they were close together. Really they are a foot apart. The numerals are two feet long. The minute hand, with its counter balance—the heavy piece of metal that projects beyond the center of the dial—is fifteen feet in length. This hand is so massive that during a snowstorm the clock is sometimes retarded by the weight of the flakes that alight on it.—London Mail.

He Took the Cue.

He was a man who gave little and got much. Today, for instance, he had got a clothes brush, a basin of water, a towel and a shine, and he had given nothing at all.

Tr-r-ring! went his bedroom bell. The hotel attendant smiled sourly. This was the fourth time he had been summoned, and he did not hurry.

"I thought you were never coming," exclaimed the visitor when the attendant appeared at last. "Are you nicknamed 'Slowcoach?'"

"No, sir," answered the attendant. "They call me 'Billiard cue.'"

"Billiard cue!" repeated the visitor, frowning. Then an inspiration dawned. "Ah! Because you're such a stick, I suppose?" he asked.

"Wrong again, sir!" returned the attendant. "It's because I work better with a good tip."—London Answers.

A Herculean Katydid.

Experiments conducted by a naturalist attached to one of the government's scientific bureaus at Washington adduced an interesting example of the strength of the katydid. He harnessed a katydid to a kind of sled made by folding a piece of ordinary notepaper, and then loaded the sled with various articles. The insect proved able to draw, in addition to the original paper, twelve paper sheets each 8 by 4½ inches, a large screw, two steel pens, a stone weighing two ounces and three and a half lead pencils. When the weight became too heavy to draw otherwise, the katydid got its fore feet over the edge of the table for a better hold, and on the addition of another weight it increased the adhering power of its feet by moistening them in its mouth.—New York Tribune.

Not a Parallel Case.

A writer in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post tells of a big overgrown, bashful booby of a farmer's boy who was afraid even to speak to a girl, and whose father one day finally lost patience and scolded him roundly for not looking about and finding some girl to marry. "Why," he said, "at your age I had been married three years and had a house and farm of my own!"

"Well, but dad," complained the boy, "that ain't the same thing at all. You only had to marry mother, while I've got to go and hunt up some strange girl and ask her to marry me!"

Conferring a Title.

While he was governor of Kentucky Proctor Knott sent to the Hon. Stoddart Johnston a certificate, officially signed and bearing the impress of the great seal of the state, duly commissioning him as "Mister," which he said was a distinctive and honorable title that no Kentuckian had ever previously borne.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMANS

Arrest Two of Six Who Crossed the Frontier From Lorraine.

Paris, Aug. 1.—A dispatch to the Journal from Nancy says that six German soldiers crossed the French frontier from Lorraine and that two of them were arrested by French soldiers and taken to the prison at Longwy, in the province of Meurthe.

According to the dispatch the Germans had cut the telegraph wires and broken down several telegraph posts.

COTTON MILLS CLOSE IN T[illegible] CAROLINAS

Drouth Th[illegible]ousand Opera[illegible]rk.

Charlotte, [illegible]—As a climax to the u[illegible] drouth this section is exp[illegible] 152 cotton mills in North and South Carolina shut down because the water in Catawba river is so low the Southern Power company cannot supply the plants with power. It is estimated that 70,000 operatives are thrown out of employment, but it is believed work will be resumed in two days.

It has been many weeks since rain of any consequence has fallen and creeks which have not gone dry before in forty-five years are mudholes. Mountain streams, upon which many flouring mills, tanneries and cotton mills are dependent for power, have dwindled to mere brooks. Crops are burning up in the fields, while the hot winds are playing havoc with cotton.

Cities and towns to the north and west of Charlotte are facing the ordeal of such a water famine as this city is now experiencing. At Greensboro, Salisbury, Concord, Spencer, Monroe, Wadesboro and other places the situation is grave and measures of economy are being rigidly enforced.

STRINGENT MARRIAGE LAWS

Kansas City Judge Says That Would Be Remedy for Divorce Evil.

Kansas City, Aug. 1.—Nineteen hundred marriage licenses have been issued in this city since Jan. 1 and during that time 600 suits for divorce have been filed. This shows an increase in the number of divorce suits brought here, as about a year ago it was found that a ratio of one divorce suit to every four marriage licenses was maintained.

Judge Porterfield of the juvenile court said the situation demanded immediate improvement.

"Instead of devoting so much attention to divorce laws," he said, "it would be far better to make more stringent laws governing marriages."

WILL REBATE DUTY ON COAL

Dominion Government Comes to Relief of Western Canada.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Owing to the failure of coal miners and mine operators to settle the strike in Alberta mines which has existed throughout the summer and threatens Western Canada with a serious coal shortage the government decided to rebate the duties on bituminous coal brought in from the United States to Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Eastern British Columbia.

The rebate will run two months. If the strike continues beyond that time the period will be extended, but if it is settled rebating will be discontinued two weeks after the mines resume operations.

White Retelling His Story.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Charles A. White, who, after running the gamut from street car conductor to member of the Illinois legislature, confessed to receiving money to vote for William Lorimer for the United States senate, began to retell his story before the senate Lorimer committee. He was the first witness at the previous Lorimer investigation.

ALASKAN MESS GOES TO HOUSE

House C[illegible]mmittee Decides to Report All Ev[illegible]dence.

DELEG[illegible] SORE

Frequent and Bitter Clashes Between the Alaskan Representative and Attorney General—Former Fails to Impress Committee, Criticises Alaskan Officials, Declares Everybody Is Against Him and That His Official Patronage Has Been Taken Away.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Following general charges and denials between the two Wickershams of the government—the attorney general and the delegate from Alaska—the house committee on judiciary decided that it had no power to do anything but report the evidence to the house. It will report Delegate Wickersham's resolution calling on the attorney general to furnish all the papers and data bearing on the alleged frauds in connection with government coal contracts.

The committee will not recommend that the house investigate Delegate Wickersham's charges that Attorney General Wickersham had shielded and protected "Alaska syndicate criminals."

In a hearing enlivened by frequent and bitter clashes between the two Wickershams it developed that the delegate from Alaska had offered his legal services in 1908 to the Guggenheim interests in the Northwestern Commercial company for a salary of $15,000 a year and the maintenance of office headquarters in Seattle.

The Alaska delegate renewed his statements that the attorney general had shielded and protected breakers of the law who represented the Guggenheim interests in Alaska. Members of the judiciary committee frequently called upon him to prove statements he made and in some cases challenged the sufficiency of his proof.

Attorney General Indignant.

Attorney General Wickersham declared that the Alaskan delegate's charges called for vigorous denial from the government officials.

"He has seen fit to make charges against me which it was his duty to prove before this committee if he could do so," said the attorney general, "and I submit to the committee that he has not proved his statements."

The Alaska delegate repeatedly criticised the officials of Alaska, said the Guggenheims "owned the government" there and made general charges of the officials being influenced by them.

He sought to prove that United States Marshal H. K. Love had extorted money from his deputy marshals by making them "divide the graft" contained in the profit from boarding prisoners. The government allows $3 per day for each prisoner.

Attorney General Wickersham produced two official reports to show that the whole matter had been investigated and the system of taking profit out of the prisoners' per diem allowance was fully recognized and considered a form of "legalized graft."

"It was a bad practice and I abolished it as soon as I found out about it," said the attorney general, "but it was not illegal."

Delegate Wickersham criticised the attorney general because he had not brought prosecutions on the Cunningham coal claims and the latter retorted that no proof had been furnished him upon which he could proceed.

The delegate declared everybody was against him in Alaska, that the Taft administration had taken away his official patronage and that the Guggenheim interests voted 800 railroad men illegally in Cordova to defeat him.

TERRIFIC STORM IN TEXAS

Two Persons Killed, Many Injured and Heavy Property Loss.

Abilene, Tex., Aug. 1.—Two persons are known to have been killed, a score are injured and practically every business house in Abilene is more or less damaged as the result of a storm of wind and hail which swept over this vicinity. A number of residences were also wrecked.

Dr. Hollis, a prominent physician, is one of the known dead. He was struck by a falling timber.

Electric and telephone wires are strewn over the streets and with the exception of one wire to Fort Worth telegraphic communication is cut off.

It is understood that the storm raged with equal fury elsewhere in Taylor county and farmers coming in from places three and four miles east and north bring stories of wholesale destruction of property.

Chicago Lawyer Horsewhipped.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Frank T. Brown, a prominent Chicago lawyer, was horsewhipped on a public highway in West Chicago by a woman supposed to be his wife. Then he was knocked down by her and, after a chase, caught and horsewhipped again.

DIPLOMATS CHANGE PLACES

Ambassador Leishman May Go From Rome to Berlin.

Washington, Aug. 1.—A wholesale shifting of the United States diplomatic service, incident to filling the vacancy in the Berlin embassy, was taken up at the White House and the state department.

John G. A. Leishman, ambassador to Italy, and Thomas J. O'Brien, now at Tokio, are at the head of the list of eligibles named by state gossip to succeed David Jayne Hill at Berlin. The appointment of either would necessitate a general rearrangement of the foreign service.

WOOL GROWERS IN PROTEST

Appeal to President Taft to Veto Bill Recently Passed by Senate.

Washington, Aug. 1.—President Taft received a long telegram from F. R. Gooding, president of the National Wool Growers' association, protesting against what he terms "the ill advised wool bill" recently passed by the senate. The appeal concluded thus:

"I appeal to you Mr. President, in the name of nearly 1,000,000 American wool growers, who earnestly pray that you will allow no measure affecting the wool industry to become a law until all the facts as to the cost of producing of wool and cloth have been submitted to congress."

BRITAIN ISSUES SHARP WARNING

Intimation to Germany She Will Defend Her Rights.

FLEET IS ORDERED TO COAL

Patriotism Wipes Out Party Differences and United Support Is Accorded the Government.

London, July 28.—The most pessimistic views regarding the acuteness of the Moroccan crisis were largely confirmed by the prime minister in the house of commons when, with a manner as impressive as his words, he read from a manuscript which had been carefully prepared, a warning to Germany that Great Britain proposed to stand for what she considered her rights and to maintain the balance of power in Europe.

Further testimony as to the gravity of the situation is given by the fact that the prime minister obviously had taken the leader of the opposition into the government's confidence and Mr. Balfour's declaration was no less firm than Mr. Asquith's.

The prime minister's statement was couched in diplomatic, though not reassuring, language. At the very opening he said:

"It is obvious that this Moroccan question has reached a point at which it will become increasingly difficult, embarrassing and anxious, unless a solution is found.

"We thought it right from the beginning to make clear that, failing of a settlement such as I have indicated, we must become an active party in the discussion of the situation. It might be our duty in defense of British interests directly affected by further developments.

"If there are any who supposed that we would be wiped off the map of Europe because we have our difficulties at home it may be worth while saying that they bitterly mistake the temper of the British people and the patriotism of the opposition."

Such plain speaking on a question fraught with possibilities of a great European war has not been heard in the British parliament for years.

Britain Priming Her Guns.

London, July 28.—The first division of the home fleet, stationed at Portland, has been ordered to coal and complete its supplies with oil fuel by morning. Operations will be continued throughout the night.

CONTROLLER BAY MESSAGE

President Denounces "Dick-to-Dick" Letter as a Fabrication.

Washington, July 27.—President Taft has transmitted to the senate, in obedience to its request, all of the papers and records connected with the elimination of 12,800 acres of land from the Chugach forest reservation, made by his order a year ago. The Chugach reservation lies along the margin of Controller bay in Alaska and the elimination in question formed the basis of what became known as the Controller bay scandal, out of which grew the alleged "Dick-to-Dick" letter.

But the president did not send the documents unaccompanied. They were under the convoy of a message to the senate in which he goes into the history of the elimination of the land, assuming all responsibility and justifying it to the limit, showing the impossibility of its promoting any character of monopoly, reintroducing a Ballinger echo, scoring the "Dick-to-Dick" letter as a malicious fabrication and finally denouncing the methods which have attacked all proper plans for the development of Alaska and besmirched all officials connected with Alaskan affairs.

PINCHOT SCORES MESSAGE

Says President Leaves Root of Alaska Affairs Untouched.

Washington, July 28.—Gifford Pinchot, former government chief fortster and now president of the National Conservation association, issued a statement declaring that President Taft "leaves the root of the matter wholly untouched in his message to the senate, denying that there could be any monopolization of the water front of Controller bay, Alaska."

Mr. Pinchot's statement says:

"The president's defense of his course in the Controller bay affair shows how hard it is to make a good excuse for a bad mistake."

Steamer John Irwin Sinks Off Nova Scotian Coast.

Halifax, N. S., July 29.—The steamer John Irwin struck a rock and sank off Beaver Harbor last Tuesday morning.

Willie McLeod of Halifax was washed ashore on a hatch at Liscombe, ninety miles east of here, and it is believed he is the only survivor of the dozen or more men in the steamer's crew.

DEBATE ON COTTON SCHEDULE

Minority Report Condemns Bill as Nonprotective Measure.

Washington, July 29.—Debate on the Democratic cotton schedule revision bill was begun in the house by Representative Underwood of Alabama, chairman of the ways and means committee, which prepared the bill. No date was fixed for closing debate on the measure, although it is believed it will end Wednesday with a vote on the day following.

The minority report was presented by Representative Payne of New York, leading minority member of the ways and means committee. It expresses opposition to the bill "because it does not furnish protective duties for a great American industry and it is frankly admitted that it is not intended to do so."

EIGHT KILLED IN MAINE RAIL WRECK

Smoking Car Telescoped When Trains Collide.

Grindstone, Me., July 30.—Eight persons are dead and fourteen seriously injured as the result of a head-on collision which occurred at the Bangor and Aroostook railroad station here. The trains were a special of three light coaches, containing about 150 excursionists, and a regular passenger express.

Five of the dead were passengers of the excursion train. The other three included the two firemen and the engineer of the special. The five passengers killed and all of the injured were in the smoking car directly behind the engine of the excursion. Both trains were moving slowly, one of them just pulling out of the station and the other slowing for a siding where the trains were to have passed.

The accident appears to have been due to a misunderstanding of orders. None of the cars left the rails and the passengers on the regular train escaped with a slight shaking up.

Grindstone is a small settlement of not more than fifty persons, with no facilities for the care of the injured. They were cared for temporarily by physicians on board the trains and placed on a special train and taken to Millinocket.

FAVORS RECALL OF JUDGES

Senator Owen Advocates Passage of His Measure.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Severe criticism of the supreme court of the United States marked the speech of Senator Owen of Oklahoma, who advocated before the senate the adoption of his bill providing for the election and recall of federal judges. This bill provides that any justice of the supreme court, or any judge of any other United States court, shall be subject to recall by a resolution of congress; that all district and circuit judges of the United States shall be elected by the voters of the district or circuit; and that their tenure of office be four years.

PENSIONS FOR THE AGED

Congressman Berger Introduces Bill in the House.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Government pensions for the aged were provided in a bill introduced in the house by Representative Victor L. Berger, the Wisconsin Socialist.

The measure proposes to grant to every person who brings proof that he or she is more than sixty years old, has been a citizen of the United States for more than sixteen years, and if a husband, has not without just cause failed in the maintenance of his wife, a weekly pension of from $1 to $4, depending upon their income.

A Straightforward Answer.

J. B. Lippincott once ventured to ask Ouida, the novelist, how she came to know so much about clubs, camp life, barracks, gambling houses and other places which are only visited by men. She placed her hands upon her knees and, looking straight at her questioner, said, "It is none of your business."

A Herculean Katydid.

Experiments conducted by a naturalist attached to one of the government's scientific bureaus at Washington adduced an interesting example of the strength of the katydid. He harnessed a katydid to a kind of sled, made by folding a piece of ordinary notepaper, and then loaded the sled with various articles. The insect proved able to draw in addition to the original paper twelve paper sheets each 3 by 4½ inches, a large screw, two steel pens, a stone weighing two ounces and three and a half lead pencils. When the weight became too heavy to draw otherwise, the katydid got its fore feet over the edge of the table for a better hold, and on the addition of another weight it increased the adhering power of its feet by moistening them in its mouth.—New York Tribune.

Not a Parallel Case.

A writer in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post tells of a big over grown, bashful booby of a farmer's boy who was afraid even to speak to a girl, and whose father one day finally lost patience and scolded him roundly for not looking about and finding some girl to marry. "Why," he said, "at your age I had been married three years and had a house and farm of my own!"

"Well, but dad," complained the boy, "that ain't the same thing at all. You only had to marry mother, while I've got to go and hunt up some strange girl and ask her to marry me!"

Conferring a Title.

Where Bluebeard Lived.

Most of our readers have heard of Bluebeard, the enterprising gentleman who made a hobby of marriage and had a way of his own for getting rid of superfluous wives. Probably very few people, however, know that the story has any sort of basis in fact. Yet on the banks of the world famous Bosporus near Constantinople there is situated a picturesque old medieval fortress known as "Bluebeard's castle" and which is said to have been the abode of a terrible old pasha, whose playful little ways gave rise to the story.—Wide World Magazine

First Calculating Machine.

The first calculating machine was invented and constructed by Blaise Pascal, a Frenchman, in 1642, in which year he was but nineteen years of age. It was made by him with the aid of one workman and was presented to the chancellor of France. During the revolution it was found in a junk shop at Bordeaux and at present is the property of M. Bougouin of that city. All of the four simple mathematical operations can be made with it.

Too Much For Her.

Calling one day to see an old friend who was visiting her married son, I inquired of the colored maid who answered the bell, "Is Mrs. Smith at home?"

"Yas'm, she home," the girl replied, showing no inclination to invite me in. "She here, all right, but she got a misery in de haid."

"Mrs. Smith [illegible]?" I asked with concern.

"Seen me!" she exclaimed suspiciously. "Cose she seen me. Huccome she ain' see me w'en she hire me, ma night bub own self?" And she indignantly shut the door.—Lippincott's.

The Worst.

"My wife has been having some trouble with her throat," confided a friend, "and I got pretty worried about it and sent for a doctor. He examined her and looked very grave, and that scared me even worse. So I said, 'Tell me the worst at once, Doc,' and he whispered: 'She will recover her voice.' And my wife overheard the question and the answer, and now Doc and I are both in bad."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Resentment.

"Did you say I was a cheap trickster?" asked the ward worker.

"No, I didn't," replied the man who is close to the boss. "I merely said you were a trickster."

"Well, that's all right, but don't you ever insinuate that I am doing a cut rate business."—Washington Star.

Light Men.

At a certain hotel in Liverpool an Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotsman were arguing as to which of their respective countries had the lightest men.

The Irishman led the argument by saying:

"We have men of Cork!"

"Well," said the cockney, "that is very light, but we have 'lighter' men on the Thames."

A Note That Was Paid.

History is constantly repeating itself. Once upon a time a landlady in Washington called on President Andrew Jackson and told of a government clerk who owed her a big bill for board. In those days it was easy to have access to the White House. President Jackson listened to her story and advised her to get a promissory note from the clerk and put it in bank. She replied:

"I've done that twice, general, and he won't pay even then."

"Is that so?" said the president in surprise. "Now you go and get his note and bring it to me. I simply want to see it, and I'm sure that the clerk will pay that note. Go and bring it to me."

The landlady did so and returned with the promissory note. The president turned it over and wrote across the back of it his own indorsement: "A. Jackson."

That note was paid at maturity.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Waves In Solid Metal.

As illustrating the advance in metallurgy and engineering it has been demonstrated that solid metals may reveal by their structure the vibrations to which they have been subjected. In explaining this phenomenon experiments have been shown proving that a beautiful wave structure can be imparted to the surface of mercury by the vibrations of a tuning fork, and that even the surface of solid lead which had been subjected to similar vibrations possesses a structure resembling that of a vibrating surface of mercury. Mild steel has been defined as a "solid solution" of iron and carbon, free from cinders. Metallurgists have doubled the strength of steel as it was known in its early days.—Scientific American.

Relieved.

"Where did you get these examples of faultily constructed sentences?" asked Dr. Campbell, the great rhetorician, of a student.

"What? Where? Out of one of my books?"

"Out of my 'Rhetoric!'" roared the doctor. "Impossible! Never did I

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Operation of the Initiative Referendum and Recall

In last week's issue was given a brief outline of the cause of the introduction of city government by commission, and some of the salient features of the plan. At first a great many citizens shake their heads in doubt when they understand that the government of the city is to be given over to five men who, apparently, have unlimited powers.

In solving this problem to their complete satisfaction, those citizens should investigate several questions. First, Is this method best from a business stand point? Second, Are the commissioners elected in such a way that there is no chance for any but the best men? Third, If a commissioner should go wrong, is there any way of speedily removing him from office? Fourth, Do the people have the right to introduce legislation? Fifth, Do the people have the right to have referred to them any ordinance passed by the council? Sixth, Is the commission plan giving satisfaction in these cities where it is in operation right now? Seventh, Can the question, of whether the commission plan is best, be solved by merely chewing "rag".

In the charters that are giving the best satisfaction are incorporated the initiative, referendum and recall. It is thru these that the people express their desires when occasion demands. They are the big sticks of the people, the uplifted finger of admonition which keeps the commissioners in the straight and narrow.

The Initiative

The initiative provides for direct legislation by the people. If it is desired by some of the people to pass an ordinance which the council has not seen fit to do, an ordinace may be prepared by those people. A petition should accompany the proposed ordinance and be signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, and should contain a request that the ordinance be forthwith submitted to a vote of the people at a special election. Then the council may either pass the ordinance without alteration, or submit the same to a vote of the people. All petitions are submitted to the city clerk who in turn submits them to the council, provided that the petition has the required number of signers and is duly sworn to.

The Recall

The recall provides that the holder of any elective office may be removed at any time by a vote of the qualified electors. Suppose that one of the commissioners got to misbehaving. All that it is necessary to do is to get out a petition signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, and submit the same to the council thru the city clerk. If the officer sought to be removed does not resign within five days, the council fixes the date for an election. The offending commissioner may be a candidate for re-election; and, it is usually customary for the petitioners to give written reasons for the recall of the officer, and for the officer to give in writing reasons in jusification of his acts.

The Referendum

The referendum provides that no ordinance passed by the council shall become a law before the people have had a chance to register a kick. After its final passage an ordinance does not go into effect until after ten days. This gives disatisfied citizens ample time to prepare a petition to submit to the council. If such a petition, signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, is presented to the council; then the council may either repeal the ordinance, or submit it to a vote of the people.

The initiative, referendum and recall are comparatively new additions to city charters, but they have been operating long enough to prove that they do not keep a city in constant turmoil, as was once supposed that they would. The advisability of such provisions is no longer a question of debates. In the light of actual experience it is shown that no better or safer innovation was ever introduced into city government.

COURT HOUSE NEARLY COMPLETED

Cost of Repair Work And Fixtures will Not Exceed $6,500.

The Pennington County Court House is now taking on the aspect of a new and thoroughly modern building. The workmen have only about two weeks work left before the house will be ready for use. All the fixtures have been ordered and will be here and installed by the 20th. At present the county officers are using rented rooms in the Auditorium.

The entire bill for repairs, together with the cost of the fixtures, will not exceed $6,500. The property as it now stands is worth to the county at least $15,000. This makes the Court House proposition look pretty good to he people of Pennington County.

The front room on the first floor is divided into three parts by light partitions. The first room will be occupied by the County Auditor, the second by the Treasurer and the third by the Clerk of Court. The next room flollowing is for the Register of Deeds, the next for the Judge of Probate, and the sixth and last will be the Sheriff's office. In the new part on the same floor will be the County Commissioners meeting room, also used for a general reception room. Going up the stair way at the rear of the building and taking the rooms in order, the first is for the County Superintendent of Shcools, the second is a Jury Room, the third a Cloak Room and the fourth the Court Room, in connection with which there is a Judges Room and an Attorneys Room. The Court Room itself will accomodate two hundred people. The basement is fitted with a modern water works system.

County Economy

One reason why the cost of the work and fixtures on the Court House do not cost more is because the purchasing committee is of an economical turn of mind. Good, neat and practical office desks are being made exactly the size needed for each office, rather than buying the ready-made and uselessly expensive oak desks. They were able to save over $400 on one item alone by patronizing a home industry, the Sash and Door Factory. The item referred to is the frame-work for the shelves, and the roller shelving which is placed in all the vaults. These fixtures, instead of being made of bronze and steel, will be made from white birch wood. No one was able to offer any reasonable objection why this should not be done.

NEW WRECKER HOUSE

The Soo is putting up a first class wrecker house for the purpose of accomodating a new and modern wrecking outfit. The wrecker was made by the Bay City Wrecking Co., of Michigan, a firm noted for making the best in their line. The wrecker is capable of lifting a big freight engine. It is good for a weight of 75 tons. There is a sleeping and dining car attached which allows the best of accomodations for the workers. From now on the Soo will be able to handle quickly and easily any wrecks occuring out of Thief River Falls.

BIG OATS YIELD

Frank Kiens of Germantown threshed oats on July 31st and reports a yield of 80 bushels per acre This is certainly an enormous yield and yet we presume that Mr. Kiens is not the only man who will get such a bounteous yield this year.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITORY

Deposits Will be Received at Local Post Office After August 25th.

Postmaster Kratka received this week official notice from Washington D. C., that the Thief River Falls post office would become a Postal Savings Depository on and after August 25th. Mr. Kratka has appointed Tarje S. Brokke, head clerk at the post office, as the postal savings banker, and is getting his office in readiness for receiving deposits on the above date.

Any person who is ten years old or over, and is a patron of the post office, may open an account. Deposits may be made in amounts of $1, $2, $5, $20, $50, and $100. No deposit will be received for less than $1. The most that can be deposited in any one month is $100 nor can a person have more than $500 to his credit at any time exclusive of accumulated interest. Interest at the rate of 2 per cent per year will be paid on deposits, but no interest will be paid on deposits that remain for a fraction of a year only. Deposits may be withdrawn at any time. A depositor will be permitted to exchange the whole or any part of his deposits in sums of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100, or multiples of $100 up to and including $500, into United States registered or coupon bonds bearing interest at the rate of 2½ per cent a year. Further information can be obtained at the local post office

The deposits made at the post office will in turn be deposited in one or more of the local banks, either State or National, providing these banks make application to the U. S. government and become legally authorized depositories for postal savings deposits. In order to become a depository a bank must make an application to the government. If that application is accepted, then the bank must, at first, buy U. S. government bonds or Municipal bonds to the amount of $5000 and deposit them with the U. S. treasurer. As the amount of postal savings deposits at the bank increases the bank has to buy additional bonds. The bank pays the government 2½ per cent interest on the deposits at the bank, and the government pays 2 per cent interest to its patrons at the post office.

The only advantage in having a postal savings account and drawing 2 per cent interest on it is that the depositor has the U. S. government back of him as security. The banks pay 5 per cent interest on time deposits and, in the estimation of the majority of the people, offer all the security that is necessary. One of the main benefits that will accrue from the postal savings system is that it will induce a great many people to take their money out of their mattresses, tea pots and stockings and start a savings account.

FLAX-FIBRE FACTORY

The Commercial Club is negotiating with the American Linen Fibre Company, of Philadelphia, with the view of securing a flax-fibre mill for Thief River Falls.

This community has unexcelled advantages to offer such an industry on account of its railroad facilities, its water supply and its abundant supply of raw materials. The economic value of a factory of this nature to the farmers and to the city will be great, as it will create a market for flax straw, which is now waste, and will employ men and bring considerable capital here.

NEW BOILER

A new boiler is being installed in the heating plant located under the Dobner-Meehan block. Everything will be ready for furnishing heat by the time the weather cools off. The occupants of the rooms and offices in that block are assured of a warm time this winter, no matter what the condition of the [illegible]

WANT TO OPEN NEW ROAD

Good Road Into The City From The North Is Needed

Last Saturday there was held on Jorgen Odsero's farm a meeting for hearing reasons why there should be, or should not be, a mile of road opened up, running north of this city and joining the north and south state road coming down thru Marshall County. The majority of those present were very much in favor of opening up a road. However, at a meeting of the supervisors in this city on Monday the proposition was turned down, presumably because of the necessary expense. The people will take up the matter again in a different way.

The projected road, a mile long, will run directly north of the city across the E. C. Eshlby farm (formerly the Knox farm), over Thief River and across Jorgen Adsero's farm, there meeting the east and west road and coming dircetly in line with the north and south road. It doesn't take a great deal of thinking ability to figure out that such a road would be of immense value both to the citizens of Thief River Falls and to the community north of here. The county north of this city is being well-developed and there is a vast amount of business that should come from there now. The people in Marshall county are busy on their part of the road and will soon have a modern, steel bridge across Thief River, at an expense of a little over $2,500.

Mr. E. S. Eshelby, owner of the Knox farm, is perfectly willing to give a free right-of-way across his place. The only other farm that the road will cut thru is Jorgen Adsero's. The road would be worth more to him than it would cost him on account of the present unhandy way he has of getting to town, so he, too, ought to ask no remuneration.

CONCERNING SMALL MEADOW AND BOG FIRES.

Since the appropriation for forest fire prevention in the State of Minnesota is very limited most of it is being spent in maintaining as effective a patrol system as may be in the regions where serious fires are most likely. It is the idea of the Forest Service that most of these fires in meadows and bogs should be taken care of by the local people, without calling upon the State for aid. It is against the law for any man to leave a fire unattended even on his own property; so that it is but fair when a fire is found burning in a meadow or bog to call upon the owner of the land to put out it out. Any land owner ought to be willing to go to the expense of extinguishing a fire, since in dry weather it might easily start running and escape to adjoining lands and do damage for which he would be liable.

With the limited force of patrolmen and rangers, the Service is doing all it can to prevent fires, the idea being to concentrate help on the more serious ones, and to call upon the owner of the land to extinguish the smaller, smouldering fires. Under the law it is the duty of the Township Officers to see that every one uses proper care in the matter of fires. A person permitting a fire of burn unattended on his own land is guilty of a misdemeanor, and should consider himself lucky to get off with the cost of putting out the fire without being taken into Court.

If it is found necessary for the Township can levy a tax not exceeding five mills on all property to form a fund for fighting fires.

TAFT INVITED

The Commercial Club has extended an invitation to President Taft to visit Thief River Falls on his western trip.

GETTING THE EARLY BIRDS

Game Warden Munch Gets Busy And Nabs Two Local Sooners.

Last Saturday Game Warden Munch arrested Arthur Williams and Mike Johnson, of this city, on the charge of hunting prairie chickens July 25th. The men were taken before Judge Bishop, where they plead guilty, and were fined each $10.00 and costs.

Several prominent men of Middle River were arrested last Saturday for hunting out of season. The arrests were made by a newly appointed game warden, a man whom the hunters were not watching for. The pre-season nimrods were let off with a fine of $13.50 each and a confiscation of several guns.

It is rumored that if there are any other "sooners" in Thief River Falls they will travel the same route as did Williams and Johnson. Game Warden Cook has moved to this city. Cook is known to be a man who believes in a strict observance of the law, and he is healthier and livelier today than ever before. Any man, who is not sportsman enough to respect the law in regard to the hunting season, ought to be denied the privelege of hunting at all. It ought to be left to the farmers to make the chickens wild enough before season, so that the "dead shots" cannot slaughter them when the season opens. This year the hunting season opens Sept. 7th.

Hunting With Dogs.

Hunters are allowed to take their dogs out on the fields and train them on live birds from August 15th to Sept 1st. However, neither the owner of the dog nor any of his companions are permitted to carry firearms of any kind. If they do carry guns, then both the dogs and the guns can be taken away from them.

Pickets 10 Tigers 4.

That long mooted question of which is the better ball team, the Picketts or the Tigers, was finally settled at the fair grounds last Sunday afternoon. After the smoke of the battle had cleared away, and the dead and wounded Tigers had been taken care of, it was announced that the score stood 10 to 4 in favor of the Picketts. This is the third successive victory that the Picketts have won over their feline—named opponents.

Price and Lee acted as battery for the Picketts, and Karwand and Severson for the Tigers. Price had the enemy at his mercy during all stages of the game. His speed was a puzzler. The Tiger batsmen churned the atmosphere to a pulp, but they could not connect. Karwand was working fine and it wasn't his fault if he didn't hit the bat every time. He seemed to be able to guess just exactly the kind of ball the batter wanted. Even at that, if his support hadn't been taking a day off in dreamland the score would have been closer.

The distinctive features of the game were Wickum's batting and Ray Herron's fielding. Wickum hit the pill right on the nose every time he came to bat, sending it out altogether too fast for amateurs to handle.

Ballon Ascension.

Saturday evening the Carnival Company came across with one of the finest balloon ascensions ever witnessed anywhere. The balloon was located between the Zion church and the garage. The only way the balloonist could get out was by a straight-up flight. This feat he accomplished very nicely, rising to a height of about 2000 feet and slowly floating southward. The parachute worked promptly and let the aeronant down easily, just beyond the mill [illegible]

WILL HAVE GRAIN INSPECTOR

Local Grain Buyers Will Know Grade Test Of Grain Before Shipping.

On the west side of the Soo tracks, near the Round House, there is being built a grain inspector's office. It will soon be occupied by a state grain inspector. Heretofore all the grain shipped out of here had to go to the cities and be inspected before its grade was determined. Under the present conditions the grain will be tested here and its grade determined before leaving. That will enable the local shippers to determine the value of a car of wheat without the delay formerly necessitated by its having to be inspected in the cities. The outlook at present is that the inspector will have plenty to do. An inspector is usually paid a certain amount per day and in addition to that gets $1.50 for each car he inspects. If the two sources of income combined run over a stated amount, the state gets the surplus; if they run under that amount, the state makes up the deficit. Considering the fact that the state does not send out an inspector merely for the benefit of his health, it looks as tho Thief River Falls is one of the most important grain centers in the state.

Makes One Good Flight.

McGoy, the aviator from Grand Forks, who was engaged to make six flights here during the fair, made good on the last day. On Wednesday the weather conditions were unfavorable and the engines were balking some, so only two small straight-away flights were made. On Thursday weather conditions were entirely too unfavorable, except in the forenoon. On Friday, with his engines working well, McGoy expected to make up for lost time by giving several flights, but again the weather interfered and no flights were attempted until late in the afternoon. About 3:30 p. m., McGoy mounted his bird and road into the face of a strong west wind. He made a half circle of several miles, but was unable to complete it on account of the high breezes. After supper he flew from his lighting place west of town and made as pretty a flight as one could ask to see. He flew northwestward for several miles and then circled back to within about a mile of the fair grounds. Before lighting he made three circles, swooping around something like a great bird before it darts down after its prey. McGoy's machine is rather light and perhaps cannot stand the bad weather that some other makes can, but there is no questoin but that he can fly with any of them in nice weather. It is very unfortunate that the best flight was given so late in the evening, because many people had gotten the idea that McGoy either could not or would not fly. Blame the weather man.

Died Yesterday.

Ten-year-old Alice Stenberg, daughter of A. A. Stenberg residing on the East Side, died of consumption at three o'clock Thursday, Aug. 10th.

A year ago last spring she suffered with measles and from this attack she never fully recovered. She was affected successively with derangement of the digestive organs, lung fever, and, finally, consumption, each time adding the new complication to what she already had, finally making the burden more than her young frame could endure.

The family are highly respectable people and have the fullest sympathy of all who know and understand them.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed at this writing.

TWO NEW ELEVATORS

Thief River Will Have 5 Elevators Represented By Four Different Companies.

Thief River Falls is becoming one of the great grain centers of the Great Northwest. Many thousand more bushels of grain will come in this fall than ever before, and big preparations are being made to receive this supply. There are now, or soon will be, five large grain elevators operated by four different companies. Hansen and Barzen have one on the Soo and another on the Great Northern The Red Lake Falls Milling Co., has one on the Great Northern, while the latest additions, those of Tessum and Temanson and The Thief River Falls Farmers Exchange Elevator Co., are located along the Soo tracks

The Hansen and Barzen and the Red Lake Falls Milling Companies have been doing business here for a long time, and the men in charge and their methods of doing business are well known to farmers and business men thruout the state. It is quite likely that the fair and square deal which they have always given their patrons will retain for them a large percentage of their former trade

The increased acreage planted the last two years, however, necessitates more elevator room to insure prompt handling of the grain marketed here.

The New Elevators.

After visiting the new elevators and asking questions about construction, conveniences and business methods it is hard to say whether this is going to be the better one or that the better one. Certain it is that both elevators will be thoroughly up-to-date. To go into details about them would no doubt only lead to an invidious comparison, so it is left to the farmers and business men to make their own personal investigations. Both firms will do considerable advertising as a means of letting the people know all about their respective businesses.

Mr. Tessum has been engaged in the flour and feed business here for several years and needs no introduction to the majority of the people. His partner, Mr. Temanson, is an experienced grain man and has made good in the grain buying business. They will be ready to buy grain the first of next week. Aside from the usual grains they intend to buy clover and timothy seed.

The Thief River Falls Farmers Exchange Elevator Co., is the newest addition. They are keeping busy a dozen or more men and expect to be doing business by the last of the present month. There are now over one hundred farmers who have stock in the business, and there is no question but that they will hustle to make the institution a paying proposition from the start. Mr. H. A. Halvorson, of Winger, Minn., has been engaged as general manager. He has had lots of experience and knows the grain business from A to Z. Chas. O. Evenson is president, T. R. Rinestad is vice president, Emil Johnson is secretary and Oscar Sponheim is treasurer. All of the above gentlemen are known to be hustling business men of unimpeachable integrity.

ENGINE JUMPS TRACK

A coal engine and caboose, returning from Portal on the Wheat Line, jumped the tracks last Friday night while running on a rough piece of rails several miles this side of Adams. No lives were lost and very little damage was done to the engine. The disaster was due to the fact that the engine was running too fast for such a light load and rough track. The accident held up passenger traffic for several hours. The morning passenger going west did not leave until Saturday night, and the one coming from the west did not arrive until Sunday night. People who were planning on going west Saturday morning either left by auto or on the Great Northern in the afternoon.

Local Events of The Week

John Aasen and J. Remmem were business visitors at Strip Monday.

Miss Katherine Spellman left Tuesday afternoon for Red Lake Falls.

Mrs. E. B. Backe went to Fosston last Saturday for a visit with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Wilhelm Michelet received the sad news of the death of her mother last Friday.

Judge Gossman of the Municipal Court of Crookston spent Wednesday in the city on legal business.

Mrs. H. E. Ives and daughter Nellie, went to Red Lake Falls Monday for a few days visit.

Miss Pearl Grey of Red Lake Falls spent Friday in the city enroute to Winnipeg where she will visit friends

Mr. Orban Eberhardt of Battle River spent last week here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Eberhardt.

Miss Lottie Elg came up from Crookston Friday and has accepted a position in the Citizens State bank here.

W. J. Allen, real estate man of Lawrens, Iowa, was one of the outside visitors at our county fair last week.

Andrew Trovaton went to Crookston Tuesday afternoon to appear as a witness in the Peter Olson contest case.

Miss Inga Hamre of Red Lake Falls spent Monday and Tuesday visiting with her sister, Miss Effie Hamre.

Mrs. Fred Holzknecht left Monday afternoon for Montana where she will visit with her brother for a couple of months.

Fred Lindquist and his sister Clara, went to Minot last Friday where they will take up [illegible] lands adjoining their sister, Ida's.

H. J. Enderle, J. Hogan, J. Pahlen and W. Morrissette were among the Plummerites who were up to take in the county fair.

Peter Olson, accompanied by Halvor Listol, went to Crookston Tuesday to be present at a hearing in a contest case on his claim northwest of town.

Prof. J. H. Hay returned Saturday from a week's trout fishing in Northern Wisconsin. Previous to this Prof. Hay spent six weeks at Willmar where he conducted a teacher's training school.

Captain Eberhardt and son, E. J. left Tuesday for Red Lake, where they will spend about a month checking up the dead heads that were pulled out to dry last year.

In the quilt contest recently given by the Synod congregation it was discovered that a quart of beans contained 2690 beans. The closest guess was that of Rev. I. T. Aastad, being 2685; while Miss Lillian Thompson was a close second with a guess of 2786, or 96 too many.

The farmers seem to be very much disagreed as to whether or not black rust is going to injure this fall's crops or not. It seems certain that the early grain will come out in good shape but the later may be touched more or less by the pest.

Mrs. A. Huseth spent Sunday at Red Lake Falls with her sister.

Miss Emma Hoff spent Sunday as the guest of friends at St. Hilaire.

Tom Skjerping went to Crookston Tuesday as a witness in the Peter Skjerping contest case.

W. P. Teasie Jr. representing the Winona Carriage Company, made his introductory trip thru this territory last week.

Stafford Curran arrived in the city Monday evening from Duluth where he has recently undergone an operation.

Miss Irma Schroeder departed for her home at Red Lake Falls Monday after a week's visit at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Kretzschmar.

Miss Marie Cardinx returned to her home at Red Lake Falls Monday after a very pleasant visit at the home of Miss Ida Ove.

Oscar Hicks, chief of the Soo Secret Service department was in the city on business connected with his department the first of the week.

Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Wood of Minneapolis who is Mrs. Baker's guest, and the Misses Lavida Hilson and Ollie Olson went up to Holt last Saturday to pick berries.

Mrs. D. Shaw, and niece, Margaret and Miss Sarah Vaughan departed Monday afternoon for Kalispell, Montana where they will visit for some time with Mrs. C. L. Dobner.

D. B. Backe and family moved into their new home on the west side in Porter's addition last week. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sponheim are now living in the former Backe home on the East side.

STRIP NEWS

* * * * * * * * * *

The village of Strip is now growing rapidly—five buildings are under construction at this time. Hanson & Barzen Milling Co., of Thief River Falls is putting up a good sized Elevator, flour and feed Warehouse, coal shed, engine house and, finally a lumber yard. Just watch us grow!

On August 1st John Remmem in company with Hanson and Barzen went out in one of A Sundahl's autos and put thru a deal whereby the milling company acquired an acre and a half of land from Sven Haugen to be used for lumber yard purposes. It is south of Strip Siding.

Mr. Gerdie from Roseau started last week on the foundation of the new elevator and Mr. Brude and son from Thief River Falls came up Tuesday morning with a number of men, and more will be coming next week, to hustle up the work on the Hanson & Barzen buildings.

Alfred Gordon and family of T. R. Falls moved up on their new farm Tuesday recently bought of Erick Blomberg.

John Remmem came up from Thief River Falls last Monday morning to fix up his house for the Hanson & Barzen crew, as they are now rooming there and boarding at Carlson & Sagmoen's.

Oscar Johnson and Mrs. Dahl Jr. came up from Thief River Falls Tuesday to take home the haying machinery and some hay from John Remmem's farm, where they have been busy the past weeks putting up hay.

Mrs. Hulda Norvick and her two sons from Seattle, Wash., are home for a visit with her folks, John Carlson's near Strip.

Two of the Krokstad boys left for the Hatton harvest fields last Tuesday morning.

TOGO

Admiral Togo, commander of the Japanese naval forces in the campaign that annihilated the Russian fleet in one of the greatest sea flights of history, just landed in our shores It may be safely predicted that little after-dinner speaking will be secured from this great commander.

When Togo got off his sick bed to respond to his country's call, he remarked characteristically, "I shall be well when I get on the bridge."

When the minister of war said to him in a historic interview, "I have the honor to announce that it is the august pleasure of his majesty the emperor to confer on you the honor of the command of the united fleets of Nippon", he expected a response of some elaboration.

But Togo just said: "I shall execute your order." Then the two dignitaries sat around like akward and blushing school boys for a few moments, saying nothing, until Togo clumsily bowed himself out in silence.

It was feared that he was not in harmony with the ideas of the government. But his true attitude of mind came out later when he gathered his officers in a final banquet. On the table before them was a dagger, a sacred sign in Japanese symbolism. Said Togo, "We have just bade farewell to our wives and children in a pleasant feast—and to life." Under that impassive and taciturn exterior was all the resolution and defiance of death of the mystic Oriental temperament.

In spite of all this reticence, Togo is called a great master of human nature. It is a current proverb that he controls his subordinates like the fingers of a hand. He preserves his nerve in perfect poise under the most critical strain, and abhors defeat as nature abhors a vacuum.

Togo was one of the yong Japanese who studied abroad, and received his naval education on the English training ship Worchester. There he seemed like any of the common-place nice fellows that abound in British naval life.

His true force of character came out the day in 1894 when he fired on Chinese transports carrying soldiers to Korea under the British flag, precipitating the Chino-Japanese war. He felt that in a few moments the fate of his country had to be decided by him, and he was ready to answer with his life if a mistake were made. Our garrulous American temperament has much to learn from this silent man of steel.

ATTACK LIKE TIGERS

In fighting to keep the blood pure the white corpuscles attack disease germs like tigers. But often germs multiply so fast the little fighters are overcome. Then see pimples, boils, eczema, saltrheum and sores multiply and strength and appetite fail. This condition demands Electric Bitters to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys, and to expel poisons from the blood. "They are the best blood purifier," writes C. T. LOVE FOR PASTIME

By RUTH GRAHAM

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Whether in the main we are retrograding or improving, there is one matter in which men have been steadily growing better. That is in their treatment of women. Half a century ago among young men of the world there was not the high sense of honor in the treatment of women there is now.

In the days of palatial steamboats, as they were called, on the Mississippi Roland Storms, traveling between St. Louis and New Orleans, met on the boat Adele Southwood, a young girl seventeen years old. Storms, who was ten years Miss Southwood's senior, had considered making a "conquest" now and then one of those accomplishments that was to be expected of a young swell of the period. To him love was a game in which all was fair. If beaten at it he would have considered that nothing remained for him but to take the consequences. If he beat the girl it was her part to grin and bear it.

Miss Southwood was not only ignorant of such warfare, but was a girl of deep feeling. She and Storms would sit on the guards during the day looking out upon the ever changing panorama, now passing under some high bluff, now sailing above the surrounding lowlands on a river built up by the levees. In the evening they would go up on to the hurricane deck, watching the lights on the shore go by and, when the boat stopped to "wood up," looking down on the line of deck hands in the glare of pitch pine knots transferring a wood pile to the boat for fuel.

All this was new to Miss Southwood, and what was not only new but much more fascinating to an impressible girl was having a young man in constant attendance, saying pleasant things to her one moment, talking seriously the next and finally laughing at her for being so matter of fact. In this way he kept her in a puzzled state as to whether a mature man was really falling in love with her, a chit of a girl, or whether he considered her merely a child. Storms before reaching the Crescent City talked love to her—such love as pertains to the emotions without any prosaic references to marriage. But she was too unsophisticated to consider this. To her it was spontaneous love, something she had never experienced before and the more serious features of which were still a blank to her.

At New Orleans the two parted, Miss Southwood to remain there for the winter, which was coming on, Mr. Storms going by the gulf of Mexico to Texas. The young girl considered that the event of her life had occurred, the young man that a pleasant episode had occurred to relieve the tedium of steamboat travel. This is what he considered it at the time. He did not know that a seed had been planted in his heart which was not destined to germinate for a long while. He knew that this case was in some respects different from his many other affairs, but he did not consider it any more serious.

It was four years before he met Miss Southwood again. He was walking on the principal street of Cincinnati, swinging a cane, a "beaver" on his head, a velvet collar on his frock coat, a profusion of cravat on his bosom, his tight trousers strapped down over his instep, in short, dressed for a swell of the period, when he met, incased in a diminutive bonnet of pink silk, one of the sweetest faces he had ever beheld. It belonged to a lady about twenty-one years old, and she was looking at him intently. In an instant he recognized the girl he had flirted with on the Mississippi and jilted at New Orleans.

Naturally he was embarrassed. There was no expression in Miss Southwood's face sufficiently defined for him to tell how she felt toward him. He stopped to speak to her, standing uncovered, and asked if he might walk with her. Receiving permission, he joined her, stammering things to her which she, on her part, received with composure. She had been through the agony of getting over a first love and a first jilt, and he could see no traces of suffering, of reproach or of forgiveness. All seemed to be neutralized or, rather, fused into an absolute nothingness.

Storms walked with her some ten minutes, at first trying to regain his equipoise, then to discover some indication of the young lady's feelings toward him. In the latter he failed. But since there was no indication of unfriendliness he made bold to hint that he would like to renew the acquaintance. Before parting Miss Southwood invited him to come to see her the next afternoon at 2 o'clock. He accepted, and they parted.

At the appointed hour Storms, having summoned up all his will power courage, adroitness to win again and win to keep what he had won and thrown away, went to call on Miss Southwood. He found a number of guests present, and a few minutes after his entrance the lady stood up to be married.

This was Roland Storms' last affair of the heart. He never took any interest in another, for he never recovered from this one. He died a bachelor and an old man.

Since that day, while youth is the same and affairs of the heart are the same, what would have then been considered a feather in a fashionable young man's cap is now held to be dishonorable.

A Shave In China.

The Rev. Louis Byrde, a missionary, gives an interesting account in a London paper of a shave in China. He writes: "The greatest treat which I only give on special occasions is a midday shave in public. In the early morning a Chinese inn is terribly dark, and at night bed soon claims one. I select a table at the street front (the whole front is formed of movable doors, which are entirely taken away during the day) and, provided with the necessaries, commence operations. Fifty or sixty people stand round in ranks, the innermost circles consisting of children and the outer rings of men and mothers with their babes. Not a word is uttered: all eyes are fixed first on the shaving brush as the soap is lathered on the face, and then on the razor as the stubble falls. The Chinese never shave themselves, and possibly to see a man handling a razor on himself may suggest that he is about to commit harakiri in their village."

Bucked the Tiger.

The forest land of southern India possesses a breed of buffaloes vastly superior to the ungainly creatures of the plains. They are shaggy haired and massive, with thick, short horns, and possess immense strength. A herd of these buffaloes was grazing when a tiger came out of the forest near by. The herdsman shouted, beat his staff on the ground and tried to scare away the brute, but it would not be scared and sprang upon him, knocked him down and stood over him snarling. He gave himself up for lost when the bull of the herd charged savagely upon the tiger and knocked him fully twenty feet. The attack was so sudden and the shock so great that it took all the fight out of the tiger. He gathered himself up in a dazed way and actually slunk off into the forest. The bull shook himself, bellowed, pursued his enemy a few yards and then went quietly to feeding as if vanquishing a tiger were an everyday occurrence.

The Seismograph.

The seismograph is a most interesting instrument. It is kept in a subbasement room, far from disturbing influences. There it records upon a strip of paper such earthquakes as may happen anywhere. The scientists then study the strip of paper and herald to the world the news that the tremor which shook down several cities was duly registered.

The seismograph is a remarkable contrivance, though in just what way is not yet determined. However, in the interests of science, it is as valuable as would be the imprint of the hoof upon the seat of the trousers of a man who had been kicked by a mule. After the event he could study the imprint and assure himself that he had been kicked.—Life.

Cuts and bruises may be healed in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. It is an antiseptic and causes such injuries to heal without maturation. This liniment also relieves soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains. For sale by all druggists.

Salve Lura, of Thief River Falls, Minn.

Hans J. Skalgaard, of Thief River Falls, Minn.

Randolf Lura, of Thief River Falls, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

THIRTY YEARS TOGETHER.

Thirty years of esociation-think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs. Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Princes at School.

Dr. Marks tells some amusing stories of the early days of the school in Burma of which he was for so many years the head. Shortly after the school was opened King Thebaw said. "Will you teach some of my sons?" "Certainly," said Dr. Marks. "What ages do you like them at?" Dr. Marks replied. "From twelve to fourteen." The king said. "Bring all my sons between twelve and fourteen to me." Nine princes came in. Four came to school the next day. each riding on an elephant and with two gold umbrellas. Each also was escorted by forty soldiers. Afterward the whole nine came, so there were nine princes, nine elephants, eighteen gold umbrellas and 360 soldiers. The elephants stayed outside, but when the princes came into the schoolroom all the other boys threw themselves flat down on their faces on the ground. It was forbidden for any one to stand or sit in the presence of princes. Dr. Marks found this state of things very inconvenient, and the royal etiquette at school was at his request considerably abated.—London Globe.

The Old Man Reformed.

"I've a sight o' sons—thirteen altogether," remarked a prosperous old farmer, "and all of 'em's done me credit save the three eldest, who sowed wild oats at a pretty rapid rate and then came home and saddled my shoulders with the harvest.

"Well, I own I was glad to see 'em back, and I feasted 'em and petted 'em and set 'em on their legs again, only to see 'em skedaddle off afresh when things had slowed down with all the cash they could lay hands on.

"That thereabouts sickened me, so I called the rest of 'em together and said:

"'There's ten of you left, and if any of you 'ud like to follow t'other three I won't try to stop you. But understand this, though there may be a few more prodigal sons there'll be no more fatted calves. I've killed the last of 'em.'

"And," continued the old man triumphantly, "I've had trouble wi' none of 'em since."

A Hasty Government.

"The postmaster here was removed the other day for incivility to the patrons of the office," said the landlord of the tavern. "You see, Lafe Strodder asked for his mail and none could be found, but the postmaster said he believed there had been a postcard; but what had become of it he'd be blamed if he knew. Lafe is a good deal of a crank and that didn't satisfy him, and they had some words, and the postmaster took a shot at Lafe that tore off half of one of his ears.

"Still, as the postmaster was able to remember just about what had been written on the postal card and told it to Lafe and then didn't shoot off enough of his ear to really affect the hearing it strikes me that the gov'ment was pretty considerable stringent, as you might say, about the matter."—Puck.

A DIPLOMATIC MISSION

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Count," said the minister of foreign affairs to a young diplomat who had entered his service, "I wish you to get ready to leave Berlin tonight. Changes have occurred in China affecting the German, French and English interests there. If we reach England before the French cabinet can send an emissary England will act with us, for we can so represent the matter that it will appear to be to her interest to do so. If France is ahead of us England's action will be reversed. Here is a suit case containing all the papers you will need. Go at once to London and, without waiting to make a toilet, thence to the foreign office in Downing street. Endeavor to make the minister commit himself before you leave him."

Count Otto von Holwig left Berlin on the evening train for Ostend, intending to cross the English channel at that point. On the same train was a lady who, on coming to one of the main stops, alighted from her car and, passing along toward the rear, looking in at the open doors, finally entered the compartment occupied by the ambassador. She took a seat and threw her head back on to the cushion with every appearance of suffering.

Besides Von Holwig there were two men and a woman in the compartment, all of whom cast glances toward and appeared to take an interest in the suffering woman. She held her handkerchief to her face so that they could not see what she looked like and now and again emitted a low groan. The other woman in the compartment asked if she could do anything for her, but the invalid without speaking repulsed her by a wave of the hand.

Presently the sufferer started up and exclaimed, "It's all gone!" The men noticed that she was beautiful, and the smile she wore was a winning change from the evidences of agony she had given vent to. "And now," she added, "I must explain to you good people. I am a sufferer from facial neuralgia. When one of the attacks leaves me I need a bracer." She took a gold mounted flask from a bag and several tiny glasses. Filling one of the glasses, she handed it to one of the men, who took it. Then, filling another glass, she handed it to the next man, who tried to beg off. But a certain winning, dominating force that was about her prevailed. The next man she offered a drink was Von Holwig. He declined, and the lady could not persuade him. She then gave a glass to her woman fellow passenger, who after a fruitless effort to put it aside accepted it.

After all who held glasses had emptied them the lady brought out a box of cigarettes, which she likewise passed around. This also the count refused. But the lady gave him a look as if to accuse him of insulting her by this second refusal, and he gave in.

When the train stopped again the lady who had facial neuralgia left the compartment, closing the door behind her. A fat old gentleman opened it to enter and paused. There were three men and a woman asleep. The compartment was full of cigarette smoke to which was attached a strange odor. The old man called the guard and pointed to the sleepers.

"There's been a robbery here," said the guard. "These people have been drugged. Ten to one all their money has been taken." He shook one of the men, who gradually opened his eyes and looked at him dazed. Then another and another was aroused, Von Holwig among the number. He awoke with a start and looked about him for his suit case.

"Lost anything, sir?" asked the guard.

Von Holwig, white as a sheet, did not reply for some time, then answered, "No." He knew that he had been tricked by a woman and did not propose to give away state secrets. He left the car, sat down on a bench and tried to recover from both the effect of the drug he had smoked and the ruin of his career as a diplomat.

On the boat at Ostend on which passengers were gathering to cross the channel to Dover a gentleman stood looking anxiously up the way that led to the steamer. Now and again he would take out his watch impatiently and note the time. But five minutes remained before the boat would start, and the gentleman had given a sigh, indicating that some one he was looking for would not come, when a cab, the driver lashing his horse, came galloping down the street. The gentleman hurried to the dock and handed out a lady, who held in her hand a suit case.

"Good," he said. "You have won, and you shall have your reward. Go to Paris and report that your mission was successful, and there is good reason to believe that upon the foundation you have laid I shall be able to bring England to our views."

The next morning before dawn M. Cavier, representing the French government, drew up before the London residence of the secretary for foreign affairs, called him out of bed and announced that certain affairs in China required his immediate attention. The secretary discussed the matter in a dressing gown, and the French ambassador when he left carried with him the assurance that such orders as he desired would be issued.

Good Scheme.

"How do Jack and Jeanne ever manage to scrape a living?"

"Why, he makes the money first and she makes it last."

Monkey Bread.

African baobabs (also called monkey bread, sour gourd and lalo plant) were computed by Adamson, noted traveler, to have endured for 5,150 years. Natives use the hollowed out trunks of these enormous trees as places of deposit for executed criminals whom the law denies the rights of burial.
